Ohio Beauty New 'Miss America'

Joan Mary Engh of Wisconsin First Runnerup in Contest

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (AP)—Miss Wisconsin, Joan Mary Engh, a 20-year-old hazel eyed brunette from Miss Ohio, was crowned Miss America of 1963 Saturday night.

Jackie as she is called, is a 5-foot-5 Northwestern University sophomore who weighs 115 pounds and measures 36-32-36.

She succeeded Maria Beale Fletcher of Asheville, N.C., to the nation's oldest beauty crown in the dramatic climax of the week-long pageant.

The new queen, an exchange student to Austria for a year, was called on stage and stood plans to complete her education with her near the close of the at Northwestern and then pursue coronation.

Before making the final selection, the judges put one question to each of the five finalists. Jackie was asked, "Other than Miss Fletcher placed the crown on her head. The crowd stood and you most during your past five cheered wildly while she took the days in Atlantic City?"

She replied, "I believe what has impressed me most in the last five days is the friendliness of all the people in Atlantic City. Everyone has been so nice to me and to all the girls—so warmhearted and willing to do whatever we needed them to do."

Five semi-finalists were chosen. They were selected after competing with five other girls who had been chosen semifinalists from among the 54 contestants. Each semifinalist appeared in evening gown and swimsuit and displayed her talent.

The other five semifinalists were Miss Georgia, Katherine Eugenia Cross; Miss Michigan, Carole Jean Van Vallen; Miss Mississippi, Charlotte Ann Carroll; Miss Nebraska, Mary Lee Jensen; and Miss Oregon, Marlene Louise Wyatt.

Earlier Saturday night, there was talk—not among the contestants—of a possible change in the order of the pageant. It was reported that Miss Ohio, who was crowned Miss America of 1963 Saturday night, might be replaced by Miss Georgia, Katherine Eugenia Cross.

CNW Strike Negotiators More Hopeful

Transportation Crisis Growing Throughout Midwest

CHICAGO (AP)—A federal mediator described as "a bit more hopeful" Saturday the settlement prospects of the 10-day-old strike by telegraphers on the Chicago and North Western Railway.

After a talk with union leaders, Francis A. O'Neill Jr. said, "I wouldn't say a break was imminent, but certain angles were discussed today that make it a little bit more hopeful." He declined to say what the angles were.

O'Neill shuttled between two talks with negotiators for the Order of Railroad Telegraphers, whose 1,000 members—mostly station agents—struck the North Western Aug. 30, and one conference with railroad management. Some 15,500 other employees are affected by the strike.

Day Off
O'Neill said he would talk again Sunday with union leaders. Earlier, he had planned a day-off from the meetings. No joint meetings are planned, he said.

George Leighty, president of the telegraphers union, said, "We're anxious to settle this dispute. I think we're more anxious than the carrier. But we can't enter an agreement we'd be ashamed of." The North Western's chairman, Ben W. Heineman, said, "I don't see how anyone could be ashamed of the very liberal settlement terms of the Presidential Emergency Board." As to Leighty's statement that the union is anxious to end the strike, Heineman commented: "If that's true it hasn't been apparent."

Growing Crisis
Meanwhile, the strike has caused a growing transportation crisis. Throughout the nine Midwestern states served by the line, the nation's third longest railroad, and other foodstuffs are piling up, and numerous construction projects have slowed or halted.

Parents Present
As the new queen turned to the stage at the end of the runway, the first tears rolled down her cheeks.

Her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Jack Mayer of Sandusky, and her sister, Beth, were called on stage and stood plans to complete her education with her near the close of the at Northwestern and then pursue coronation.

Before making the final selection, the judges put one question to each of the five finalists. Jackie was asked, "Other than Miss Fletcher placed the crown on her head. The crowd stood and you most during your past five cheered wildly while she took the days in Atlantic City?"

Western Powers Plan Steps in Berlin Crisis

Farm Issue Important in Fall Election

WASHINGTON (AP)—The Kennedy administration is moving to seize the farm issue offensive in the coming congressional elections.

Usually the party in power finds itself in a position where it must defend its record against opposition charges.

But the way things have been going, there is a possibility that the Republicans, if they are not watchful, may find themselves on the defensive.

Secretary of Agriculture Orville L. Freeman, a veteran political campaigner, has indicated the line the Democrats will take in their efforts to strengthen their hold on Congress this November.

Called Contest
He has pictured the farm issue as being a contest between the administration's supply management and control program and one proposed in August by the businessmen's Committee for Economic Development to take government completely out of agriculture in five years.

Freeman has implied that if a congressman is not for the administration plan, he must be for the CED program. Republican opposition to the Kennedy control program has been strong. Because of this, Freeman is attempting to tie the CED plan to his GOP critics and make that plan—and not the administration's farm program—record—the big farm issue.

Some Republicans want to make the Kennedy controls the issue, contending that farmers do not want the government telling them what to do and how to do it. But not many Republicans have yet drawn, for the farmer-voter, the difference between their own opposition to controls and the broad CED program.

Quick Approval For Call Up Seen

WASHINGTON (AP)—Sen. Hubert H. Humphrey, D-Minn., expects Congress to approve rather quickly President Kennedy's request for standby authority to call up 150,000 Reservists to counter Communist threats in Cuba, Berlin or elsewhere.

"I think it should be clearly understood that the President has no immediate intention for use of this authority," Humphrey, assistant Senate Democratic leader, said Saturday in an interview.

'Magnanimous, Unafraid Ruffian'

'We Went at It,' Robert Frost Says After Talk With Khrushchev

BY REINHOLD G. ENSE
MOSCOW (AP)—American poet Robert Frost characterized Soviet Premier Khrushchev Saturday as the kind of ruffian who is not afraid of a fight or of being magnanimous.

Frost, 80, flew down to Gagarin on the Black Sea at Khrushchev's behest Friday and had a talk of an hour or more with the Soviet leader. Frost wasn't feeling so well—because of a stomach upset—when he arrived at the resort, so it was Khrushchev who went to see the poet at the government house where he was staying.

Rambled Interview
Frost sat on the edge of his bed, "and we went at it," he told a news conference Saturday. The interview, judging by

Endorsement at Stake

Renk Primary Success Could Shake GOP Party Practices

Post-Crescent Staff Writer

MADISON — The Republican party's traditional way of doing business is among the background issues at stake in the Tuesday gubernatorial primary elections.

If the voters who mark the Republican ballot for governor in the primary election upset the Republican organization's endorsement of Phillip Kuehn of Whitefish Bay by showing a preference for Wilbur Renk of Sun Prairie, there are likely to be severe repercussions in traditional party methods and policies.

Renk has blasted the endorsement practice of the Republican voluntary organization through its biennial delegate conventions.

If he becomes the party nominee and wins the governorship in November, he could hardly do less than to work for the abolition of the endorsement rule for future elections. As governor, moreover, he would have a powerful pulpit from which to preach, and rights and privileges as head of the state government that would probably make his word persuasive in the party organization.

Renk as the party nominee, meanwhile, also would have a probable dominant voice in the form of the party and to the extent that he could influence its outlook there and the development of party machine leadership he would be a force to be reckoned with in Wisconsin preparations for the 1964 Republican presidential nomination.

Likes Rockefeller
The Sun Prairie farmer early declared his interest in the presidential candidacy of Gov. Nelson Rockefeller of New York, as the more liberal of the prospectively available candidates for the 1964 nomination.

Kuehn, former chairman of the party organization, has espoused more conservative causes and candidates during his political career. He was a champion of the late Sen. Robert A. Taft for the 1952 presidential nomination. He backed Vice President Richard Nixon in 1960.

Whether the current leadership roster of the party organization would be affected by the Kuehn or Renk nominations also has been subject of some speculation.

Possible Red Pressures Countered

WASHINGTON (AP)—The United States is consulting with Britain, France and West Germany on joint steps to counter expected new Communist pressure in the Berlin dispute.

The consultations are reported to cover both possible Soviet or East German threats to Allied supply line operations and developments which may take place within Berlin itself.

Concern in the U.S. government over the Berlin situation is said by high administration officials to be the primary reason President Kennedy asked Congress on Friday for authority to call a maximum of 150,000 military Reservists to active duty in the armed forces if necessary.

Cuban Situation
To what extent administration concern over the Cuban situation may have entered into the decision to ask for the call-up authority is speculative.

Allied consultations on Berlin are presently centered in Bonn but are also taking place among representatives of the four Western powers in Washington and among the U.S., British and French commandants in West Berlin.

One Allied action expected to be taken within the next week or so is a request to the Soviet military command to stop using ar-

Army Troops Enter Algiers Unopposed

Civilians Cheer Battalions Wildly; Acting Government of Ben Bella Gains More Power

ALGIER (AP)—Several thousand troops of the regular army commanded by Col. Houari Boumedienne entered the Algiers area Saturday without firing a shot. Civilians cheered them wildly.

Boumedienne himself headed the smartly uniformed battalions. Their arrival tipped the balance of forces irreversibly against rebel guerrilla officers who had sought to use their control of the capital to impose their will on the whole nation.

More Power

The acting government of Ahmed Ben Bella's Political Bureau was placed in a more powerful position than ever. Backed by the army, it could be challenged now only by the army itself.

The guerrillas' Wilaya 4 command fled from its headquarters on the heights overlooking Algiers and returned to the Blida area, 30 miles southwest of the city, from which it directed a seven-year underground war against the French.

The guerrilla commanders, headed by Col. St. Hassan, apparently were surprised by the size of the regular army force they saw moving into the city's outskirts.

Brief War

They had agreed to entry of a token detachment following the cease-fire which ended the brief civil war. A guerrilla spokesman said they had believed this would be no more than a few dozen men.

With the Wilaya's command post dismantled, there was no one to transmit or receive signals from outlying posts, nor could anyone have issued orders to the guerrillas to resist the much larger force.

A Political Bureau spokesman said the troops were brought in because a nation's capital must be controlled by its national army.

But he added that, in accordance with the cease-fire agreement, the regular forces would camp on the outskirts and not enter downtown Algiers for the moment.

Guantanamo No Haven for Cuban Exiles

CHICAGO Daily News Service

GUANTANAMO BAY, Cuba — Anti-Castro Cubans are thinking twice before jumping the fence into the U.S.-operated naval base here.

They know they must brave the fire of Fidel Castro's guards. And they are aware that once they reach the inside they are stuck here without a chance of going to the exile mecca in Miami, for U.S. authorities prohibit them from ever leaving the base.

Currently, some 500 exiles who fled across the Cactus Curtain to Guantanamo are "prisoners of liberty."

World War Barrack

Predominantly young men, they live in World War II-style barracks. They are separated from the families they left behind and they must work at Cuban wages, about half the scale for U.S. workers.

"This isn't the type of freedom we expected," declared a disillusioned refugee.

Yet he knows his life will be in peril if he goes back.

For many, life on the base—even with its bleak confinement—is preferable to Castroism.

U.S. officials recognize that the base is only so big (45 square miles of which one-third is water) and can hold only so many refugees. Otherwise, it might become one vast concentration camp.

No Encouragement

Hence, no attempt is made to encourage Cubans to break into the base.

"They know that once they get here they can't get out. This discourages them from trying to come in," a Navy officer said.

Only one or two exiles per week crash across the perimeter, as contrasted to the 200 who fly into Miami daily from Havana.

The most successful avenue of escape here is to swim from the Cuban side of Guantanamo Bay to U.S. held territory.

Once here, the exiles are put through a security check, provided with clothing and assigned a bunk in the barracks. All who are able must work, but they have little use for the money they earn.

U.S. intelligence officers are constantly weeding out Castro-planted spies from among the 500 permanent refugees and the 3,000 Cuban nationals who work on the base but live outside.

At least 50 have been ordered off the base under suspicion of being Castro agents.

Shepard Flies Simulated 'Moon Flight'

BALTIMORE, Md. (AP) — Astronaut Alan B. Shepard Jr., was reported to have been one of four men who took part in a weeklong simulated flight to the moon and back.

The National Aeronautics and Space Administration said Cmdr. Shepard was an official member of the crew but did not fly Mariner Co's Apollo-type capsule.

Baluba Leader Escapes Jail In Leopoldville

Skullduggery by Officials Blamed, Reports Claim

LEOPOLDVILLE, the Congo (AP)—Albert Kalonji, emperor of Baluba tribesmen and one of the Congo's unsuccessful secessionists, has escaped jail, apparently as the result of official skullduggery, qualified sources reported Saturday.

The informant said he was taken from prison at Luzumu, 50 miles outside Leopoldville, for a pretended court appearance, and flown to Bakawanga, capital of the secessionist South Kasai mining state which he attempted to set up as an independent country two years ago.

Kalonji, 33, was said to have been handed forged documents requesting his appearance in court and to have been escorted out of prison by two men, one of them believed to be a Baluba tribesman holding an official position in the Congo government.

Air Official Held

Congolese authorities arrested the Belgian director of Air Brusse, a charter airline, which flew him to Bakawanga. But the Belgian Embassy intervened on behalf of the company, claiming the director was not aware of the passenger's identity and that the plane had been properly requisitioned by official documents.

The escape of the colorful tribal leader may stir up excitement among Baluba tribesmen, but may not prove a serious threat to the Congo government.

The secessionist movement appears to be on the wane now that the most successful secessionist leader, President Moise Tshombe of Katanga, is showing signs of yielding to pressure to reunite with the main body of the Congo.

The official who recalled the passage in the book didn't intend to scoff at the reports of Soviet shipments of personnel and material to Castro's Cuba. Georgia Negro Woman Freed After Slaying Of Armed Invader

DALLAS, Ga. (AP) — A 21-year-old Negro woman was freed today after a coroner's jury ruled that the slaying of a 25-year-old white man during an armed night rider invasion of a Negro home was justifiable homicide.

The ruling Friday night in the death of Leroy Parks of Dallas freed Mrs. Rebecca Wilson, who had been held on an open charge since the slaying.

Six other white men, arrested in connection with the raid and slaying, were free on $3,500 bonds.

Parks was shot to death Wednesday night as he stood on the porch of Mrs. Kate Philpot's house about two miles from Dallas, officers said. Mrs. Wilson, youngest of Mrs. Philpot's 11 children, fired a pistol into the darkness when one of a group of masked men thrust a pistol through a crack in the door, said Sheriff Jerome Clay. He added that Mrs. Wilson had been held for her own protection.

Mrs. Wilson said she plans to leave Dallas and join her husband, Roy, in Indianapolis.

The six men have been charged with assault with intent to murder and violation of Georgia's anti-mask law.

Reports of Soviet Aid in Cuba Similar to World War I Event

BY PETER LISAGOR

Post-Crescent News Service

WASHINGTON—The debate currently raging over what is or is not happening in communist Cuba reminded an administration official of a passage from Barbara Tuchman's brilliant book on World War I entitled, "The Guns of August."

Mrs. Tuchman wrote that on Aug. 27, 1914, the news from the that a 17-hour delay of the Liverpool was so bleak to the British pool-to-London train inspired a rumor that a Russian troop transport had landed in Scotland and that the Czarist soldiers were en route to the western front to bolster the Allied forces.

The arrival of the Russians accounted for the railroad delay, according to the rumor that spread by word of mouth until it turned, in the author's words, into a "national hallucination," gathering "corroborative detail" as it spread.

Catholic Newspaper Raps Foes

NEW ORLEANS, La. (AP)—An official Roman Catholic newspaper leveled an editorial blast Saturday at opponents of parochial school desegregation, as the city looked back on a week of relative calm.

"It has been a campaign of sound and fury, signifying little but the leaders' bitterness," said the front-page editorial in Catholic Action of the South, official newspaper of the archdiocese of New Orleans.

The archdiocese last week conducted the first large-scale parochial school desegregation in the South. Nearly 200 Negroes entered some 36 formerly white Catholic schools in the New Orleans area.

In the public schools, desegregation was expanded to include 107 Negroes in 20 formerly white schools. Last year, 12 Negroes attended six formerly white public schools in New Orleans.

Attendance in desegregated public schools Friday averaged 8 per cent of last year's enrollment, despite attempts to organize boycotts. In all but two of the 20 schools, second-day attendance was higher than that of the first day.

Opponents of desegregation, however, continued to work at organizing protests.

Its editorial, Catholic Action took notice of the various meetings that have been held to protest desegregation.

"Public meetings in which this attack against the Church has been carried on have, for the most part, drawn only a few hundred persons, mainly those approaching old age," it said.

that after Tuesday they could no longer use the Friedrichstrasse crossing. On Tuesday British, French and American troops moved up to stop, by force if necessary, any Soviet crossing except at Sandkrug or the sealed Brandenburg Gate.

A Soviet note to the British (they pointedly ignored the United States) said, in effect, "Why, of course, we'll be glad to use a different crossing. No trouble at all."

But despite the fact that not a stone had been thrown at them for weeks, the Soviets still are using the armored personnel carriers instead of the buses they once used.

Soviets Obey Demands

BY DANIEL T. SULLIVAN

CHICAGO Daily News Service

CHICAGO — In one of its relatively rare moral victories in divided Berlin, the West this week kept the Communists from slicing off another bit of salami.

This particular round in the cold war maneuvering for advantage in Berlin began in mid-August with West Berliners stoning Russian buses carrying guards to the Soviet War Memorial.

It ended Tuesday with the Soviets yielding to a U.S.-British-French demand that they stop using the American - patrolled Checkpoint Charlie opening in the Wall and instead use one closer to the War Memorial.

Here's how events built up to an almost anticlimactic showdown.

The stonings had occurred after the shooting of Peter Fechter, the martyr of the Wall. Three Russian soldiers were injured as their buses passed through nearly two miles of West Berlin streets to reach the memorial from Checkpoint Charlie at Friedrichstrasse.

The Russians, of course, could have avoided all this had they taken then the route they finally took this week, entering West Berlin via the Sandkrug Bridge, only a fraction of the distance from the Memorial. They chose to remain targets.

Perhaps their motive in this was exposed when they switched from buses to armored personnel carriers—and flouted long-standing four - power agreements to keep the vehicles "buttoned up" so that no weapons showed as they moved through the streets.

Then they resisted, without success, Allied determination to provide escort vehicles for the personnel carriers while they were in West Berlin.

Gen. Theodore Roosevelt Jr. Hailed As Great Citizen Soldier of America

BY WENDELL PHILLIPS

This Thursday there will be an anniversary little noticed anywhere. It is the 75th anniversary of the birth of Theodore Roosevelt Jr., whose epitaph should say: "One of America's great citizen soldiers."

But he is hardly remembered for that distinction. The reason is relatively simple: his name was Roosevelt and he was the son of another president by the name of Roosevelt.

Gen. Roosevelt went to his death on Utah Beach as a lowly brigadier general without command. His only desire in life was to be a division commander and he was destined never to attain that distinction. He had a premonition he would die in battle. He told his friends in the old 1st Division he would. He also told them he would never be a division commander. That is the story of this story.

Premonition

After fighting in World War I, Roosevelt returned to civilian life. Like his father, Theodore Roosevelt, 26th president of the United States he was a great hunter.

TR Jr. maintained his commission as a reserve officer and went back into service in April 1941 with his old outfit of World War I, the 1st Division. He was a regimental commander.

His widow in her book, "Day Before Yesterday," gives some sobering thoughts on peacetime reserve service. She wrote he kept his commission as a colonel by going "out as often as necessary for the dreary drudgery of peacetime training with troops in the field, which of course had meant giving up summer vacations."

First Landing

When the first major American landing was made, the regular this division. They'd know my name in May 1943, the division front line troops and the Red One because of his physical and men-voice whether they could see me or not. Listen! He shouted hoarse-ly through the night to a passing truck. "Hey, what outfit is that?" Gen. Bradley's "A Soldier's Story," they left a "trail of looted wineshops and outraged innavors." By the time he reached Sicily 1943, Bradley called for Roosevelt "Company C of the 18th Infantry, General Roosevelt," a hearty voice called back.

Big Celebration

When the victory in Tunisia came in May 1943, the division set out to celebrate. En route back to a rest camp, according to Gen. Bradley's "A Soldier's Story," they left a "trail of looted wineshops and outraged innavors." By the time he reached Sicily 1943, Bradley called for Roosevelt "Company C of the 18th Infantry, General Roosevelt," a hearty voice called back.

Teddy went about his usual business of defying the enemy single-handed. With his cane and fighting spirit, Roosevelt charged all over the beachhead. He inspired green, poorly trained citizens and regulars to victory. In another area the 90th Division faltered. Bradley called up Gen. Walter Bedell Smith, Eisenhower's chief of staff, and said he wanted to give Ted command of the 90th. The next morning more devoted soldier."

Battle Wary but smiling, Brig. Gen. Theodore Roosevelt Jr., stands on the steps of his command post in France July 12, 1944. That night he died of a heart attack, on Utah Beach where he had inspired green, untried soldiers and regulars to victory in the Allied invasion. Army's 1st Division was logically among the assault troops. TR Jr. was with it.

When Oran was holding out after its surrounding heights had been captured, Roosevelt attached a dirty, white undershirt (symbol of cease-fire) on top of a half-track and took off. He told his subordinates, "If I'm not back in two hours, give it all you've got." Oran capitulated. The Roosevelt legend was established. While many stories grew up about him which were not necessarily true—his exploits were so great that exaggeration almost became synonymous with the truth.

Gen. Omar Bradley recalls: "One night as I stood with Roosevelt watching a blacked out convoy Teddy turned to me in the darkness and said, 'Brad, I'll bet that I've talked to every man in

Visitors to Africa From Lawrence Find Great Need for Educators

BY MARGUERITE SCHUMANN Leslie Gustafson, associate professor of education at St. Olaf, returned from a trip to Africa. Their itinerary included Liberia, Nigeria, Tanganyika, Ethiopia, Kenya and Uganda.

It was the tentative plan of the committee to look for a spot where a new teacher training college might be founded and staffed by the 10 ACM schools. The team has returned strong in the conviction that the need within existing institutions is so great that the ACM's effort would be better spent bolstering one of them.

Mammoth Report

A mammoth report, hammered out in the famed Shepherd Hotel in Cairo at the end of the journey, will recommend that one of two institutions be aided in strengthening the educational program in one of the emerging nations.

The idea began in the spring of 1961 at a conference on the United Nations held at Wingate, leader in the independent liberal spread the center established by arts tradition or (2) that the ACM Johnson Foundation of Racine pool its faculty and student in its Frank Lloyd Wright house, sources with those being assembled at the new University College of Dar es Salaam, Tanganyika, under the leadership of Dr. C. R. Pratt to make a significant need to encourage the development of human resources as well as secondary teachers for East African nations.

In reaching these conclusions, the team traveled more than 20,000 miles and interviewed 150 people. Source people—British, Africans, East Indians and Americans—were chosen for the traveling team. Schneider was selected for government officials, professional people, politicians and educators. Everywhere they were impressed by the great human dignity as well as the people's energy in Africa.

Other members of the team tackled the problems that come with freedom. Everywhere, too, director for ACM: Helen Berwald, they marveled at the contrasts and education at Carleton and "They are going through all stages of their history at once," Hulbert remarked. "On their building projects, men work with modern machinery alongside men who carry buckets of cement on their heads. They have the airplane along with the donkey; they have great illiteracy along with a great scramble for education. A ramshackle taxi driven by an ordinary man blasts his way through a group of emirs chatting alongside their long black cars on the side of the road."

The educational findings of the team are too complex to cover briefly, but several of the background facts presented in Hulbert's report on Tanganyika are fairly typical of the countries visited.

Only about 10 per cent of Tanganyika's 9 million people are literate. The 62 secondary schools enroll 14,525 students. Twenty-six are government schools, 15 are operated by the Catholic church and 21 by Protestants or voluntary agencies. There are 643 teachers in the nation, but only 17 are graduate African teachers. The rest are expatriate Europeans, Asians and Americans.

Not Compatible

The team found that education in the one-time colonial areas was geared solely to passing the Cambridge Entrance Examination, which creates a rigid curriculum not compatible with the actual needs of the country. It was also the team's feeling that the campuses of the few leading universities were lavishly built for prestige purposes, while some areas went without schools at all.

They noted with sympathy the cultural dislocation of African students who had been educated abroad, particularly in their inability to find educated women to marry in their homelands, and concluded that foreign study on the graduate level was least desirable.

When you travel on foundation funds, Hulbert indicated, you are apt to stick pretty close to business. However, the group did sample a number of tourist delights: they visited a game preserve in the bed of an old crater; they saw the majestic peak of Kilimanjaro from the air and flew through fog-filled mountain passes; they met an Ethiopian princess at a graduation ceremony and an American-born Englishman at a garden party; they witnessed a glorious funeral procession and were entertained at a Carletonian appeared in Addis Ababa American Fourth of July beach party and a native Ethiopian dinner.

Met Lawrentian

Along the way, they discovered that the sun never sets on the ACM empire: during a two-hour plane stop at Usumbura, Ruanda, they were met by Lawrentian alumnus James Gioe, a Lawrentian, Oles, Carletonians and others as educational missionaries.

Dr. Marshall B. Hulbert, vice president of Lawrence College, with his daughter Ann examine objects he brought from Africa this summer where he was a member of a five-man team sent by the Associated Colleges of the Midwest to determine how the association could aid in training secondary teachers for the emerging nations. On the chair is a costume worn by East African women. Hulbert exhibits a series of painted panels depicting the life of Solomon and the Queen of Sheba and Ann holds a musical instrument from Nigeria. ## Parents of KHS Freshmen to be Greeted Monday KAUKAUNA — The annual orientation program for parents of freshmen at Kaukauna High School will be held at 7:30 p.m. Monday in the school auditorium. Information will be given regarding school policies and procedures and a talk, "Operating at the Freshman Level," will be given by Miss Stella Pederson, dean at Stout State College.

Refreshments will be served in the school cafeteria following the program at which time parents will have the opportunity to meet teachers in charge of freshmen subjects.

Mrs. Kathleen Davis is general chairman; Miss Mary Louise Finn, program chairman; Mrs. Jacqueline Jushka, refreshment chairman, and Guy Krumm, publicity chairman. Other freshmen teachers serving on the program are Mrs. Ethel Deloria, Mrs. Joyce Sprenger, Jack Peterson, Harry Wilson, Miss Joyce Kaphungst, Miss Mildred Feller, Harold Kobin, Roy Wentzel and Robert Lamont.

Scottsdale University Folds Before It Opens

SCOTTSDALE, Ariz. (AP)—The University of Scottsdale has folded without ever holding a class. The university, a school of convenience, was to be opened in Addis Ababa, Ethiopia, in 1961. The school was founded by Richard E. Strahlem, said enrollment James Gioe, a Lawrentian, Oles, Carletonians and others as educational missionaries.

Sentimental Journey

Father Misses Sights On Revisit to Campus

NEW YORK (AP)—When a son is born, hardly a father looking at his coming pride and joy can imagine how soon Junior will be a grown-up lad going off to college.

But you young dads, it will be a lot sooner than you think. I know. I just found out.

I found out something else, too. When you take Junior back to enroll him at the old alma mater—if you've been away a few years—you likely will get quite a shock.

Sentimental Journey

My son, Brenn, 17, is enrolling at the University of Oklahoma at Norman this fall. His mother and I graduated there 20 years ago. I took my son there recently on what turned out to be a sentimental journey into the past.

I wanted to introduce him to the faculty and campus, and also to the chances in the 20 years between my time and his.

I found a campus so vastly expanded that I needed a guide to show me around most of it.

Student automobiles in such numbers that parking space constitutes a major problem in my student's term for $250 to $300. In Students who bring their own airplanes to college.

Big Growth

Beautiful new housing accommodations: a student body more than doubled in size and costs of everything doubled tripled or more.

A football stadium expanded from a capacity of about 28,000 to about 65,000.

You can smoke in the library now.

Unchangeables

There were Boys and girls strolling hand in hand, about the beautiful tree.

Boys Home at Wittenberg

Lutheran Facility,
Village Cooperate
On Second Chances

WITTENBERG — This is a story of a home.

This is not a home with a mother, father and family. It is a home where 20 boys live. Most have been in trouble, have deep emotional problems and have either had no real family life or are from broken homes.

Since 1881 the Home Home for Boys, owned by the American Lutheran Church and operated through its Division of Charities, has been giving errant youths a "home" and the acceptance they have never known.

The Home Home is a minimum security institution with no locks or fences.

Boys Accepted

Wittenberg accepts these youths without reservation. Residents at the home are educated in village schools and take an active part in the life of the community. The people of Wittenberg know that, at any moment something can happen to one of the boys. They realize there could be trouble.

There is trouble, at times, but there also has been a full measure of success.

At the home each boy lives in one building—four boys in a room—with house parents. The boys have their own rooms and a good deal of freedom.

Life at Home

Here's how a boy comes to the Home Home and how he lives.

A youth is referred to the home by a welfare department or juvenile court. A case worker immediately studies the social history of the youth's family and decides whether the youth can receive help and stay at his own home, be placed in a foster home or, as a last resort, be brought to Wittenberg.

Before arrival at Home Home the youth has undergone some degree of psychological study.

A boy may have so many problems when he enters a home he cannot be traced. Generally the first three months are the roughest. Joe Haanstad, superintendent, said. Frequently the boys run away. After a few such episodes it is determined if the youth can remain at the home or if he should be taken elsewhere for a more confined treatment.

Normal Life

Life at the home is kept much like that of a real home. A youth is assigned to a cottage directed by David Smith, Vernon Jorgenson, Robert Adams or Mrs. Grace Torgerson.

A youth is enrolled at Wittenberg High School. If he has no church affiliation he is taken as a member of First Lutheran Church where he attends catechism classes and is confirmed. Boys take an active part in Luther League activities. Mixer parties are staged at the home.

Each boy is given an allowance monthly and may choose his own clothes.

Most of the residents come from metropolitan areas. At the home they are introduced to farm life. It is part of their work habit development under Farm Directors Morris Nelson and Everett Smith.

In school the youths take part in sports, extra curricular activities and other school activities.

Became Star

One resident ran away several times and was chased over three states. Later he became president of his high school class and a football star. Today he is attending college and holding down a respectable summer job. His college work is aided with funds from the welfare department.

Officials at the home are in close contact with the school. Should a boy attempt to make trouble at school he is treated as any other pupil. If it is learned that a certain boy is going to attempt to make trouble at school on a certain day his antics are ignored. He soon steps into line because of group pressures. Ronald Jacobson, program director, said.

The home has eight points by which it operates:

Provide a wholesome living experience with a dedicated cottage staff; establish healthy personal relationships within the setting so each boy can develop his own healthy personality; develop Christian beliefs within a Christian atmosphere; enhance formal education through the co-operation of the local high school; develop healthy work habits by various duties around the cottage, on the dairy farm and in the community; develop capacity to enjoy leisure moments; modify or resolve a youth's conflicts and attempt to integrate him with his family and a community.

Wilderness Camp

On the home grounds is a lake, river, complete workshop where residents can work on their own projects and library and recreation facilities. A wilderness camp also is provided at Exeland for recreation and spiritual development.

Director of the home is Joe Haanstad. He is assisted by three social workers, Quentin Goodrich, Curtis Legwood and Reginald Hansen, the program director, cottage parents and farm.

Western Powers Plan Steps in Berlin Crisis

more cars for the transportation of Soviet guards into West Berlin, where a big Soviet war memorial is situated.

Armored Cars

The armored cars were put into service late last month after Soviet troops riding in ordinary buses had been stoned by angry West Berlin crowds protesting the killing of East Berlin refugees who tried to flee to the west across the wall dividing the city.

Last Saturday, the Russians began using bigger and heavier armored vehicles. A few days ago the Russians accepted a Western demand that their convoys use a new route through the wall which cuts down the distance they must drive in West Berlin to reach the war memorial.

Western diplomats said that with the use of this route the Soviet Union no longer has any real need to employ armor for protecting its troops. But more importantly the Western governments do not like the frequent show of military force by the Russians in West Berlin which is implied in the use of armored vehicles.

Large Role

Their disapproval arises out of a belief that the Russian may be preparing to claim a larger role for themselves in West Berlin at the same time they deny that the United States, Britain and France have a right to a voice in East Berlin.

This, in turn, could be connected with Premier Khrushchev's announced determination to make a separate peace treaty with Communist East Germany.

The Russians have long claimed that East Berlin is not subject to four-power authority but must be treated as territory under the control of the East German regime. Khrushchev has also asserted that the signing of a treaty between the U.S.S.R. and East Germany would finally establish East German authority over the surface and air transportation line between West Berlin and West Germany.

Recent maneuvering of Soviet MIG fighter planes in the Berlin air corridors has made Western policy planners more than ordinarily alert to the possibility that in connection with the signing of a peace treaty there may be severe Communist pressures on the Berlin supply line, involving threats to Allied air traffic, as well as moves inside Berlin itself.

Meat Shortage Possible Soon

'Processors, Buyers In Tight Spot,' NFO President Claims

CORNING, Iowa (AP)—A shortage of meat in grocery stores and meat markets is likely within a week, the president of the National Farmers Organization said Saturday.

"We've got the processors and buyers in a very tight spot," said Oren Lee Staley. "If they don't get out and buy a lot of livestock in the next few days there could be a severe shortage of meat by the end of the week."

"We could be over the hump then," he added, "but we expect ups and downs yet, which probably will continue into the following week."

Second Week

The NFO began its second week Saturday of a 16-state program to hold livestock from markets in an effort to force food processors to sign long-term contracts guaranteeing higher prices to farmers for their products.

Since the holding action started, receipts of hogs, cattle and sheep have declined at stockyards and prices have gone up.

Stores in several Midwest cities have raised retail prices from 5 to 10 cents a pound on certain cuts.

"These increased prices to consumers are completely unfair and uncalled for," Staley said. "The meat being sold is from livestock purchased before livestock prices rose during our holding action."

Unfair Advantage

In Omaha, the president of Cudahy Packing Co., Paul B. Thompson, said meat processors are not taking an unfair advantage by boosting prices.

"The law of supply and demand and what we have to pay for meat determine what we have to charge for it," Thompson said. "No packer has much of a backlog of meat. Beef shipped Friday probably came from cattle killed Wednesday."

Army Authorities Confident of Quick Response to Call Up

WASHINGTON (AP)—If a new Reserve mobilization is ordered, Army authorities express confidence they can put it into effect without the major flubs that brought squawks from reservists and criticism from Congress during the Berlin-crisis build-up last year.

"We're in better shape to respond this time," one senior official said Saturday.

This, he explained, is because the Army has tightened its procedures, installed new automatic record-keeping equipment, and icized at home for admiring holocaust of World War II. taken steps to weed out men who Khrushchev's qualities but "he's not be in the ready Re-our enemy and he's a great aca Familiar" (Family Diary), serves.

kinds. By courtesy we will call them both democracies."

Democracy Definition

Asked to define democracy, the poet described it as a "more earnest desire than the world ever had to take care of everybody."

"The most valuable thing a government can do is to bestow not bread, but character," he added.

He explained that he tried to persuade Khrushchev that the most important thing is the contest between the two kinds of democracy and that it was just as well to stall awhile "until we find out what to do" about other things.

"Did you say what to do about Berlin?" a reporter persisted. "No, I didn't get into that but I did say something against letting a little thing like that decide the fate of nations."

He said he and Khrushchev "agreed we should take a large look at it."

Johnson Finds 'Fanaticism' for U. S. Way of Life

WASHINGTON (AP)—Vice President Lyndon B. Johnson said Saturday the people in the six countries he visited view the people of the United States as "friendly, considerate Americans not ugly Americans."

Johnson, who returned Friday night from his 17-day trip, said at a news conference he found "almost a fanaticism for our way of life."

He visited Lebanon, Iran, Turkey, Cyprus, Greece and Italy.

Renk Primary Showing Could Shake GOP

of the voluntary campaign organization, intends to resign soon after the November election, without regard to the nomination for governor in the primary election. The big question in the party would involve the succession to the job, and in the ordinary operations of politics the party's incumbent governor is the titular leader and has some influence in making such a selection.

It is assumed that either Renk or Kuehn, as governor, would apply his influence for the selection of a trusted friend to the party organization command with a view to renomination and re-election two years later, and with a recognition of the chairman's role in the selection of Wisconsin delegates to the 1964 national nominating convention.

The endorsement rule of the Republican organization is mandatory, under its present constitution. It has been a subject of recurring controversy, but it has survived for many years as a memento of the days long ago when the Republican "regulars" faced the competition of the LaFollette "progressive" in Republican primaries. The device was invented as a means of identifying and distinguishing the regulars from the LaFollette faction in the era when a Republican nomination to state office was tantamount to election because of the weak role of the Democrats in state affairs.

Wisdom Questioned

Younger members of the party in recent years, who regard the ancient inter-party relations problems of earlier generations as academic, have become increasingly uncertain of the wisdom of the convention endorsement method in the open primary.

Some party insiders have said privately that if the issue had been raised at an off-year convention in any of the last few years, the endorsement rules might have been repealed or significantly modified. Under the party constitution, the rules can be changed in an off year only—which is a means of avoiding impetuous amendments inspired by an immediate campaign situation.

One of the arguments made in favor of party organization endorsement is the need for concerted backing of a candidate over a considerable period—a longer period than is available now between the mid-September primary and the November final balloting.

There is now some talk among Republicans about advancing the date of the primary to permit a longer period of campaign debate and publicity. Such a proposal will probably be brought before the 1963 legislature. If the

Actor Lawford in Political Swim

HOLLYWOOD (AP)—Actor Peter Lawford, brother-in-law of the President, was dunked full-clothed Friday night in a swimming pool.

Lawford said he merely fell in. Other bystanders insisted he was playfully pushed by his wife, Pat, sister of the President.

Occasion was a movieland party given by Texas playboy Bob Neal in honor of the Lawfords. Last June, the Lawfords were guests of honor at a Washington Party at the home of Atty. Gen. Robert Kennedy.

At that party, three people reportedly got dunked—Mrs. Kennedy, White House aide Arthur Schlesinger Jr., and Mrs. Spencer Davis, a close friend of the hostess.

primary election date is changed—a date in late spring has been informally suggested—there will be less support for the idea of mid-summer endorsement of candidates by the party organization. A voluntary endorsement rule, permitting the organization to be guided by changing circumstances, might be substituted.

Knowles Still Gives Support To Philip Kuehn

Bubolz Quoting of May 31 Letter Has Not Changed Mind

Lt. Gov. Warren Knowles today reaffirmed his support of Philip Kuehn, endorsed Republican candidate for governor, after he was quoted Friday by Gordon A. Bubolz, Appleton, former state senator, as taking a crack at machine politics in a May 31 letter to Bubolz.

Knowles lost his bid for endorsement by a close margin to Kuehn but immediately declared his support for Kuehn and has campaigned for him. Bubolz supported Knowles for endorsement at the convention but since has switched his support to Wilbur Renk, Sun Prairie.

Bubolz said Friday that he had written to Knowles after the convention to ask how he felt about his defeat.

He said Knowles replied: "I don't know what I could have done in bucking the Milwaukee machine as the deck was stacked against us with too much money and too many political pros."

Thought It Confidential

Knowles said that he thought the letter to Bubolz was confidential in view of his long friendship. He said Bubolz did not call him nor had he talked to him about releasing the information in the May 31 letter.

"Had he called me, I would have asked him to keep the letter confidential," Knowles said.

Saturday morning Knowles received a letter from Bubolz in which Bubolz said he was surprised that Knowles is supporting Kuehn.

Knowles quoted Bubolz as saying: "I am therefore making a guess across the nation which could earn her $75,000 and expenses. She also receives a $10,000 scholarship for her college education or special training."

Hasn't Changed

"It has not changed my position," Knowles asserted. "I feel Kuehn is the best qualified candidate and I worked with him in the campaign. I am convinced he has a common sense approach and will be an outstanding governor when elected."

Knowles added that he is a team-working Republican and that he swallowed his disappointment after the GOP convention decision was made and supported the endorsed candidate.

Takes Defeat in Stride

"I know that some of my supporters were embittered when I was defeated but I have learned to take defeat in stride," Knowles said.

Bubolz in his statement Friday also proposed that the Republican party "owes it to the voters to nominate two candidates who have a commendable record of service to the people." He said he became convinced of this after the GOP convention and feels the people should be given a choice of candidates in the primary.

Sen. Karl E. Mundt, R-S.D., urged President Kennedy "to bring this union into line." Mundt told the Senate that Midwestern farmers are particularly hurt by the shutdown and that the President should "show the same concern and determination he showed to reverse the increase in steel prices."

Two other Midwestern senators, Bourke B. Hickenlooper and Jack Miller, both Iowa Republicans, have asked the President to "give this matter your immediate personal attention."

Crux of the dispute is the union's demand for a voice in any cutback of jobs. The telegraphers want the job level returned to the number employed as of Dec. 3, 1957.

The 10,700-mile North Western, which has abolished about 600 telegrapher jobs since 1957, says it has accepted the recommendations of a Presidential Emergency Board.

The board recommended the union drop its insistence on the right of job determination and suggested separation allowances, and retraining and retraining benefits.

Americans believe in freedom and dignity of the individual, equality of opportunity, and peace instead of war. These great blessings do not come easily. Only a strong, competent and vigorous people can attain them.

The development of these qualities—strength, competence and vigor—requires leadership in every respect of our nation's life, and in every community.

Harold V. Froehlich has the capacity for leadership that we need.

As a practicing attorney, Harold V. Froehlich is a member of a professional group, long recognized for leadership and public service. He is an advocate, trained to represent others vigorously and forcefully. His training and experience with the law qualifies him to serve in the state legislature.

As a certified public accountant, Harold V. Froehlich is a member of a very disciplined professional group. He must abide by a very rigorous code of ethics, which reminds him constantly of his obligation to unknown third parties who rely on his reports. He is accustomed to seeking out and speaking the truth with painstaking accuracy. He is tough-minded: he must frequently take positions opposed to clients who pay his fees.

There is not one C.P.A. in the Wisconsin legislature. The election of a C.P.A. to the Wisconsin Assembly would be a great benefit to the State of Wisconsin and to ourselves, as taxpayers.

OUR GREATEST SALE IN 90 YEARS OF RETAILING
Be First To Shop The 100's of Terrific Values

America's second revolution began in 1872. Aaron Montgomery Ward ran an ad to tell folks in distant places they could buy honest goods at wholesale prices. Here was a revolutionary new way to shop! Thrifty, hard-working pioneers liked the idea (shoes at $1 a pair!) and soon Mr. Ward was selling and serving all America. (Chances are, your Great-Granddad was a steady Ward Customer.) There've been many changes since then. In America, In Montgomery Ward. Growing with the Nation, Wards now has over 1100 retail and catalog stores.

But we haven't forgotten our early beginnings. Or the principles set down by our founder. We still offer you value. Variety—in more than 130,000 things to choose from. Service—from fast, dependable repairs to do-it-yourself help. Convenience. With one of our handy charge accounts, there's no money down and easy terms. And everything you buy is backed by the world's oldest living guarantee: Satisfaction or your money back at Wards. Mr. Ward left us a lot to live up to. We still do—every day, for all our customers.

Decades Have Strengthened Prestige of Tax Alliance

DepressionBorn Organization
Trusted by Public, Solons Alike

Post-Crescent Staff Writer

MADISON — It was a gloomy day in 1932, when the nation's worst economic depression held the land in a desperate grip, that a group of politically conscious business men met to form an organization to make the Wisconsin electorate more aware of its tax burdens.

Thirty years later the frail creature that was born that day under the name of the Wisconsin Taxpayers' Alliance is probably the most respected and influential research and educational organization in Wisconsin governmental affairs. In the schools, in civic club meetings, in the legislature, in public forums everywhere, the Alliance speaks with the prestige that has grown out of three decades of devotion to its original purpose of distributing "non-partisan" information about government and taxes to the people of Wisconsin and encouraging greater citizen participation in government."

Backed by hundreds of financial supporters, and drawing lesser revenue but crucial encouragement from thousands of subscribers to its publications, the Alliance in recent years has been recognized by members of all factions and political parties as a thoroughly responsible and rigidly objective source of information on fiscal trends, problems, and experiences in state and municipal government. No other organization now involved in Wisconsin governmental operations from the sidelines has attained quite the confidence of this agency which now has a professional staff of seven members and produces books and reports that are regularly used in hundreds of libraries, schools, colleges, and public offices.

The original objectives of the Alliance have probably been modified considerably. At least some of the worried businessmen who were involved in its creation in 1932 had the idea that it could serve as an instrument for organizing pressure for governmental retrenchment and public tax relief. Whatever their purposes, the focus of its interests and work quickly shifted to educational enterprise, on the assumption that an informed electorate is the best assurance of efficient and responsible government in the long-range.

Aids Solons

Today the Alliance functions as a kind of unofficial collaborator in Wisconsin legislative affairs. During the long struggle over the 1961 state tax revision bill, its specialists were consulted confidentially by the leaders of both political parties.

Its staff men worked for weeks in research assignments of the famed "blue ribbon" tax revision commission which paved the way to the tax revision effort in the last legislature. Its officers have consulted with many other key study groups set up within the state government and especially in the legislature. Currently C. K. Alexander, co-director of the Alliance and its chief of research, is leading the studies of a highway interim committee which may bring in a sweeping plan for a reclassification of the entire Wisconsin public road system for the consideration of the 1963 legislature.

Alexander shares the direction of the Alliance program with John P. Reynolds, son of the late Paul N. Reynolds, one of the most popular lecturers on politics and government in modern times in Wisconsin, and a man who probably made more speeches during his 25 years of Alliance management than any other Wisconsin personality of his period.

Reynolds Legend

The senior Reynolds' energy and resourcefulness in tracking down prospective contributors during the leaner years of the Alliance's history became legendary during his life-time, as did deliberately mocking introductions to his speeches at service club luncheons and others where he chided community leaders for their lackadaisical attitudes toward public affairs.

The Alliance building in Madison is now called the Paul Reynolds Memorial Building, in memory of the founder.

John Reynolds and Alexander now share the responsibilities of managing the organization, with Reynolds doing most of the public speaking and field work, and Alexander directing the central office here and its research and publication and consultation services.

Alexander joined the organization soon after its founding, leaving an economic research job on the University of Wisconsin faculty where he was trained during the era of the late, famed Prof. John R. Commons.

One of the best known figures in legislative chambers and hearing rooms, he is modest about his place in recent state government events.

"It makes no difference," he explained to an interviewer, "who gets the credit, just so that there is some progress made."

He believes the state has made progress, in tax revision, in the amelioration of the notorious personal property tax which was a long-time Alliance objective, in budget management reforms, and in the original goal of public education in state and local fiscal affairs.

Many Publications

Its publication program is the most extensive of any non-governmental group in Wisconsin. Its monthly periodical, called "The Wisconsin Taxpayer" has a long subscription list and is widely used as basic reading in high schools and colleges. It is devoted to reports in depth on significant trends in government, and to governmental problems present and prospective, always with the emphasis directly or obliquely on taxes and finance. It commissioned the writing and sponsored the publication of an elementary text-book on state and local government that thus far has had a circulation of more than 40,000. All of its staff officers are available for public appearances and lectures, which run into the hundreds each year. Again, the emphasis is on fiscal affairs and the problems of taxation.

One of its most valued works is the publication of a legislative news service, providing summaries of all bills and resolutions during the biennial legislative sessions, at a nominal price intended to cover the costs of the staff men who write the analytical reports. A simplified dictionary of taxation, called simply "Taxes" has had an enormous distribution over the years and is widely used in the preparation of state and federal income tax returns.

The Alliance also holds itself out for service to individuals, without charge. Any Wisconsin resident can send a query on a tax problem to its Madison office, and get a reply without a fee.

Impartial Record

There have been incidents in the lives of the Alliance officers when their insistence upon rigid non-partisanship in discussion and reporting of state affairs were plainly annoying to powerful political figures. One governor was resentful when an Alliance analysis of the condition of the state treasury was exploited effectively by his rival in an election campaign. But the successful candidate was annoyed in turn when the Alliance again put out a report on the condition of the treasury under his regime, and it was embarrassing to his cause in a new campaign season.

Later the Alliance was instrumental in persuading the legislature in writing a law requiring the state budget bureau to publish a popular account of state treasury condition at annual intervals, without regard to the sensibilities of the governor in power.

Over the years the Alliance has drawn some of the most distinguished citizens of Wisconsin, including many leading business executives, as members of its advisory board of directors of 17.

Now president is J. W. Simpson, Jr., executive vice president of the First Wisconsin National Bank of Milwaukee.

Open House Set Today at Hospital In New London

$572,000 Addition Was Begun July 5, 1961, to Update Facilities

NEW LONDON — Open house increased demands of the new wing and increasing patient load Community Hospital will be from 1 to 4 p.m. today.

Ground for the addition was broken July 5, 1961, and dedication last week.

The new wing provides 15,700 additional square feet of space and adds 35 beds to bring the total capacity of the hospital to 102 beds. Of the new space, 1,600 square feet is donated to rehabilitation, consisting of both physical and an occupational therapy departments making available the necessary activities for patients requiring additional activity of mind and body.

Integrate Services
An enlarged X-ray department containing the latest in diagnostic and therapeutic equipment and a new laboratory, also containing the latest equipment, have been included to meet the needs of both in-patient and out-patient treatment.

The new addition provides an emergency entrance readily accessible to the new services. The building program integrates surgery, central supply, emergency department, laboratory and X-ray to permit adequate flexibility among all departments.

Around the clock nursing service, at moderate room rates, is also included in the hospital services.

Other additions in the new wing are an enlarged and fully mechanized kitchen to meet the

Overcrowding Common; Cafeterias, Auditoriums, Museum Used for Study

BY JACQUELINE FIX
Post-Crescent Staff Writer

Fox Cities high schools are bursting at the seams this fall. With children of the post-war baby boom growing up, the high schools are being forced to take temporary measures to fit them in, and new facilities are being built or planned in all of the Fox Cities.

Cafeterias and auditoriums are doing double duty as classrooms and study halls, and classes are being squeezed into every possible space. In the fourth floor tower museum at Appleton High School, stuffed animals and birds surround pupils working all morning on developmental reading and year-book staff volunteers in the afternoon.

Hospital Help to Vote on Union

Employment Board Orders Election at County Institutions

The Wisconsin Employment Relations Board has ordered an election to determine the bargaining representative for the employees of the Outagamie County Hospital and Golden Age Home No. 2. The election will be conducted from 1:30 to 4 p.m. Wednesday by WERB.

Eligible to vote are 95 employees including domestic help, service, seamstresses, occupational therapy workers, janitors, farm workers and similar occupations. Seeking to represent workers is Local 980 of the American Federation of State, County and Municipal Employees, AFL-CIO. The union has been organized for about a year.

Thursday, employees at the Winnebago County Hospital and Pleasant Acres Home approved Local 1280 of the same union as its bargaining unit by a 94-10 vote.

Stout College Dean Appearing At Kaukauna

KAUKAUNA — Stella Pedersen, dean of women at Stout State College, will speak at 7:30 p.m. Monday at Kaukauna High School for freshman parent orientation night.

Dean Pedersen's subject will be Operating at the Freshman Level.

Dean Pedersen received her bachelor degree at River Falls State College, masters at the University of Minnesota and has done additional work at Northwestern, Columbia and Minnesota universities. Her teaching experience spans two years of grade school, 17 years in high school and 15 years in college.

At Appleton High School, the auditorium is used as a study hall six periods a day, with up to 280 pupils working there under the supervision of several teachers. Lighting is a problem, especially beneath the balcony, said principal Herbert H. Helbie, but no pupil works there for more than one 55-minute period.

Sit On Steps
During assemblies every seat is taken, including 64 in the orchestra pit, and some students must sit on the concrete steps in the balcony. Teachers stand, having seats only when pupils are absent from 1:30 to 4 p.m. Wednesday by sent.

Appleton High School enrollment is about 1,800, in a building with a capacity of 1,500. Biology classes are meeting in the chorus aids, seamstresses, occupational therapy workers, janitors, farm workers and similar occupations. Seeking to represent workers is Local 980 of the American Federation of State, County and Municipal Employees, AFL-CIO. The union has been organized for about a year.

Three groups of about 76 seniors have been excused from physical education this semester, although state law requires not less than 155 minutes a week of physical education in senior high school. A similar group will be excused second semester.

New School by 1966
Preliminary planning is beginning for a new high school in southeast Appleton, scheduled to be in operation in 1966.

While remodeling is in process at Neenah High School, places have been found for 1,463 boys and girls to attend classes and have adequate study periods in school. In less space than 1,311 students were crowded together last school year.

"Every student has been given an opportunity and place to study," says H. O. Borgen, principal, squelching rumors that some of the students might have to be sent home for study periods. "Both teachers and students have been good sports about our limitations and knowing that it will all be changed next fall has helped a lot."

Seven study halls are scheduled for the activities room and 14 in the high school auditorium. Lap boards have been provided each student for writing assignments. The lighting has been brought up to standard and the largest single group has reached 467. There are room for more, as the auditorium has a total seating capacity for 728. Three teachers are

Becker Turns Down Menasha Director Job

City Will Have No Engineer or Works Chief Oct. 1

MENASHA — Ralph Becker, Fox Point engineer who Thursday evening was named Menasha's first director of public works, Saturday informed Mayor John Klein that he had decided not to accept the $9,000-a-year post.

Mayor Klein said Becker refused the newly-created job because the differential in pay was too small between the Menasha post and what he now is receiving.

Becker's refusal to accept the job leaves the city without a director of public works or city engineer, effective Oct. 1. As of that date, the present city engineer, Melvin J. Noth, will assume his new duties as director of public works at Menominee Falls.

Noth's resignation was accepted by a 9-2 vote at Thursday's special meeting of the City Council. He had served as Menasha's city engineer for nine years, starting in 1953.

Mayor Klein told the Post-Crescent Saturday that he had no idea what action the council would take to meet the crisis.

"There are 12 men there (on the council), and I don't know what they'll do," he said.

Mayor Klein said he had been certain of Becker's interest in the Menasha post, and that he did not learn of his decision not to accept the council appointment until Saturday afternoon.

Huber Law Prisoner Walks Away From Jail

A Kaukauna man who was sentenced to the Outagamie County jail Aug. 27 for 364 days walked away from the jail Thursday.

Vincent Buchberger, 34, 608 Draper St., was released under Huber law privileges last Thursday at 9 a.m. to look for a job. He did not return and has been missing since.

Buchberger had been sentenced in Outagamie County Court, Branch 2 for neglect of his wife and two minor children. He was arrested Aug. 24 and pleaded guilty to the charges. Buchberger, deserted his family July 13 when he went to Benton Harbor, Mich., where he had a job.

Municipal Purchasing Agent Might Save $34,000 a Year

NFO Sees Milk Withholding

Four Counties Gather to Hear Membership Bid

DALE — A milk withholding action is forecast soon by the National Farmers Organization throughout the 14-state NFO controlled area, an official of the farm group stated Saturday night.

Farmers from Waupaca, Winnebago, Outagamie and Waushara counties met at Readfield Community Hall in an attempt to gain membership in the Fox Cities area.

The farmers were assured by Staff Organizer Fred Treplitt no milk would be ordered dumped at present. Treplitt said he felt when milk processors saw a group of perhaps 50,000 farmers assembled to decide whether milk was to be withheld and dumped, they would sign a contract with the NFO.

He said 2 per cent of dairy products now are surplus. He asked if this was a true figure reported by the government. Treplitt told the farmers they never would know until the NFO had control of dairy surpluses.

The NFO proposes a price of $6.05 per hundredweight for Grade A bottle milk, he added.

Donald English, assistant national staff organizer, suggested the NFO cooperate with cooperatives to turn grade A milk into products such as cheese and other package dairy products so as to create a shortage of fluid milk.

This he said would force the large processors into signing NFO contracts.

There were 140 farmers present. Farmers questioned the milk withholding and dues. There is a $25 initial membership fee. After that everything the farmer sells is deducted 1 per cent for NFO fees and dues, the organizers said.

Farmers appeared interested in the proposals but were not in a mood to join, it appeared. Farmers were led to the meeting by arrested Aug. 24 and pleaded guilty to the charges. Buchberger, deserted his family July 13 when he went to Benton Harbor, Mich., where he had a job.

Research Group Recommends Central Department for Appleton

BY REINY WESSING
Post-Crescent Staff Writer

It is possible that a municipal purchasing agent could make a net saving of about $34,000 a year for the City of Appleton's general purpose budget.

That's equal to about 25 cents per $1,000 on the present tax rate. As the city grows and more materials and supplies are used the savings could be greater.

The Public Expenditures Survey of Wisconsin has recommended that Appleton institute central purchasing, and establish a purchasing department. Its recommendation is contained in a 37-page study of the city's financial administration setup, made at the request of the Appleton Taxpayers Association.

The idea for central purchasing here is not new, but this is the first time it ever has been proposed by an organization like the expenditures survey. The state unit is a non-profit, non-political research group.

10 Per Cent Saving
City records show that about $500,000 is being spent this year for materials and supplies, including machinery and vehicles, but excluding construction projects.

Private corporations and municipalities employing purchasing agents say that an agent can save the company or the city at least 10 per cent.

An agent then could save Appleton about $50,000 a year. Operating the department might cost about $16,000, including the salaries for the agent and clerical help. If at first only one helper is needed the operating cost might be about $12,500, and the net saving would be about $37,500.

Saved $75,000

The city of Green Bay has had a purchasing department since 1958. After its first full year of operation in 1959, the Brown County Taxpayers Association made a survey of it. The taxpayers calculated that it saved the city $75,000 that year, based on purchases totaling about $750,000. The 1962 budget to operate the department is $16,632.

Oshkosh and Fond du Lac also have purchasing agents.

Kenneth Hafner in Oshkosh also serves as the city's personnel officer. His office employs one girl. This year's budget for both purchasing and personnel is $9,000. Steve Pittler, Fond du Lac's agent, has a budget of $11,981 this year. He has the full-time help of one office girl, but can get extra help from the finance director's office when needed.

Russell Petrealt in Green Bay has two full-time office girls. In all three cities central purchasing is a separate department.

Railroad Museum Announces Special Fall Visiting Hours

The National Railroad Museum at Green Bay has announced a special autumn program of visiting hours. The new program will keep the museum open until 7:30 p.m. until October 15.

The extension in the open hours of the museum hours was tested over Labor Day holiday and proved successful, according to museum director, V. M. Bushman. The Museum opens at 10 a.m. daily. The extension of the hours was required by the attendance at the museum, which has established records through this season.

The Museum lies along the banks of the Fox River south of Green Bay and as the autumn changes of nature take place the scenic beauty of the museum takes on a particular beauty enhancing the long shadows cast by the museum exhibits.

Toy Bomb Explodes; Youth Hurt

A toy bomb which was purchased at a downtown novelty store exploded Saturday and sent Bradley Muthig, 12, son of Mr. and Mrs. Earl Muthig, 216 N. Locust St. to St. Elizabeth Hospital with burns to his face and arms.

The youth was in good condition at the hospital Saturday and is expected to be released today.

According to his parents, Bradley was "poking" the bomb, a novelty gadget placed under a hood of a car to smoke and make a loud report when the engine is started, when it exploded. Sulphur in the bomb burned the youth, his parents said.

The youth was taken to the hospital by Larry's ambulance service.

Girl Treated for Burns Received As Grease Spills

NEENAH — Joyce Jensen, 13, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Wilbert Jensen, 801 Higgins Ave., was burned on the right forearm by hot grease at her home about 2:57 p.m. Saturday.

She was taken in manager at Neenah police that someone may have a copy of his master key used to retrieve money from the washing units in his store.

Firemen, who were called to the Jensen home, said hot grease spilled as it was being carried manager of the Launderama, 204 from the kitchen stove and ig-Racine St., Menasha, and the Norge Village, Neenah, said he is missing at least two day's receipts from his 40 machines in both locations. He estimated the loss at between $300 and $400.

A neighbor, John Neubauer, beat out the flames prior to the arrival of the firemen.

Coin Laundry Loss Reported by Owner

A coin-operated laundromat manager has told Neenah and Menasha police that someone may have a copy of his master key used to retrieve money from the washing units in his store.

Clarence Laux, New London, said he was carrying a laundry bag from the kitchen stove and ig-Racine St., Menasha, and the Norge Village, Neenah, said he is missing at least two day's receipts from his 40 machines in both locations. He estimated the loss at between $300 and $400.

Primary Contests May Draw Big Vote

A relatively quiet campaign that became considerably more heated in the last week or 10 days is likely to draw a fair number of voters to the polls in the Fox Cities area for Tuesday's primary election.

What looks like a tight race for the Republican gubernatorial nomination between Philip Kuehn, Milwaukee industrialist who has the party endorsement, and Wilbur Renk, well-known Sun Prairie farmer, highlights the state races.

Each of the four counties in the Fox Cities area has several local races which have drawn intense interest. Stories on the county political situations are on Page B-2.

Poll Hours
Polls in the Fox Cities generally are open at 7 or 8 a.m. Tuesday and, in the cities and larger communities, close at 8 p.m. In the rural districts and smaller villages, polls may open as late as 9 a.m. and in most cases close between 6 p.m. and 7 p.m.

The state and congressional races stack up this way:

Governor: On the Republican ticket, Kuehn, Renk and Robert LaFollette Sucher seek the nomination. John W. Reynolds, present attorney general, is opposed on the Democratic ticket.

Lieutenant Governor
For Lieutenant Governor: Jack Olson, Republican, and David Carley, Democrat, both unopposed.

For Secretary of State: Robert Zimmerman, Republican, and Gerald Humphrey, Democrat, unopposed.

For Treasurer: Mrs. Dena Smith, Republican, unopposed; John Schneider and Eugene Lamb, Democrats.

For Attorney General: George W. Thompson and Robert G. Marotz, both Republicans (Marotz has party endorsement); and Elliot Walstead and William H. Evans, Democrats.

In another statewide race, present Gov. Gaylord Nelson, Democrat, is unopposed for the U. S. Senate nomination in his party. Incumbent Republican Alexander Wiley is opposed by Arlen Woltenburg.

and shouting to be heard, she teaches five classes there each day. During assemblies at Appleton High School, every seat is filled, including 64 in the orchestra pit. The center photo shows the overflow sitting on cement steps in the balcony. The auditorium is used for study halls six periods each day. During remodeling and construction of an addition at Neenah High School, adjustments include the

Fire Destroys Interior Of Bonduel Residence

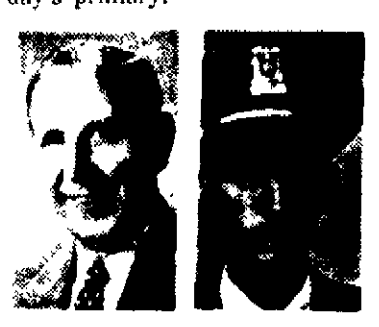

BONDUEL — Fire of unknown origin destroyed the interior of the home of Dr. W. W. Grover Thursday afternoon.

Bonduel volunteer firemen responded to the call at 4:30 p.m. The fire apparently started in the kitchen and spread to the second story and attic. There was smoke and water damage. Loss was estimated at $10,000.

Republican To be Sheriff in Calumet County

Democrats Have No Candidate in Primary Election

CHILTON — The new Calumet County sheriff will, for all practical purposes, be elected in Tuesday's primary.

Help Elect WARREN E. WILKE

REPUBLICAN FOR State Senator

Wilke will work for the Worker, Farmer, Small Business Man, Those on Pension—Social Security and Fixed Income—Equitable Tax Program for all Calumet and Winnebago Counties.

Authorized and Paid for by Warren E. Wilke, Route 5, Oshkosh

Incumbent Sheriff

The incumbent sheriff is Mrs. C. J. Kosmosky, completing her second term. Kosmosky, 55, a county traffic patrolman for nine years before election as sheriff for the first time in 1950, is seeking his fifth term. He served two 2-year periods as sheriff with his wife holding the office the years 1950 and 1952. He was not permitted to run because of statutory restrictions. Pagel, 28, is a Chilton native but spent the last six years as a New Holstein policeman. He is chairman of the Sixth District Wisconsin Law Enforcement Officers Association and a member of the national lawman's group. A three way race exists on the Republican ballot for the state assembly seat vacated by incumbent G. J. Hipke, New Holstein. He served two terms. Seeking to replace him are Greg Paul, 36, New Holstein; Wilmer Struebing, 52, route 2, Brillion, and Lester Eiting, 61, route 1, Brillion.

GOP Sheriff Race To Highlight Balloting In Winnebago County

Incumbent Lowell Challenged by Former Sheriff Victor Jordan

OSHKOSH — The Republican race for nomination for sheriff will highlight balloting for county offices in Tuesday's primary.

Seeking the office are the incumbent, Sheriff Richard T. Lowell, and a former sheriff, Victor Jordan. Other county contests on the Republican ticket are for the county clerk, sought by Albert Masloff and Arthur Miller, and the second assembly district office, for which the incumbent assemblyman, Floyd Shurbert, is being opposed by George C. Hildebrandt. A fourth contest on the Republican ticket is for state senator for Winnebago and Calumet Counties. In the race for this office are State Sen. William A. Draheim of Neenah, the incumbent, and Warren Wilke.

In First Term
Lowell, 49, of 411 Church Ave., Oshkosh, is in his first term as sheriff.

Jordan
Winnebago County sheriff. He served 23½ years on the Oshkosh police force before being elected sheriff in the 1960 election.

Struebing
Unopposed for the Democratic Party nomination for sheriff is Frank Selz 59, of 2543 Omro Road, Oshkosh, operator of the Deer Lodge.

Coroner
Republican Albert T. Masloff, 60, of 532 Boyd St., Oshkosh.

Sheriff Race In Outagamie May be Close

Eight Contests On Both Tickets For Assembly Posts

Three-way races for sheriff on the Republican ticket and Second District assemblyman on the Democratic ticket, and a hot two-way race for GOP assemblyman nomination in the First District highlight Tuesday's primary election in Outagamie County.

Former Sheriff Donald Heinritz, County Police Sgt. George Elise and Appleton City Clerk Elden Heinritz are in what is regarded as a neck and neck race. One veteran political observer thinks the winner may have a margin of fewer than 500 votes. Many close to the political scene think any of the three could win—or finish third.

There also is a two-way race for sheriff on the Democratic ticket, where County Policeman

Calvin Spice is opposing Ray J. Kelly, an Appleton painter.

Second District
In the Second District Assembly race, three Kaukauna aldermen, Arnold J. Vanderloop, Fred J. Reichel and William Rogers seek the Democratic nomination. Incumbent Republican Marvin Rabbitt is unopposed on the GOP ballot.

Harold Froelich, young Appleton attorney, has amazed some political observers with the intensity of his campaign and the word in political circles is an upset could come off in his race.

VOTE FOR Robert G. Marotz

Republican Candidate for Attorney General

- Chief Clerk of the Wisconsin State Assembly during this session.
- Post member of the legislature (10 years).
- Assembly speaker from 1957-59.
- Successful practicing attorney.

For these reasons, and because we have had a personal knowledge of his ability and dedication to his work, we hope you will support ROBERT G. MAROTZ for Attorney General in the primary election tomorrow.

Signed:
Ken Priebe, Assemblyman, First District
David O. Martin, Assemblyman, Third District

An Open Letter to the Voters of Calumet County:

On Sept. 11 we will hold our primary election. As you probably know I am a candidate for the office of Assemblyman for Calumet County.

Mr. Qualifications for this office are as follows:
I am 52 years of age, the father of four children. I was educated in the Brillion Public School system and for two years was President of its Board of Education. For the past six years I have been the Chairman of the Town of Brillion and the Township's representative on the Calumet County Board of Supervisors. Here I served on the Sheriff's, equalization, and highway committees. I have also served as a director of the Calumet Memorial Hospital Association for the past six years and am at present Secretary of that Board.

I know the problems of both small business and agriculture from actual experience.

I will meet the problems of today's Legislature as they arise for the good of the most people of the State of Wisconsin and particularly of Calumet County. I can assure you that you will be represented by a mature man, experienced by 12 years of public office and dedicated to good sound efficient government.

In all sincerity I am asking every voter in the County for His or Her Support and Vote on election day.

Very Truly Yours

but within the city's organizational structure falls under the supervision of the director of finance.

Each of the finance officers says he lets the purchasing agent run his department with no interference, because the two types of work are so different. Both are related to money, but from quite different approaches.

All three agents follow almost identical procedures in their daily work. All use one-year open-end contracts as much as possible, so that merchandise can be bought as needed and no warehouse is needed to store supplies.

Use Professional Guides

The agents read the Wall Street Journal and numerous professional purchasing agents' magazines and use the Thomas Register of Manufacturers. They also receive quality analysis reports from independent testing and research firms.

Each of them said they find wide ranges of prices for the same national brand items, particularly when there are several local dealers.

Petreit cited a siren for a fire department vehicle. He received quotations ranging from $66 to $90 from four local dealers.

Shopping Around

"That's how a purchasing agent can save the city the most money," he said. "Shopping around and knowing what you're after is the secret."

Green-Bay is getting name brand spark plugs for 43¢ cents each. Retail price is $1.05. High detergent oil is 47¢ cents a gallon in barrels. There is a 25 per cent discount on tires and a 32.2 per cent discount on light bulbs. Twenty-cent flashlight batteries cost 10 cents.

Intangible Benefits

"You can't measure all the savings of a purchasing agent in dollars and cents," Petreit says. "There are intangible benefits. City employees don't have to run around town looking for things or wondering where to buy them. My office knows where the city is getting the best price, and employees can do the work they were hired for."

"Salesmen don't go around bothering the mayor and department heads," Petreit says.

Mayor Roman P. Dennison says the purchasing department has relieved him of many tedious chores. City Manager Ray Harbough of Oshkosh and City Manager Robert McManus of Fond du Lac made similar comments.

on duty during each of the study periods.

To minimize confusion, 13 high school faculty men have drawn hall duty. They see that everyone finds the proper classroom and is in the assigned locale throughout the school day.

The Neenah High School varsity band and pep band will practice at the Boys Brigade Building two hours every day. Practice times were chosen to give maximum time during the noon hour for band members to be transported from high school to Brigade. This arrangement frees the auditorium for study hall but still necessitates the carrying of all instruments back and forth. Only the large instruments such as drums, sousaphones, tubas and glockenspiel can be stored.

Kaukauna High School is using the lunchroom and auditorium for classes. About 60 students do not come to school until 9 a.m., and another group of about 60 leave at 11 a.m., in order to have enough room in the study halls.

The addition to the Kaukauna High School, which will be ready next fall, will bring the school's capacity up to 1,600. This year room is being found for 1,066 students in a building with a maximum capacity of 800.

Kimberly High School, with 529 students, is adapting for one more year to a building built for 350 to 400, while the new high school is completed. Book rooms have been converted for class and guidance office space. Traffic in the halls, particularly in the academic area and at dismissal time, is a problem.

Study halls are large, but this problem was created partly by the change to a seven-period day, according to principal Darrell Larson. For the first time, two teachers are supervising each study hall.

Talk of Expansion

Conditions at Xavier High School are crowded, with classes and study halls being held in the faculty dining room and the cafeteria. The school has an enrollment of 1,085 and was built for a capacity of 1,000. Several Appleton architects have been asked for suggestions on the most feasible manner of expanding the school.

Fox Valley Lutheran High School, with an enrollment of 348, is

Kansas City Railroading Couple Reunited With 'Mighty Mite'

There was quite a dispute when Kansas City are responsible for the National Railroad Museum at Green Bay was offered a diesel locomotive as an exhibit last year. Despite its title the museum was really started by old railroad fans dedicated to the idea that this would be a shrine to the "Age of Steam" in the railroading business.

But in the years to come the diesel may become as historic as steam locomotives are now. So the "Mighty Mite" a small diesel switch engine from the Kansas City, Mo. Public Service Freight Operation, became a museum exhibit last September.

Museum officials could see a real practical use for the locomotive, for switching operations retired bank auditor from Port for power on the Wisconsin and land Ore. to claim $130,000 worth of blue chip securities found in a vacant lot Friday.

Yesterday Railroad when the old timers around the museum yards, it turned out, didn't know much about diesel power. They never did get the locomotive running.

But this week the "Mighty Mite" was back in service at the museum, working at its switch engine and even hauling the Wisconsin and passenger trains.

Mr. and Mrs. James Ashley of Kansas City, Mo., took over the controls of the diesel switch engine she and her husband donated to the National Railroad Museum at Green Bay. The couple spent last week at the museum to put the locomotive into operating condition. The "Mighty Mite" is the only diesel on exhibit at the museum so far. (Post-Crescent News Service Photo)

Wolf River Improvements?

The Army Corps of Engineers is currently removing deadheads and stumps and cutting overhanging trees along the Wolf River between Fremont and New London.

This work will probably bring smiles to the owners of large boats and those who enjoy going for a Sunday cruise. However, it can only bring a frown to the brow of anyone who has a love for fishing and the outdoors.

The Wolf is probably one of the most famous streams in the Mid West. Its spring pike run brings thousands of fishermen out and even is an attraction for out-of-state anglers. In the summer, the deep pools notched out by the swift spring currents hold a variety of fish and the bayous are alive with waterfowl.

Overhanging trees, stumps and dead-heads are all essential for fish. Removal of these takes away the fish's "home" and naturally he moves elsewhere.

Look Again, U Thant

On his trip home from Russia, U Thant, acting Secretary General of the United Nations, warned of the "hairsplitting" which he said seemed to be preventing the adoption of a nuclear test ban and positive action toward disarmament. Later this month U Thant will have an opportunity to study the Soviet and American proposals since it is apparent that he hasn't really looked at the differences which ended the most recent Geneva test ban conference in complete failure.

The Western free nations have proposed three separate draft treaties. The first calls for complete and general disarmament of both nuclear and conventional weapons to take place in three stages under international inspection and control. Russia long ago refused even to listen to the terms.

The second and third United States proposals deal only with a nuclear test ban. The first would end all testing with international on-the-site inspection and an international control commission. The third would do away with all controls and have a test ban only on atmospheric and under water tests since they can be more readily detected with devices in other countries.

Women in Public Jobs

The admonition of the state director of personnel to state government hiring officers that they are passing over a great reservoir of public service talent by discriminating against women in filling job vacancies is an episode that is worthy of more attention than it has had.

Wisconsin law firmly forbids job discrimination in the civil service on the basis of the sex of the applicants. The bureau of personnel, Director Karl Wettengel reports, also avoids such discrimination wherever possible in the setting up of job specifications. Yet it is evident to anybody who has ever examined public employment policies—state, local or federal—that there is an unconscious discrimination in this field, nevertheless.

Too many department heads hesitate to hire a woman, however qualified on the basis of training and subordinate job experience, simply because she is a woman and the job in question has always been occupied by a man. Such prejudiced selection is possible within the letter of the law because the ordinary civil service ordinance submits a panel of at least three qualified candidates to the hiring officer,

The Mote in Our Eyes

Some of the immoderate public discussion in Wisconsin about the development of a new layer of higher educational service by way of a network of junior colleges suggests that there is an insufficient awareness of what is now quietly being done in this field.

There comes to the editorial desk a report from the diligent head of the state board of vocational and adult education, with some highly revealing statistics on the post-high school technical and general educational services that have been developed during recent years by our local schools of adult and vocational education, quite without fussing in the way of publicity campaigns or public speech-making.

Since 1960 the number of students who have finished high school, and have enrolled formally in organized courses in vocational schools, has doubled. There were 11,284 of such students when a count was made earlier this year. Slightly more than half of them were in full-time associate degree and non-degree programs during the day hours. More than 5,000 were enrolled in associate degree objective programs in evening classes.

These are only a small fraction of nearly 190,000 students who enroll for some kind of work in the local vocational Clearing out the river channel for today's big crafts makes little sense. In the first place, the river is too narrow for the big cruisers. A man in an ordinary fishing boat stands little chance when a 30 to 75-horsepower boat streaks by churning up the river. If the fisherman's boat isn't swamped by the waves, the river is so churned up he may as well forget about fishing.

At present the work by the Corps of Engineers, which has been promoted by the New London Boat Club, has reached from the famous fishing community of Fremont to somewhere near the Northport area, just south of New London.

Who is to say that sometime in the future they will want to go further upstream. It appears that it is time for a countermove to preserve the wilderness type of setting that the Wolf River offers right at the back door of the bustling Fox Cities area.

The Russian proposal simply calls for complete and general disarmament with no inspection, no control and no business of nationals of other countries snooping around. In the Russian proposal everyone would go and bury his own weapons and trust everyone else to do the same. There are no provisions about what to do in case some nation doesn't bury them all.

U Thant has been visiting Russia in an effort to get the support of the Soviet Union behind his bid for permanent rather than acting Secretary General of the United Nations. Presumably he can't get that support by telling the world how suspicious and treacherous the Communists are. But if he thinks the differences between the Western and Russian proposals for disarmament or test bans are mere "hairsplitting" he has lost his neutral status.

Under the Russian plan one of the first agencies which would be dissolved would be the office of Secretary General. If U Thant actually backs the Russian disarmament plan he would be aiding his own demise and that of the United Nations both as an organization and as separate and independent nations.

who is entitled to take that one who seems to him most suited.

Thus if a list of three eligible candidates contains the names of women in the first and second places, and a man in third place, it is possible for the man to be chosen without an overt violation of the statute or the spirit of the merit system as it has been administered at Madison for half a century. We may assume that similar practices are unconsciously or consciously involved in local government personnel recruiting and the naked eye persuades us that it is common also in the expanding civil service of the United States government.

Aside from the ideal of equal rights that is obviously involved here, there is the important consideration of waste in governmental services to the extent that competent and often superior applicants for governmental job assignments are arbitrarily denied. It would be a good idea for the governor, or a legislative committee relevant to this subject, to back up Mr. Wettengel's ideas with policy declarations of their own. The ideal of civil service in government employment won't be readily achieved until these subtle exceptions are removed.

schools each year. They are significant in the current debate about higher education accommodations in Wisconsin because they show the adaptability of these schools to changing needs, and the fact that they are already serving in important numbers the boys and girls who otherwise would be crowding to an even more painful extent the bulging state colleges and state universities.

Mr. Greiber says "additional explosive increases" in enrollment can be expected in the one year and two year post-high school services of the schools his agency supervises and aids with financial grants. Especially in the field of technical education, changes in the economy and in industrial technology will force more demands for these services.

The state report observes, with perhaps a degree of pride, that "Wisconsin has developed a quality system of post high school education which can be easily enlarged to meet other educational needs which may exist, or which develop in the future."

This is a resource in Wisconsin education that ought to be kept in mind when our politicians and some governmental officers talk loosely about setting up new systems.

Removal of Snags, Stumps, Trees From Wolf Not True Conservation

Editor, Post-Crescent:

Recently the Post-Crescent carried an article describing the current project of removing snags on the Wolf River by the Army Corps of Engineers.

I would like to comment on this project and a related problem, noting its effect on three groups, the boaters, fishermen and land and cottage owners.

A superficial reading of the article leaves one nodding his head in agreement. Examination of the actual project in operation and its implications for the future, however, must be alarming to any conservation-minded citizen.

For example, the article states that "all trees near the channel or creating a boating hazard have been marked for removal." The author of this letter, a resident on the Wolf River for over 15 years, surveyed a two mile section of the river below New London and found about 15 trees marked for removal. The vast majority of the trees were not "near the channel" nor "creating a boating hazard." Many of the marked trees were not even in the water. In most cases the channel was basically in the center of the river while the trees were along the shore line. There was sufficient room in all cases for boats to pass through without any difficulty. The long range effect of the removal of these trees along the banks of the Wolf is going to be harmful to the very group it is supposed to benefit, namely the boaters.

River Cuts Into Banks

Without overhanging trees and roots for protection, the river rapidly cuts into the river bank. The river gradually becomes more and more shallow as deep holes are filled in and sand bars are formed. The much-discussed solution of dredging the river is a useless process. Observation of the dredge in operation a few years ago revealed that silt was removed from the river on one side of the barge only to be deposited in the river on the other side of the barge where it soon washed back. Besides, as the river becomes wider and wider there would hardly be enough dredges in operation to keep the river open. The most depressing thought of all is the realization that the removal of trees along the river bank is simply inconsistent with sound conservation practices. Conservation literature constantly states that trees should be planted along gullies, streams and rivers to hold the banks. On the Wolf River today, we have a government-directed operation removing trees along the river bank and, thus, defeating this very principle of conservation. It is ironic indeed!

Another group will be seriously affected by the removal of snags and trees along the river. I have read newspapers from as far away as Chicago and Detroit expounding on the virtues of fishing on the "famous Wolf River." I fear this slogan is soon to become a thing of the past. The combination of large pleasure boats and snag removal is destroying the fishing on the Wolf. The hundreds of pleasure boats that invade the Wolf each summer are a menace to the fish and the fishermen.

A few years ago it was common for local cottage residents to catch bass, northern and even walleyes during the summer months on the Wolf. Angling for catfish in the early evening was always successful. Set lines produced many large Mississippi bullheads. Since the advent of the large pleasure boats and the removal of snags and trees along the river bank, the opposite is true. Small game fishing is poor, if it exists at all! Where there used to be 10-15 set lines, today one finds three or four.

The boats, many of them too large to be on a river the size of the Wolf, pound up and down the river, sending huge waves against the banks which results in chunks of soil several feet in size crashing in the river. This does not contribute to a healthy habitat for fish. Next, add the destructive force of the large pleasure boats the removal of trees and snags along the river banks which serve as protection for the banks and for the fish. The result is obvious. Where can the fish hide? What can they feed on? The snags are gone. The river banks have collapsed, the constantly rolling silt along the river bottom stifles the growth of plant life or covers it up. The muddy water encourages rough fish at the expense of game fish. A river with concrete sides and a concrete bottom filled with muddy water 'could not do a more destructive job.

Landowners Are Losing

Landowners and cottage owners along the Wolf should take notice also. Without protection for their river banks, landowners obviously are losing considerably more land to the river than they would with such protection. Much of the lost land consists of the better high land which, in turn, often means the loss of good timber or grazing pasture. Land devaluation is the result. Cottage owners are gradually losing their fishing to the removal of the snags and the large pleasure boat traffic. Small boating becomes dangerous with the presence of speeding large pleasure craft (many with complete disregard for the safety of others). Small boats are swamped in operation on the river as well as when tied to docks. Many of the pleasure boaters show no regard for the property of the cottage owners as evidenced by the fact that they do not watch the wake caused by their boats. Many boaters disregard the river buoys marking the channel and obstructions as they proceed to drive within several feet of the docks and moored boats causing damage with their waves. Many of the pleasure craft owners undoubtedly own cottages or lakes. I wonder what their reaction would be if such events took place near their property.

The Fox River Valley is growing in population and industrial opportunity. A vital related factor to this growth is the conservation of its natural resources. Civic organizations and individuals should take positive action in this area. The boaters have banded together to promote their interests (much of which, I believe, has been harmful to the public interest.) The fishermen, cottage owners and landowners must organize and make their influence felt if the Wolf River is to remain "famous" and not "infamous."

It is true that everyone has an equal right of access to the Wolf or any other river, stream or lake. It is just as true, however, that a heavy responsibility is attached to that right.

Something must be done now about the problem caused by snag removal and pleasure boating on the Wolf River.

Americans Seem to Have Become Of Age in Matters of Foreign Policy

BY ERIC SEVAREID

NEW YORK — If political thinkers find joy and surcease in the sports pages it is not only because most sports authorities write better than most political writers. It is because a baseball inning, game or season comes to an end and you can add up the score. In politics, especially in world politics, all you can do is add gains, subtract losses and try to estimate the general drift of the contest, which never ends.

For the past month this reporter has been sitting with groups of public servants, business men, writers and historians engaged in this cosmic guessing game. No nose counts were taken, and certainly there was not unanimity; yet there seemed to be a general consensus in each group and it was, on the whole, optimistic about the prospects for America and western ways of living. Ruling out a fatal push on his wrong push button, because that is as unpredictable as an earthquake, there was a deep feeling that the gathering of western military, political and economic strength is now, and is going to be, more than the totalitarian oppositions can cope with.

West Has Won

The rise and thrust of American, European and Japanese economic power and pressure seemed to most of the discussants a giant fact, hardly susceptible to overestimation. The irresistible contagion of Western popular arts and materials could not be projected in its final political influence; it could only be noted in some awe, with the inescapable conclusion that in this realm, at least, the West has already won the world.

None thought the Soviet Union is "ahead of us in science," not even in military science, save for rocket thrust. Very few expressed fears that the United States would break its democratic stride and fall under the essential control of any military cum scientific elite, while virtually all accepted that Soviet society has become measurably more liberal, more open to for-

Incumbency Is Great Advantage in Modern Political Campaigning

BY JOHN WYNGAARD

MADISON — As the electorate expands and public affairs grow more dominant and complex and communication between the public office aspirant and the voter grows more difficult and costly the advantage of incumbency is growing more significant in elections.

Two evident examples are offered in the campaigns of Sen. Alexander Wiley, Republican, and Gov. Gaylord Nelson, Democrat, for election to the senate seat that is opened in Wisconsin this year.

It is perfectly evident that if Nelson was a private citizen, without the build-up of his gubernatorial career, and perhaps equally important, without the resources at his command in his big state office, Sen. Wiley wouldn't have to worry much about his challenge.

A private citizen running in Nelson's position could scarcely summon the campaign budget to make himself heard.

Conversely, if Nelson as governor was competing with Alexander Wiley, private citizen and country lawyer at Chippewa Falls, the odds in the situation would be considerably changed also. It is hardly conceivable, indeed, that the Republican party would back a candidate running for the first time at the age of 78.

Sen. Wiley's campaign, as it is represented by his personal backers and his party organization, is not particularly oriented to his achievements or even his philosophy, but to the fact of his long time incumbency, his familiarity on the ballot over the period of more than a generation, and the value that may attach to long seniority in the seniority-conscious United States government.

OTHERS

But the incumbency asset relates to more tangible factors also. A man who has held high office is in a position to raise more campaign money more easily than the stranger approaching political "angels" for the first time. He has a note-book, if he has any sense for the political life at all, containing the names of hundreds of persons for whom he has done favors and who can be expected to be grateful.

His possession of an office is a material advantage that the private citizen running without such a perch must raise thousands of dollars to counteract. Sen. Wiley's Wisconsin office is in the federal building at Milwaukee where one of his government-paid secretaries is in charge. His office at Washington enjoys the franking privilege.

Similarly, Gov. Nelson's considerable executive office staff today is organized almost wholly for his senatorial campaign. Female secretaries are pouring over the Congressional Record, to find the raw material to fuel the anti-Wiley speeches staff assistants are writing in great numbers.

The fact that he is the chief executive of the state brings him opportunities for favorable public notice that he could never have without it.

CONGRESSMEN ETC.

A senior congressman told this correspondent not long ago that a man who is elected to the Congress, and pays reasonable attention to his campaign obligations, need never fear defeat under ordinary circumstances if he is using effectively all the campaign aids the national government has so generously authorized.

Some private citizens running against incumbents this fall are probably going to realize that advantage, ruefully, as they lay out their own money or that of their backers for services that their rivals can command at public expense.

Something of the same advantage accrues to certain other state government office-holders. The attorney generalship, for example, has opportunities for personal promotion second only to the governorship and Attorney General Revenolds has exploited them as effectively as any man who has ever held the office.

sign influences, and in its ideological operations abroad more the cautious established church than the church militant.

Most discounted the alleged deadlines of Soviet propaganda, observing that no "newly emergent" people in the world, since the war, had voluntarily chosen the Communist road.

Vulnerable Areas

All seemed agreed, however, that strategic regions of the globe could still be lost to subversion and coups and that still other regions could become unmanageable either from within or without by reason of population growth and the foundering of political and economic controls in the face of this gigantic phenomenon.

When we considered the course of American foreign policy in this century, agreement emerged on what seemed fundamental alterations, but other uncertainties remained in our minds. It seemed clear that this nation has permanently put behind her notions of political imperialism; the flirtation with that kind of power, beginning with Theodore Roosevelt, was both brief and embarrassing. The American people, as George Kenan has observed, can deal with others only within the "citizen" concept; it's simply not in our blood. There seemed agreement that in terms of "economic imperialism" there has been a great change, however gradually and imperceptibly, to hostile young idealists abroad; it has come about, American private business abroad, as in Latin America, simply does not, on the whole, operate as it did 50 years ago.

There was a feeling that at long last, for the first time since the days of our somewhat irresponsible meddling in China with the Open Door performance, we have come to understand the realities and responsibilities of power and to roughly equate our practical commitments abroad with our military and economic strength. We can back-up our alliances anywhere around the globe; we can provide the money we have committed to foreign societies.

But a great doubt remained. It concerns our moral commitments abroad. We persist in thinking that we know what is best for other people in terms of their own domestic institutions and political mores, and what we think is best is the Anglo-Saxon concept of life.

We can insist on national freedom for any emerging country and perhaps get away with it, because that is the drift of the world; but we cannot insist, or so many of us felt, on internal, individual freedoms. We cannot act as a transmission belt to give virtues that are essentially personal ones to sovereign states, either by imposition or by persuasion. This Calvinistic approach to a wildly varied world is as dangerously futile now as it was in the days when Woodrow Wilson, the "Presbyterian priest," was saying that we would "teach the Mexicans to elect good men."

Can't Make Demands

There was a current of conviction in these discussions that we have hastily, foolishly and in the face of 50 years bitter experience, morally overextended ourselves; that in this realm our commitments far outbalance our resources. We can hold up political democracy and the rule of law as an aspiration and help others toward it by many quiet, unofficial actions. What we cannot and must not do is make it a requirement — or our aid, our friendship or our recognition.

Most of the round-tableers could see no alternative to a frankly pluralistic foreign policy — aiding here, withdrawing aid there, giving de facto recognition to one, de jure recognition to another, intervening where necessary, refusing to intervene where refusal is necessary. None could formulate an over-all, governing principle, moral or otherwise, that really fits the mosaic of this political world; none argued that our moral responsibilities could extend beyond our practical capacity to implement them.

Some may see in these conclusions the abandonment of the great American tradition; but most of us in the Aspen discussions saw, rather, the end of the age of American innocence in foreign policy. We saw the end of an illusion which probably has done more harm than good in the last 60 years, since Americans re-emerged on the world scene after a century of protected concentration on building a domestic society so successful that we have automatically assumed its by-laws are not only the highest work of man but universally desired and universally workable.

Making Decisions Is President's Most Important Job

BY BELMAN MORIN
Associated Press Special Correspondent

WASHINGTON (AP) — When President Kennedy was weighing the pros and cons of a tax cut recently, one of his intimates remarked with a wry smile, "There are 200 guys pushing him one way and 200 others shoving him in the opposite direction."

Every President has known this ordeal.

The question confronting Kennedy was a two-headed hydra. Was another business recession threatening the economy? If so, would a tax reduction be the best counter-measure? Vast disagreement split the nation's top economists. One group, predicting serious trouble, called for the quick cut to head it off. Others took the opposite view. Both were emphatic.

Still other factors complicated the equation — political considerations, the question of timing, the kind of reduction, if any. Advice and counsel for all quarters rattled the windows of the President's office.

Kennedy listened to all the arguments. Then he made his decision. He would wait for the July figures on the economy. By mid-August, they were in hand. The indicators were pointing upwards by comparison with June.

Thereupon, he announced on television that he saw no "clear and present danger" to the economy. Barring an unforeseen slump, he said, he would wait until next January and then send Congress a bill providing cuts in both "corporate and personal income taxes."

This is a classic illustration of the axiom that former President Truman kept on his desk. The sign read:

"The buck stops here."

In other words, the President of the United States has no one to whom he can pass responsibility for the final judgment on a vital problem. Ultimately, the decision rests with him.

McKinley Decision

Reaching it is a lonely and often an agonizing process. A graphic example in history was President McKinley's description of his anguish over the controversial question of whether to Spanish-American War. He said: "I walked the floor of the White House night after night. I went down on my knees and prayed almighty God for light and guidance more than one night. And one night late it came to me this way — I don't know how it was, but it came."

Kennedy is not one to lie awake nights studying a problem. Like most men, however, he says he has often gone to bed worrying about something that never came to pass.

When the moment of decision finally comes, he relies to a considerable degree on his own judgment. Discussing this with a reporter during his 1960 presidential campaign, Kennedy said quickly:

"I have reasonable confidence in my judgment. I think it has proven sound, and I have sufficient detachment about it to feel confident about it."

But in addition, he is a Herculean consultant. Approaching a tough decision, he first calls in men qualified to give him informed opinion and first-hand information. He compares their views with what he reads in a wide assortment of newspapers and magazines.

Trades Ideas

On the question of the tax cut, for example, Kennedy consulted economists, congressional leaders, members of the cabinet, White House advisers, businessmen and labor leaders. While a domestic problem is still in the "kicking-around" stage, before it has to be decided, he is most likely to discuss it with his brother, Atty. Gen. Robert F. Kennedy. Similarly, on a foreign policy issue, he trades preliminary ideas with Secretary of State Dean Rusk and Secretary of Defense Robert McNamara.

In a conference, he often abandons the famous rocking chair and stands beside his desk. He fires off a crisp question. When it is answered, he asks another, equally terse. The conversation usually moves at triphammer speed. He seldom takes any notes.

Kennedy seems to have the memory of an electronic computer. Months after the the Pathet Lao disturbances in Laos, he licked off for a visitor the sequence of moves in the Communist operations. He named obscure villages and the remote regions involved. He did not refer to any records.

Sometimes, he moves slowly. A case in point is the recent American proposal to the Soviet Union on disarmament. The revised offer might reduce by more than half the number of atomic detection stations — 180 — previously considered necessary to watch for violations of a treaty banning nuclear tests. It became possible through improved methods of identifying underground explosions.

Seeks Decision

The new scientific information was placed before the President in June. He hoped it would lead to an agreement with the Russians, which he wants very much.

First, however, he called advisers to a set of meetings at the White House. They lasted almost a week. Among others, he summoned Arthur H. Dean, chief U. S. disarmament negotiator at Geneva, former Secretary of Defense Robert Lovett, John McCloy, former special adviser on disarmament, and John McCone, chief of the Central Intelligence Agency.

It was not until Aug. 8, some seven weeks later, that the American proposal was laid before the world.

But when necessary, Kennedy can move fast.

Last May 11, a Friday, the Associated Press correspondent in Laos, Antoine Yared, flashed the news of an advance by pro-Communist troops that "carried them more than 100 miles beyond the cease-fire line to the border of western Thailand." A Red move against Thailand appeared to be in the making.

Kennedy was in Virginia for the weekend. He cut it short to meet with his advisers. Within 48 hours he had alerted hundreds of U. S. military units in the Pacific for possible landings in Thailand. He had already communicated with Thai authorities.

By May 15, American jet attack planes were nearing Thailand and the Marines were on the way. And on the same

Sitting Alone and Thoughtful, President John F. Kennedy is surrounded by problems on which he must make the ultimate decisions. Typical of problems he has faced are: The question of disarmament, pointed up by the mushroom cloud of an atomic test explosion (bottom left); a quick decision last May to send American troops to Thailand, where natives in boats watch a carrier arrive (left top); and touch-and-go events in the Dominican Republic after dictator Trujillo's assassination — accentuated by a demonstration against American Ambassador Morrison (top right). At bottom, the slogan, "The buck stops here," of the sign which former President Truman kept on his desk as a reminder that the ultimate responsibility lay on him. In April, more than a month before the assassination, a confidential report advised Kennedy that Trujillo was "in trouble and probably won't last long." The danger of an attempted coup by Fidel Castro and the Cuban Communists, when or if Trujillo were unseated, immediately arose. There were Castro symptoms in the Dominican Republic last year confronted Kennedy with an even more complicated series of decisions. They began with the assassination of the dictator, Rafael Trujillo May 31, and the sequence was this —

Dominican Crisis

Soon after, Communist forces began pulling back from the Thai border. In about a week pathizers in the Dominican Republic.

The President was in Paris on June 1 when word of the assassination reached him. He gave the situation top priority in his telephone conferences with Secretary of State Rusk.

On the same day, Rafael Trujillo Jr. became chief of the armed forces of his country — which was tantamount to being the head of state. A poet, lawyer and diplomat, Joaquin Balaguer, was installed as the provisional president.

Two days later, American officials reported that some of the men who had risen to power in the new regime were "violently anti-American and show pro-Communist leanings."

Four Objectives

On June 7, Kennedy called a White House meeting to formulate American policy in this situation. Four principal objectives were decided upon, namely:

1. To ease the restrictions on civil liberties imposed years before by the elder Trujillo.
2. To erode the military, political and economic power of Trujillo and his two uncles, Hector and Arzobispo. (The latter possessed a private army.)
3. To strengthen middle-of-the-road political groups.
4. To work with Balaguer, giving him the opportunity to carry out his promises to democratize the country.

Those were the objectives. How to implement them?

As the summer wore along, the situation deteriorated steadily. Serious riots broke out in July. The moderate political groups, lacking experience and leadership, melted around fruitlessly in the effort to unite. On Aug. 24, a report reached Washington that money and skilled agents provocateurs were entering the country from Cuba, apparently with the tacit consent of the army. The danger of a military coup — a short-lived one did in fact take place later — seemed to be increasing.

Rusk Memorandum

On Aug. 26, Rusk sent Kennedy a long memorandum. It was broken down into five sections, two of which set forth the bargaining assets of the United States and some possible courses of action.

Rusk listed nine bargaining cards, but concluded: "It will be noted that our bargaining assets, although important, do not afford the ability to control the situation in the Dominican Republic."

Nevertheless, by November, Trujillo had been persuaded to relinquish some of the family property, and his two uncles had been eased out of the country. A few weeks later, they returned, creating turmoil that appeared to endanger the lives of the 2,000 Americans in the country.

The news of this reached Kennedy by telephone in Bonham, Texas, where he was attending the funeral of Rep. Sam Rayburn. He ordered the Navy to move. A flotilla of 14 ships took stations within sight of the capital city, Ciudad Trujillo. The people cheered them. The uncles again departed.

Events moved so fast, a state Department officer says, that "there were times when briefing papers were outdated before they could be typed up."

President's Decision

In mid-December, Kennedy made the crucial decision — that Balaguer must be persuaded to resign. In the President's view, he had proved unable or unwilling to stabilize the country and effect democratic reforms.

Kennedy then met with presidents Romulo Betancourt of Venezuela and Lleras Camargo of Colombia to get their advice and assistance. At the same time he waved some of the nine bargaining cards toward Balaguer — restoration of diplomatic relations, a "windfall" sugar quota, exploration of the possibility of removing the economic sanctions imposed years before by the Organization of American States, and other forms of assistance.

On Dec. 17, Balaguer announced a plan to create a new seven-man governing council, and agreed to resign as soon as the OAS sanctions were removed. "I will consider my mission concluded when the sanctions are removed," he announced. A month later, it was all over.

Atomic Research Develops Versatile Ray For Communications, Medicine and War

BY ALTON BLAKESLEE
AP Staff Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — A thin, intense beam of red light streaks through the air in the laboratory room.

It is a fantastic new kind of light. And riding in on its beam is a coming scientific revolution, bound profoundly to affect human life.

As concentrated energy, this beam can burn holes instantly in diamonds or steel.

Directed into space, such a beam has lighted up a small area of the moon, 225,000 miles away, and has been detected bouncing back again.

As a medical aid, the heat from such a beam has "welded" the detached retina of the human eye back into place.

Only Beginnings

This light could become tomorrow's "death ray," disabling speeding enemy missiles or spying satellites. It possibly could be the "fantastic new weapon" Premier Khrushchev alluded to recently.

It could become a kind of visible radio by which spacemen talk with each other, and even send TV pictures, between Mars or the moon and Earth. It promises to become an accurate new kind of radar to guide spaceships on missions, or to rendezvous in space.

It also bids to greatly enlarge memory capabilities of computers, and to find scores of uses in science and industry.

By 1970, devices producing this light could amount to a billion dollar industry, or better.

Yet this new light was only an idea four years ago, unless Soviet scientists started working on it earlier.

The light beams are created in a device known as the laser. It produces light all of the same color, or frequency, which scatters scarcely at all.

Few if any discoveries have swept forward as quickly as the laser, and its forerunner, the maser, utilizing the same scientific principle.

11 Years Ago

It was just 11 years ago that Dr. Charles H. Townes, then teaching physics at Columbia University and now provost at Massachusetts Institute of Technology, conceived the idea of the maser. The name is an acronym for microwave amplification by simulated emission of radiation. Microwaves are radio waves.

Such a device — let's save the explanation a while — can amplify weak signals, without producing noise itself.

Masers now are the core of the big antenna ears picking up the signals from Telstar, the communications satellite. Masers also amplify the weak radio signals or noises coming from the planets, and distant galaxies.

Four years ago Dr. Townes and Dr. Arthur L. Schawlow of Bell Telephone Laboratories suggested light could be amplified in similar fashion in an optical maser, or laser.

Many Lasers

Only two years ago, Hughes Aircraft Company scientists demonstrated the first laser which sent forth bursts of intense light, all of it coherent, or of the same wave length.

In stunning speed since then, dozens of lasers have been developed, including some emitting continuous beams.

Dozens of uses are predicted for lasers, says a report by technology Markets, Inc., New York. It estimates $10 to $15 million are being spent on laser and maser research this year, engaging full or part-time work of 2,000 scientists and engineers. It foresees sales of $260 millions to $1.4 billion by 1970.

Why?

Because light is one form of energy of radiation, as are heat and radio waves.

Concentrated light can heat and burn things, not unlike sunlight through a magnifying glass.

And the light waves from a laser are all step, all of the same frequency or color, so they can be beamed or directed like radio waves. The light spreads so little that a pencil-thick beam starting from Earth could be focused so that it would illuminate an area only two miles in diameter on the moon. And the beam presumably can be modulated or coded to carry intelligent signals, as with radio.

This means lasers could open up a vast new range of frequencies or channels of communication, millions of times more than the spectrum or "window" of frequencies covered by radio waves. Laser beams could become the main communications system across space.

Lasers, declares Air Force Gen. Bernard A. Schriever, "may prove to be more important to the world than the development of the ballistic missile, the discovery of the transistor, or the reality of Telstar."

Laser beams of high energy might knock out sensing devices and controls in missiles or satellites — or re-charge batteries in a satellite, he points out.

As radar, laser beams possibly could measure speeds of spacecraft from 18,000 miles per hour to virtual standstill, for precision guidance, as in joining or docking two spaceships.

Bursts of laser light from weather satellites might be useful in measuring water vapor, carbon dioxide or dust content of the earth's atmosphere.

In medicine, lasers could bring knifeless surgery to destroy diseased tissue with pinpoint precision. In eye surgery, a beam has been used to burn tiny sections around a detached retina, so that in healing, the tissue re-attached the retina.

Similar potentials exist in nerve and brain surgery.

Concentrated, pin-pointed laser energy burned a hole through a diamond in a split second. This augurs super-precision machining, welding and drilling of all sorts of hard materials. Laser energy might vaporize some chemicals for precise analysis, or control reactions by selective heating of a single ingredient in a chemical mixture.

Laser heat also might be helpful in research to control the H-bomb reaction for useful power.

Visible Light

Lasers operate in infrared and visible light frequencies. Lasers producing blue-green light someday possibly might go underwater to measure distances, detect submarines, or transmit messages between subs.

In computers, laser light may substitute for electric current in wires to carry information. On the battlefield, portable laser radars may measure distances to targets, by timing the reflected light beam.

Predictions are rife, and enthusiasm high. Laser development to reach high energy, to design better materials, and solve other problems is being pushed by many companies and universities.

The heart of a laser can be either a solid crystal, such as a ruby or many other materials, or gases such as neon or argon.

The basic principle is to feed in some energy, in the form of radio or light waves, which excite some atoms of the crystal or gas. Absorbing some of this energy, the atoms move to a higher or lower level of energy.

When these excited atoms are struck by incoming packets of radio or light energy — by photons — they emit photons and drop back to a lower level of energy.

This "stimulated emission" amplifies the wave inside the device as the wave is reflected back and forth inside the chamber so it can draw more energy from excited atoms.

All the energy emitted by the atoms is of the same frequency or wave length, giving a coherent beam when some of the light is allowed to come out of the laser.

There are several techniques now whereby atoms are induced to reach the excited state, and emit energy or radiation. The future, say many scientists, appears as bright as the light streaming from the laser.

He Can't See Any Apathy

Scoring Rules in California Election Too Deep for Ryskind

BY MORRIE RYSKIND

Two learned political analysts for The Los Angeles Times report that, while the eyes of the rest of the country are focused on the gubernatorial race between Pat Brown and Dick Nixon, California voters themselves are apathetic.

derogatory implication is obvious.

From my worm's-eye view, this is an extremely shortsighted appraisal of the patriotic citizens of the Golden State, who are anything but apathetic about matters affecting their vital destiny. The criticism may not have been written in malice, but it reveals, alas, the utter parochialism of the so-called specialists who don't get around as much as we general practitioners do.

No Apathy at Games

Certainly no man who had ever witnessed a crucial Giant-Dodger series at Candlestick Park or watched the Yanks play the Angels at Chavez Ravine could charge Californians with apathy.

I don't know the exact word to describe the scene when myriads of dignified matrons rise to their feet, shaking like Holy Rollers as they shout and pray for Little Albie to get a hit, and fill the air with the fervent "Hallelujahs!" usually reserved for revival meetings when their prayers are answered. But I'm sure the proper term is not apathy.

Affects Every Man

Nevertheless, we have been studying the gubernatorial contest, fully aware that this is one world and that what happens here affects every man, woman and child in Outer Mongolia and Ghana, just as we know that what happens in Katanga, Laos and the Yankee Stadium affects us. Especially the Yankee Stadium.

If we have not yet become violent partisans, it is because the Nixon-Brown contest presents many puzzles we are still trying to resolve. We have no desire to jump into the fray half-cooked.

The stately matrons who cut loose at the ball park know their baseball thoroughly. They are hep to all the fine points about when to lay down a bunt and when the infield should move back to double-play depth. And they are aided by the fact that the rules are the same for both sides: That three strikes are out and a foul is always a foul, no matter which side is up.

But the rules of the political game in California, as laid down by the Democratic lawmakers now in control, are far more complicated. The same play, for example, may be scored differently, depending on which team is at bat.

The Scoring Plays

For example, at the recent Democratic state convocation, there was displayed a sticker, obviously of Republican origin, reading "Is Brown Pink?" This allusion to the alleged fact that Gov. Brown has a good many supporters who are somewhat leftish in their tendencies was labeled a palpable foul ball, and a strike was duly recorded against Mr. Nixon.

On the other hand, any allusion to Nixon's alleged right-wing supporters gives the batsman free transportation to first base. And when Pat Brown calls Nixon a coward for not showing up at a labor convention to which he had pointedly not been invited, Pat is credited with a clean hit. An attack on Dick's mother and brother—neither of whom is running this year—is scored as a ground-rule double; and the assertion by the new state chairman that Nixon is a "distempered charlatan and demagogue" and that "the whole litany of the credo for political chicanery may be found in his utterances" is a home run.

We'll get the hang of it before November, but it isn't going to be easy. Meanwhile, we bitterly resent having our calm, judicious inquiry into an intensely complicated subject labeled as apathy by superficial observers who are the larval mercenaries of a venal press.

Neenah Production Will Help Provide Bus for Palsied

Broadway Contralto Mary Leitzke Will Star in Benefit Performance

NEENAH — "Autumn Showcase" at 7:30 p.m. Monday at the Riverside Park Pavilion will sparkle with guest star Mary Ann Leitzke, Broadway contralto; vocalists, Ann Darrow and Terry Earl, and singing team Mary Lett and Tom Hrubicky, recent leads in "Carousel."

Plans for the performance were in the hands of Miss Judy Britton, master of ceremonies. Auer will bring fellow magician Oshkosh, Judy Krause, Menasha; Jack Staley into the benefit performance with slight-of-hand. The program includes dance numbers with Mary Dorschner and Debbie Klockzien, Ann Sherman, all of Menasha, Mary Sherman, Ripon, and Karen Wagner, Oshkosh.

Musical Background
Providing a musical background for the benefit show will be "The Islanders," Phil Dutcher, Jeff Smith and Fred Thompson, the trombone quartet of Anne DeLong, Rick DeBenedetto, Jim Stinger and Mike MacGregor and the string trio with Kris Peterson, Kathy Angermeyer and Kathy Schweder.

The first in a series of benefit shows to provide a bus for cerebral palsied children in Winnebago, "Autumn Showcase" is being presented by Friends of Cerebral Palsy, a county office held in the ehal Palsy in the Fox Valley area and John Felker, Neenah chairman. The $7,500 bus will be used to transport children to Mercy Hospital C. P. School, Oshkosh. The service will be offered for the first time to eligible boys and girls in Winnebago, Waushara, Green Lake and Fond du Lac counties.

36 Passenger Model
The bus should be a 36-passenger model, modified by the removal of all but 16 seats, equipped with lock stanchions, head rests, number of electors to cross party and safety belts. The back part of the bus will drop down and form a loading ramp for convenient handling of the cerebral palsied children. The life service of the vehicle will range between seven and 10 years on the basis of its intended use: transportation to school, to the Friendship Club, which meets every two weeks at 617 S. State St., Chilton, Democra and other programs. Maintenance, garage costs and driver expense will be paid by the United Cerebral Palsy Fund of Winnebago, Oshkosh. Proceeds from the benefit shows will be deposited in the National Manufacturers' Bank of Neenah. There is no admission charge for the "Showcase." Donations will be accepted during the performance.

Oshkosh C of C To Vote for Directors

OSHKOSH — Chamber of Commerce members are to ballot for Friday on seven directors, choosing from 12 nominees. Ballots are to be returned by mail and postmarked not later than midnight Friday.

Nominated are Tom Drummond of Mules Kimball Co., Sid Hirschbeig of Jeffrey's, Richard Kiltz of Wisconsin Telephone Co., Martin Kozak of Rockwell - Standard Corp., Joe LeRoy of Stannard Launderers and Dry Cleaners, Richard G. Marshall of Marshall Sales and Service.

Byron Murken of Northwestern Mutual Life Insurance Co., Ray Paul of Kline's Department Store, Don Porter of Mueller - Potter Drug Co., Andy Rutz of Andy's Standard Service, Carl Schroeder of Wisconsin National Life Insurance Co., and Dr. Les Stone, physician.

Write-in candidates also may be submitted. The 12 nominees were submitted by a committee of Hy Egan, chairman, Martin Mondl, Ted Patterson, Ed Garthwaite, Dr. Robert Schoenewetter, Charles Fiss, Warren Coe and Paul Carver.

Fair Weather Ahead, Barometers Predict

BY JACK LEFLER
AP Business News Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Economic barometers during the week indicated fair weather, but warnings of possible storms beyond the horizon persisted.

The preponderance of new business statistics was favorable, however, the improvement was by no means impressive.

And opinion about the state of business remained sharply divided.

Better Than Expected

For example, the Federal Reserve Bank of New York said that currently available information "seems to confirm that the economy has weathered an unusual combination of adverse influences better than many people expected."

On the other hand, George Meany, president of the AFL-CIO said, "We are not growing fast enough economically to keep pace with our growing population and sooner or later we will be in serious trouble."

The employment-unemployment picture could be viewed two ways. The number of employed rose to a record 69,762,000 in August against seasonal expectations of a decline. Unemployment, which usually shows a substantial drop at this time of the year, fell off only slightly. As a result, the rate rose to 5.8 per cent of the work force from 5.3 per cent in July.

Recession Not in Sight

Seymour Wolfbein, deputy assistant secretary of labor, said he didn't see anything in the job figures pointing to a recession.

Automobile and steel production have perked up.

The automakers, nearing full stride in output of 1963 models, turned out an estimated 66,000 passenger cars against 35,378 during the week. They are expected to operate at full blast this month, assembling 456,000 cars, compared with 195,518 in August. If sales hold up, production is expected to soar even higher in October.

The stock market retreated in the first trading of what Wall Street considers the new business year.

Stock sales for the week totaled 304 million shares daily compared with 2.87 million the previous week. The total was 12,095,568 against 14,327,660 for the five sessions in the previous week.

Bond sales amounted to $16,430,000 million par value, due to lack of trading on Monday's Labor Day holiday.

Steel output renewed its advance during the week with mills melting 1,672,000 tons, up 3.8 per cent over the previous week. For the year through Sept. 1, production totaled 67,978,000 tons, a gain of 9.4 per cent over the comparable period last year.

Businessmen were particularly cheered by the condition of the paperboard industry, which they consider a sensitive indicator of future business. Paperboard is the material from which most boxes for packaging merchandise are made.

Paperboard Orders Increase

The National Paperboard Association reported orders to mills in the four weeks ended Aug. 25 increased 6.4 per cent over the comparable 1961 period.

The Federal Reserve Board reported department store sales dropped slightly in August from the July level but said it considered the volume of business held up pretty well in view of fears of a steeper decline.

Total business sales—manufacturers, wholesalers and retailers—attained a record of $66.5 billion in July, the latest period for which figures were available. This was two per cent above June volume. Most of the gain came from retail sales.

New construction in August held even with the July level at an annual rate of $62.2 billion but was 7 per cent above August 1961.

The House of the Week

U-Shaped Small House Space Saver

BY JULES LOH

There's a big difference — in fact, many big differences — between a small house and a cramped house, even though both may contain the same amount of floor space.

Anyone who has lived in a cramped house knows the irritants doors that open into living or work areas and encroach on the already limited space, rooms that you can't get to without crossing through another room, children having to run to the bathroom at night in full view of a house full of guests, lack of adequate closet and storage space.

Architectural Flaws

These are only a few, but all are of the type many young homemakers don't discover until after they've lived in their new house awhile; the sweet dream of acquiring "our own home at last" frequently blurs its less obvious architectural flaws.

Usually one glance from the curb is all it takes to tell a good small house from a bad small house. If the house has a lackluster, box-like exterior, it's a safe bet the interior design is equally unimaginative.

Comfortable Dwelling

In the hands of a skillful architect, however, 1,200 to 1,300 square feet of living area can be molded into a home which is a delight to live in as well as to look at, a comfortable dwelling both for the well established family and the unseasoned newbies.

This is the type chosen for today's House of the Week, design J-38 in the series. It is the product of architect Alfred H. Ryder, a man of proven ability in the small home field.

Three Bedrooms

The house contains only 1,263 square feet of living area, yet contains three bedrooms of nice proportions, 1½ baths, a foyer, large living room, and a roomy kitchen-dining area with a folding wall separation. It also has a full basement and an attached garage.

Its overall dimensions, including the garage, are 49'2" wide by 39'8" deep, which means it would fit comfortably on a 75' lot.

A modified U-shape design provides not only an interesting exterior but also permits a floor of a simple rectangle. It also makes the house look considerably larger.

Uncommon Luxury

To illustrate architect Ryder's rank high on the list of best-selling unusual talent, look how he has ing do-it-yourself materials. Their provided for a foyer — an un-continued popularity is due to common luxury in most homes of their ease of application, even by this size. # Converting Plant Nears Completion

Great Northern Aims For Oct. 1 Start-Up

BY JAMES AUER
Post-Crescent Business Editor

MENASHA — Pre-planning is paying off for executives of the Fox Cities' newest paper-related industry.

Careful scheduling of installation of machinery at the Highway 41 headquarters of Great Northern Container Corp. is speeding completion of the steel-and-concrete plant.

James Davis, president of the newly-organized converting firm, estimates that production will begin before Oct. 1, and that the sheet plant will ultimately employ some 25 persons.

At the moment, the Hoffman Construction Co., general contractor, is concentrating on completing the plant, which measures 120 by 240 feet and contains some 30,000 square feet. Height at the eaves is 16 feet.

Machinery ordered from Brooklyn, N.Y., South Beloit, and Grafton, Wis., is delivered at the plant as soon as the foundation is ready to receive it. Wednesday a huge truck arrived at the plant, carrying a stacker and eccentric slotter manufactured by the S. S. Corrugated Machinery Co., of Brooklyn.

New machinery, incorporating the latest time-saving devices, is being installed in the building, Davis said.

"Six or seven more pieces are coming in. We have a machine saw at South Beloit, a hand saw at Grafton and more coming from S. and S. in Brooklyn."

The plant is designed so that sheets of corrugate can be trucked from suppliers and delivered at one end of the plant, and the finished product stored at the other end.

The sheets to be processed will be purchased from prime producers of corrugate, and converted into shipping containers, liners, pads and other products, as desired. Ground was broken for the plant in May of this year.

Davis said the 8.5-acre site on Highway 41 was chosen because it offered plenty of space for expansion, as well as excellent access to major highways and valley industrial areas. The firm has ordered a truck to make local deliveries.

Although the building has been designed to be strictly utilitarian and as maintenance-free as possible, it will be decorated so as to be attractive from the highway.

A box-shaped logotype, symbolizing the company's operations, will be mounted above the lannon-stone trim on the front of the building. Large white enameled letters will span the pre-finished turquoise-colored, rolled-steel facing of the building.

An example of the designers' desire to reduce maintenance to a minimum is the fact that aluminum window-frames are used throughout the building.

Office space and a display room are incorporated into the front of the plant. A supply room, shipping in from suppliers and delivered office and lunchroom are also being constructed. Since priority is being given to completion of the manufacturing area, the offices and other rooms may be finished off later than Oct. 1.

Steel components for the building were manufactured by the Butler Co.

"Continued pressure in the race for expansion among major converters has created opportunities for local sheet plant operations," Davis said, in explaining the decision to launch the converting business.

"There is a tendency among local companies to place more and more orders locally."

Officers of the company, in addition to Davis, are John Maring, sales manager, and Robert Brown, secretary.

National President To Be Special Guest At Fraternity Meeting

GREEN BAY — The Delta Alpha transportation fraternity at Shawano Community Hospital will have its first meeting of the year at 7:30 p.m. Monday at Shorewood Country Club.

The national president of the fraternity, E. N. Hensen, Houston, Tex., will be present. Delegates from the mid-west and North Central regions will attend.

Births Set Record At Shawano Hospital

SHAWANO — A record number of babies born was reported for the second straight month in August.

The old record was 54 in July. The August total was 56 with 33 boys, 23 girls and a set of twins.

Commonwealth to Start Common Market Debate

BY TOM OCHILTREE
LONDON (AP)—Prime Minister Harold Macmillan and his colleagues of the British Commonwealth Saturday cautiously approached this new international problem. Will the European Common Market destroy their own unique sisterhood of nations?

They start discussing this complex issue behind locked doors Monday in stately Marlborough House, a former royal residence in the heart of London. It is an anxious time.

The six-nation Common Market was not organized to collapse the Commonwealth. Far from it. Yet the dynamic changes already wrought promise great shifts in the world's power structure.

Great Changes
If Britain joins the changes should be even greater, and the nebulous, multiracial Commonwealth stretching around the globe may fall apart, some people fear.

Despite mounting political pressures at home and abroad, Macmillan wants to take Britain into the Common Market as soon as he can. He seeks to gain for his own island kingdom the benefits of the economic miracle now transforming Western Europe.

New Lines, Colors, Fabrics Herald Beginning of Exciting Fashion Season

BY JEAN OTTO
Post-Crescent Women's Editor

Long before Madame Nature has cast aside her summer garments and donned the foliage of autumn, the fashion conscious woman has cast her eyes toward the days and months ahead and journeyed into a whole new world of fabric, color and style. It's a joyful excursion, and this year it's filled with the excitement that presages discovery.

Milady, standing with her spyglass focused on fall, will find the treasure of four distinct looks from which to choose. She may desire only one, or wish to incorporate all into her wardrobe. There is something for everyone, to be worn with the complete assurance of being in step with the fashion rhythm.

The four looks for fall and winter are the Natural, including free form, waist-ignoring designs; the Spare, which incorporates tailored jackets, coats and shift dresses; the Mata Hari, depicted by muffled necklines and luxurious fur borders, and the Casual, with easy-fitting pullovers, overblouses, and pea jackets over dresses.

The influence of the international flavor of our times is apparent in Rajah princess-shaped coats and jackets, and dresses for both day and evening. This near-eastern influence is seen in coats, gently shaped all around with a slight flare at the hemline; cardigan or mandarin necklines, giant jewel closings and carefully widened three-quarter sleeves.

For evening, milady may once again indulge in the luxury of floor-length gowns. They will be steeped in femininity, calling forth the use of wonderful fabrics—matelasses, brocades, brocatelles—or clingy, in wool or crepe—the newest for evening wear. Opera coats will be of satin or brocade, often fur lined or collared.

Furs will be style leaders this season, appearing on borders, collars, inside linings. Coat

A slim, high waisted evening dress of gold silk velvet with matching coat appears in Ceil Chapman's Fall 1962 collection. The costume, from a group of Byzantine-inspired dresses, is lavish with gold embroidery tracing the high bodice line and outlining the coat. In the background is a reproduction of the Ravenna Mosaic of Empress Theodora c. 300-1450.

A Paul Parnes dress and jacket costume rings out the clear color for fall. The above costume of red wool has a black seal collar and pocket detail. Designed by Beni Clarie, the dress is easy-fitting with a natural waistline and welt seaming detail. At left is an elegant two-piece town costume in diamond knit created by designer Stephanie Koret. The cut-away jacket in diamond jacquard has a notched hemline and tailored collar faced with solid diamond knit. Sleeves are set in for the important 'Spare' look. One of San Francisco's colorful cable cars is in the background.

A return to the classics with a twist of newness in interpretation of colors, fabric surfaces and silhouette constitute the vogue for Fall 1962.

Colors are wearable and flattering in camels, pine green, authentic tartan reds, greys and the gamut of the brown spectrum. Fabrics are in perfect harmony with these colors—classic flannels, smooth, rich melton cloths, authentic tartans, and handsome herringbones, checks and tweeds.

Casualness Dominates
Sportswear combines casualness with ease of co-ordination of separates and sweaters that is the "American look" recognized and copied the world over. The American look has been characterized in the "Western look" with its wealth of ideas—frontier pants, scarfed dresses and shirts, hunt coats and high boots.

Coats and suits are fitted most often with contour fitted fronts and loose backs or with the princess silhouette. Again, fabrics are classic with meltons and tweeds predominating.

The shift and loosely fitted dresses are definitely in and will be for seasons ahead. Comfort and understatement summarize these styles which are described as "throw-away" elegance. Dress and jackets with fur trim lead the ensemble look.

Fur is Everywhere
In fact, fur is everywhere, not only in trim, but in linings of coats and jackets.

New fall fabrics are found in all these styles and include a revolutionary new 100% Worsted wool flannel that is completely sportswear wool stretch, and a new permanently pleatable all wool flannel that is completely washable. Coating fabrics include wool and fur blend fabrics, soft wool flannels, sculptured Chinchilla, and a smooth melton touch.

The classic look has never been so new and exciting.

Prothy and Textured as sea foam is this sophisticated coachman design coat, above. Smart dress, comfortable warmth against the chilly winds of winter, this coat will be a number one choice among fashion conscious women this winter. The wide black patent belt and smart black buttons sparkle below the wide standup collar. At right, a raincoat that anyone would want to wear every day. The double breasted glen plaid coat has slash pockets and tab sleeves for fashion styling.

Country casualness that looks elegant downtown or for travel are these smart, snug coats. Above, the fashionable A line is carried out by flaring match-box pleats stitched neatly at the sides and softly belted across the back. The smart seven-eighths length town and country coat, at right, is water and spot repellent. The contrasting double saddle stitching accents the collar, pockets and raglan sleeves.

Step Out on the Coolest days and not even feel the cold in this "warm as toast" chinchilla coat, above. Deep patch pockets and notched shawl collar are the fashion points on this coat. A very special cardigan dickey snuggles up to neck to give you protection from chilly gusts.

Fall Fashions Offer Variety of 'Looks'

costumes are very new, many of the coats being bulky man-tailored designs worn over two piece overblouse dresses.

In colors, look for shades of greens, including moss, olive and the range of bronze tones, tawny topaz, amber, benedictine, the gamut of browns and blue-cast reds.

The fashion pivot for coats and suits this season is front shaping, often continued all around. The Spare look is one of the fresh variations of subtle front and back shaping and is the cause of great excitement in the often blasé fashion world. Lightly curved is the creed of the look and it concerns itself with the sides of coats and suits and with the front shaping.

Girls Go Buggy for Pet Pins

Jewelry has gone buggy this season with replicas of insects and other members of the animal kingdom taking over.

The latest craze in jewelry is the pet pin fad. The miniature pins ranging in size from a quarter inch to two inches, come in everything from spiders to turtles.

Live pets have been increasing in popularity at a fantastic rate during the past few years, including not only dogs and cats but also such critters as alligators, hamsters, horned toads, chameleons, white mice and turtles.

However, nothing in the live pet world has struck the fancy of the ladies as the pet pins have.

Each Has Monicker
In keeping with the tradition of naming live pets, the pet pins each has its own monicker. There are such names as "Betty" the butterfly, "Myrtle" the mouse, "Tommy" the turtle, "Pierre" the poodle and "Cindy" the cat.

Girls have been traditionally afraid of mice and bugs but such is not the case with pins. In jewelry mice are the most popular, especially the ones with the wiggly tail.

The pins come singly or in pairs. There are mother and offspring duos, and one combination has a cat chasing a rat.

A great deal of ingenuity is being shown by distaffers who are wearing the pins. Besides placing them on the shoulder of dresses, jackets, an diaphs of coats they are being worn on hair bands, watch bands, belts and some are even worn on canvas shoes.

Because of the popularity these

Lively, Individual Look Appears in Fall Casuals

Fall's lines are lively and individual in the casual sportswear field. Leaders include "separate" separates, for mixing more than matching, classics, such as blazers, pleat skirts, simplest-ever sweaters and blouses, "English" looks with good tailoring, riding jackets and weskits coming to the fore, boy tailoring, with borrowed-from-the-boys styles, fabrics, details in the limelight; and liveliest of all, the Western look, featuring hip-hugger pants and skirts, cowboy-styled shirts; calico and bandana prints.

Spare look, tailored and trim, is on the boyish, classic side, with longer, leaner blazer jackets in men's wear fabrics, boy cardigans, slim skirts with side pleats and matchbox-seamed skirts and jumpers. "Doctor

Marianbad coiffure. Furs and leather are evident in the new season chapeaux, but the look may be casual, feminine or exotic, as milady chooses.

It's a good fashion time one that's bright and alive and vibrant with the zest of an exhilarating new season.

Smart in Stretch
Knits are booming in tops, pants and skirts, one and two piece dresses. Keynote mood in this field is the skimmer dress with to-wear-or-not belt.

For women who like knits, but plan to diet tomorrow, stretch fabrics furnish comfort and flattering fit. Stretch denim is especially notable.

Western and classic stamp their brand on sportswear fabrics and colors. Rugged mood includes denim, cotton suede and corduroy flannels, meltons, chevrons supply a slicked-up look, as do silks for shirts, which are frequently in button-down style. Tweeds, mohairs, velveteens add luxury.

Tattersall checks, bandana and calico prints, bright reds and yellows look West for inspiration. Beige, brown and russet, navy, camel and gray contribute to the classics.

Accessories Create Outfits

Stoles and scarves are more than accessories this fall. They're an integral part of two of fashion's most important themes: the "muffled up" look and the Western look.

Wide and wider are stoles meant to wrap up at least chin deep. Some of them double as hoods, too. Fabrics for the muffled neckline are surface-textured and, at night, touched with glitter.

Western look shows in everything from little neck scarves to big triangles. Bandana prints and calicos are popular.

pins have received jewelry makers are now planning a pendant with pets enclosed in miniature cages. In time a girl can have "Felix" the frog hopping on her shoulder and "Teddy" the tiger pacing at her throat.

Fall 1962 fashion is an individualist. Colors, textures and silhouettes are a personal matter. No stereotype is imposed on the smart woman's desire to express a mood or a personality, to be her most attractive self. She may choose the throw-away elegance of uncluttered casuals, the demure femininity of velvets and laces, the exotic allure of chin-high sables and slinky crepes. But whatever her choice, the hallmark of the fall 1962 costume is the way the hat completes the look.

Designers recognize that the simple shapely fall styles seem to call for the finishing touch of a hat. The over-all trend is toward more hat and more height, but on the theory that opposites attract, milliners have included a plentiful array of little hats. Some are head-hugging profile caps, perky tams moving to side or back, advanced styles with visors or under-chin ties.

The toque, the turban and brimmed hats vie for attention. Bretons are important also, and hats with curving, mobile brims complement the easy look of shifts and skimmers.

Leather and fur, silk and wool are among the different new looks in hats for autumn.

The Hairdo that loves a hat has sculptured poise that refuses to be ruffled by any hat problem. This version of the Marienbad hair-do is supported by a permanent, and the short hair is sleeked close to the head, the deep bang brushed glossily from a very low side part, and the hair is taken behind the ears to curl under them and onto the cheek.

stated femininity in lingerie characterized by beautiful lines rather than an over-abundance of trimmings.

Fashion calls for greater co-ordination of lingerie colors, prints, and textures, and it is just as fashionable to mix as match. Slips, in a variety of pale, clear, and deep colors, are co-ordinated with undergarments; nightgowns and pajamas come with their very own jackets, coats or jumpers, and leisure lounge-wear emphasizes ensemble looks for pre-sleeping hours. The Western look is a natural for casual loungewear. Fashion borrows from the cowboy, and uses denim-type fabrics, calicos, gingham, bandana prints, scarves at neckline and suspenders for

The Inside Story

Time to Revise Breakfast Habits

BY KATHLEEN WALSH
County Home Agent

September is Better Breakfast Month and breakfast is the meal most often neglected. I would like to share with you some very interesting facts and suggestions regarding breakfasts that were prepared by Louise Archbold, Consumer Marketing Specialist at the University of Wisconsin.

Mrs. Walsh

As a new school year begins, it is appropriate to take a bit of time and make a real effort to see that every member of the family establishes a habit of eating a good breakfast. Tests have shown that a high-protein breakfast meal has more staying power and therefore does not result in a mid-morning slump.

With imagination, breakfast can be one of the most interesting meals of the day. Breakfast almost always begins with a fruit, which may be followed by cereal, either hot or cold, then eggs which are frequently supplemented with bacon, ham or sausage. Waffles,

J. A. Arts, V. E. Ehlike Say Vows

LITTLE CHUTE — Nuptial promises were exchanged by Miss Judith Ann Arts and Vernon E. Ehlike at 10 a.m. Saturday at St. John Catholic Church. The double ring ceremony was performed by the Rev. James Feely.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry Arts, 701 N. Wilson St., and Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Ehlike, 208 Tyler St., Neenah, are parents of the couple.

Maid of honor was Miss Mary Chapman, Fond du Lac.

Joseph Hubli, Lomira, attended as best man. The bride's brother, Alfred Arts, seated the guests.

The Little Chute Village Hall was the setting for a dinner and reception.

The bride, a graduate of St. John High School, attended Marian College, Fond du Lac, and Wisconsin State College, Oshkosh. She was a fourth grade teacher at St. Nicholas School, Freedom. Her husband was graduated from Neenah High School and is employed at Overly's Inc., Neenah.

The couple will reside at route 2, Menasha.

griddle cakes and French toast are also breakfast favorites, and there are almost endless varieties of baked goods suitable for the morning meal.

If it is possible, encourage the family to sit down together and eat their first meal of the day in a leisurely fashion. One of the greatest deterrents to nutritious breakfasts are the late sleepers who dash to the kitchen for a quick glass of fruit juice before running wildly for the bus or car to begin their day's activities. By the simple expedient of going to bed and getting up a few minutes earlier, the whole family may enjoy the companionship and good nutrition of an adequate breakfast.

Shopping Is Easy

The homemaker's first responsibility is to provide foods that have that high-protein breakfast appeal by dawn's early light. With today's well-stocked grocery shelves, this is an easy matter.

Although orange juice is by far the most popular fruit drink for breakfast, don't overlook other interesting and tasty fruits and juices available for beginning the day. Melons are in good supply and provide enjoyable eye-openers. Grapes, too, are plentiful and add interest to morning menus. Freshly made applesauce will bring the family to the table in a hurry.

As we have a wide choice of breakfast cereals, there is no excuse for sameness in breakfast foods. For a delightful and unexpected breakfast treat, you might want to try cereal served over fruit. Slightly poached apple slices, stewed pitted prunes, fresh or canned apricots. Any of these blend in flavor and texture with steady to eat cereal.

Eggs are an excellent main dish for breakfast. . . one of nature's most nutritious ready - packaged foods. No time? Scramble an egg in two minutes while the water heats for coffee or tea; soft cook an egg in two to four minutes; poach an egg in five minutes. . . and team them up with crisp bacon and toast for a delicious, nutritious breakfast that your family will enjoy.

Muffins, biscuits, and hotbreads of all kinds will bring "ohs" and "ahs" from Junior, Dad and Granddad. There are many quick and easy, heat-and-serve type baked goods on the market. The freezer may be used to store many items for swiftly prepared breakfast treats.

Color Important

Color, flavor and texture are all important considerations when planning any meal and breakfast is no exception. Use attractive table settings, and crisp, colorful

Pair Weds In Double Ring Rite

MENASHA — Miss Janice G. Gulickson, 315 Ninth St., became the bride of David R. Paul, 302 Hewitt St., in an 11 a.m. Saturday ceremony at St. John Catholic Church. The Rev. Stanley Koszarek officiated at the double ring service.

Parents of the couple are Mr. and Mrs. Harold Gulickson, 617 Congress St., Neenah, and Mr. and Mrs. August Paul, 604 State St., Merrill.

Mrs. James Zielinski attended her sister as matron of honor. Mrs. Walter Giebel, sister of the bride, and Miss Joyce Paul, sister of the bridegroom, were bridesmaids. Miss Ann Zielinski, niece of the bride, served as junior bridal aide.

James Zielinski, brother-in-law of the bride, was best man. Groomsmen were Everette Olson and Walter Paul, brother of the bridegroom. Seating the guests were Thomas

Double Ring Nuptial Rite Unites Pair

MENASHA — St. John Catholic Church was the setting for the 10 a.m. Saturday marriage of Miss Patricia Jean Neubauer and David John Walbrun. The Rev. Stanley Kolbusz said the nuptial high mass and performed the double ring ceremony.

Parents of the pair are Mr. and Mrs. Leland Neubauer, 729 Jefferson St., and Mr. and Mrs. Hillard Walbrun, 604 Tayco St.

Miss Carol Smarzinski, cousin of the bridegroom, attended as maid of honor. Mrs. Hal Jorgensen, Appleton, sister of the bridegroom, and Miss Janet DeWall served as bridesmaids.

William Neubauer, brother of the bride, acted as best man. Hal Jorgensen, Appleton, and Michael Walbrun, brother of the bridegroom, served as groomsmen. Daniel Coonen and Norman Brown, Brandon, seated the guests.

Germania Hall was the setting for a noon dinner, evening supper, reception and dance.

After a honeymoon in the west, the couple will live at 616 Wilson St., Neenah.

The bride, a graduate of Menasha High School, is employed at George Banta Co. The bridegroom, a graduate of St. Mary Catholic High School, attended the University of Wisconsin Extension, Menasha. He is employed at Marathon Division of American Can Co.

Sheets on Hand

September is Measure-Your-Mattress Month. While you're measuring to see if you have enough sleeping room, measure your linen closet to see if your sheet and pillow case supply matches up. Minimum for each bed is six sheets—two in use, two in the laundry, and two in reserve—and three cases per pillow. If you have to replenish, brighten up your bedrooms with colorfast sheets in pastels, stripes or floral prints.

Ear Massage

If ear lobes are tender and reddened after removing earrings, hold cotton squares, soaked in witch hazel to the area. It's cooling and soothing.

Either Foot Forward is Good in Smart New Shoes for Autumn

The old saying 'Put your best foot forward' may have indicated something about the style and quantity of footwear available. However it may have originated, its meaning has changed greatly since the advent of mass produced shoes, available in hundreds of styles, colors and finishes. Every foot is the best one, when it's decked out in new fall footwear.

In every style, there are striking leather textures to suit your taste. For example, there is gleaming black patent for dress-up occasions — a new idea in fall shoes — or suede, grain or reptile leathers. In flats and moccasins there are brushed leathers, waved steerhide and smooth leather. Golden tones are heightened by yellows or greens to add another whole color family to the fall shoe collection.

Range of Styles

Among the array of new feminine shoes are a variety of strap styles, pumps, boots and bootlets, as well as flats and walking shoes. Combinations of leather textures and colors are very new this year. Black with at least one other hue will be very popular in daytime shoes. Evening pumps will frequently show the same color in two different textures, such as suede and patent leather, or suede and polished leather. Scalloped dipping and uneven top lines add a new footnote, while slender leather soles set off snipped, rounded and pointed toes. The brown to beige range of leather colors will be followed in popularity by green, scarlet and yellow-gold.

Bootlets Popular

As the leather boot grows more popular, more styles become available. The 'almost boot' leads the parade, restricting the rising line to throat, one side or back. The shoe industry has taken a long stride forward since the time that the cobbler labored long at his bench. The average American now buys three and a half pairs a year. Perhaps it's that half pair that keeps up the old 'best foot' adage.

The Handsome Buckled red pumps above are lent a dash of glamor by the caviar grain. The throat is squared to accommodate the gold buckle. This style is good with casual skirts and sweaters or any of the other new 'looks' for fall.

Lounge in Oriental splendor in any of these engaging slippers. Gold is the color that goes with everything, and it receives added enhancement through embroidery and jewel trim. Truly lady-like and alluring, an evening at home takes on special significance with slippers to fit the mood.

'Twisters' Take To Bathtubs

If you're a victim of The Twist you'd be smart to go straight from the dance floor to the bathtub. According to the National Safety Council, "twisting" causes many accidents and back injuries which are best treated by a doctor. However soaking in a tub full of warm to hot soapsuds will greatly relieve the less serious discomforts of sore muscles.

Rich Fabrics Glorify Simple Silhouettes

As always when silhouettes are simple, rich fabrics come into their own this season. Shapely and figure swimming styles give particular importance to supple, lightweight wools, a twill like blend of cashmere and crepes, matelasses and a variety of knits—natural, man made or blends. Textured surfaces for wools and blends stand out in high relief. There are softly luxurious moirés, silks shimmer on the after dark hairs boucles nubs hold but airy scene dressed up even more with tweeds. Fur blends and white heads, sequins and especially, trims.

Leg Beauty

Now that the bare legged days are numbered be extra careful of leg stubble. Shave or use depilatory often. Stubble means trouble for nylons and for leg beauty. After shaving, massage the legs thoroughly with witch hazel. It protects against scratches and scrapes.

We at Heckert's welcome Ben Kumbalek as a fine addition to our staff . . . Ben has many friends in the Appleton Area after being associated with the French Slipper Shop and Grace's Apparel. Ben would love to have you visit him and let him show you how thrilled he is with the wide range of styles and sizes in top brand name shoes featured at Heckert's.

HECKERT SHOE CO. IN APPLETON

Before 1862, Cobblers worked long hours over their benches, making by hand shoes which were cumbersome and expensive. The invention of the McKay Sewing Machine made possible the output of 600 shoes a day and revolutionized the shoemaking industry in America. Today, the fashion-wise woman can afford, and owns many pairs.

Colored Brooms Cheers Sweeping

Sweep we must—so it might as well be with a vividly-hued broom as a plain one! A new plastic number with unbreakable aluminum head comes in such unbroomlike colors as coral, orchid, blue, gold, or aqua—cheery enough to make even floor sweeping seem less of a chore. This broom won't rust, but will wash safely in soap or detergent suds to stay efficiently clean.

Brides Walk In Elegance

Fall's bride will walk down the aisle in an elegant gown. After several seasons of simplicity in bridal fashions, brides are returning to more lavish gowns. The elegant bride may choose a sheath, classic cut or sweeping fullness, but whatever her silhouette choice, her wedding dress will almost certainly be lavished with lace or embroidery. Many gowns reflect a medieval splendor. The look is regal, and trains carry out the 'court' motif. Many brides-on-a-budget want gowns that can be worn after the wedding. For them, fashion inter-pret the elegant look in removable jackets or boleros over strapless gowns, or detachable trains or overskirts covering shimmer skirts. Peau de soie and satin remain favorites for fall wedding gowns, but designers offer a variety of fabrics for the bride who prefers the unusual. One of the newest and most luxurious is cut velvet. Looking and feeling elegant, fall's bride will truly be wearing the dress of her dreams.

Geometry Figures in Fall Bags

Geometry is a fashionable subject this fall as leather handbags take every shape known to woman.

Seen at fall fashion previews presented in New York was a collection of squares, rectangles, circles, arcs and trapezoids in many leather textures and more leather colors. Rounding out the picture were shoulder bags—newly returned to the fashion scene—pouches and barrels in daytime, evening and sports bags.

Among the most popular were handbags of smooth and grained leather, antiqued and patent leather, suede and brushed leather. Reptile was seen, usually as trim, while gold and silver leather will be available for evening wear. All bags carried the distinctive black-and-gold "Genuine Leather" tag that spells quality on any store shelf.

Low Price Range
One of the new developments this year is the creation of the same style leather bag in several dimensions. This adds to the selection in depth, permitting each woman to select a bag suited to both her size and her personality. The bags shown covered all price ranges, with most in the low to moderate price brackets.

Envelopes, probably the most popular shape of the season, will be gently rounded and feminine in line. Supple smooth and handsomely grained leather bags will be set off with rigid bar handles, gold bracelets and filigreed detail. Classically styled, modest in appearance, and light on the arm, the new leather envelopes are remarkably roomy inside.

Shoulder bags, in deeply grained leather, smooth leather and brushed leather will swing from quilted shoulders in town and from leather packed arms in the suburbs. Most of the new shoulder bags have adjustable self-leather straps to give you added versatility. Outside flap closings, gold buckles and bright colors—vivid reds to lustrous browns—add color to your costume as you swing down the avenue.

Lots of Room Inside
Casual bags, in soft and supple leathers, are also refined in appearance this season. Convenient masculine stripes in blue and white and colors to mix. Select pouches, satchels and white and colors to mix. Select pouches will be popular with the supermarket shopper. Made of shape-retaining leathers, they expand to hold small parcels without to size and tailor to fit windows.

The Fall Favorite—the Skirt and sweater—take on new glamour this year with this smart crew-neck, hip length cardigan and matching slim skirt. The front of the sweater is edged with a narrow band of matching grosgrain ribbon. The skirt has the Elastikord waistband that adjusts to individual waist measurements, assuring a smooth fit.

Shorter Gloves Appear for Fall

changing their modest outside proportions. For evening, when shapes are generally pared down, the eye is caught and held by luxurious and brilliant suede leather, crushed grain leathers and gleaming lustre leathers. Unusual shapes like the barrel bag add fashion spice to the night on the town. The dainty leather clutch in black antelope suede or pastel colored smooth leather will be widely seen.

Boy's Room Decor

Decorating a growing boy's room can be a problem for mother. Here's an inexpensive plan to give your young man a new look for fall—with room for frequent changes. The formula is simple: buy a few colorful sheets. Choose stripes in blue and white and colors to mix. Select one sheet as a bedspread. For cafe curtains to mix or match, cut plain blue or striped sheets to size and tailor to fit windows.

Wrist can delight in the smooth swirl of fur, real or fake. One of the favorite ways of dramatizing a short glove is through the addition of a handsome fur cuff. Touches of reptile take a hand, too. Suede appears importantly, and for the longer gloves that go out in the evening, satin stretch fabrics are elegant. With emphasis on blending, rather than matching, accessories, gloves in muted and blended tones prevail.

Elegant Jewelry Adds Sparkle To Conservative Fall Fashions

In the fashion picture of fall-winter, jewelry cannot be classified only as an accessory. It is the fashion picture and the fashion news.

The keynote of the season is elegance. The fabrics are rich and luxurious with much surface interest. The silhouette is still "pared down" and uncluttered. The collarless, low (often plunging) necklines have given the jewelers an opportunity to create jewels that are so opulently exciting that one cannot think of them as being right for the clothes. This is the season when one thinks that the clothes are right for the jewels. The difference between "just clothes" and "fashion" this year is in what jewels you wear and how you wear them. For quite some time the fashion scene has been deluged with "looks." Starting with Dior's New Look, we have gone on to the thing new, a jewel, dress, make-up or coiffure is a great stimulant. But every new fashion is not suitable for every woman and a sense of proportion and self-recognition is one of the most valuable attributes a woman can have. The look a woman should strive to achieve is the head to toe "look of harmony"; harmony with the new fashion, with her personal characteristics, her mode of life, and her surroundings. When a woman considers the over-all picture and dresses herself in accordance with it, she is functioning on the highest feminine fashion level.

Collars Are Newest Look
The burst of excitement in jewelry this fall starts with the collar necklace. There are narrow collars of chains or golden beads or delicately textured gold for daytime wear. Wider collars of gold-tone and pearls or jewel colored stones add to the "harmonious look" for afternoon wear. For evening, the collar is presented in all its glory, high, wide and handsome, set with brilliant stones and as exotic and fabulous looking as anything worn by an imperial Czarina.

Pins are scaled to a slightly smaller size and even more delicate looking for daytime wear. Textured gold-tone leaves, flowers, crescents, shells, palm trees, bowknots and field clovers, are just a few of the subtly precious pins that you will wear on your daytime clothes and pinned high on the muffled collar of a coat.

Color Tones for Day Wear
The Alaskine (silk and wool) daytime frock in tones of brown, black, white, red, orange or pink, cries out for textured beads or golden chains that nest and lie beautifully, to create a soigne effect.

The fascinating plaid woollens have enough color so that the perfect complement is punctiliously executed gold-tone jewelry.

Afternoon Accessories
A crepe dress either lightly fitted or two piece with a loose overblouse, is the chic thing to wear in the afternoon. So too is white and off white and the newly fashionable deep, rich brown, done in matelesses of great elegance. A chunky golden bowknot collar with matching pin worn spectacularly on a lightly shirred midriff, points up the midriff interest intended by the designer. Slender golden threads are used as a setting for a lustrous pearl and pave rhinestone motif. A bib of muted and soft colors combined with pearls is accompanied by two wide, flexible bracelets for an arresting jeweled look. Pins, "upper deck" sits high on the too, are derigueur at this time of day. Elegant flowers, leaves, etc., consisting of largish colored stones, ruby, sapphire, emerald or rhinestone, are singly set with open backs, exactly like the most precious gems.

Jewelry Is Set Off to its best advantage on this theater suit of elegant matelasse with surface texture interest. The single strand choker and matching bracelet are complemented by the single drop earrings. The curved double-leaf pin is in magnificent textured gold paved in rhinestone.

Collars Complement Necklines
Necklines, low in front and back, account for the extreme popularity of the wide flat collar. To complement this type of dress try an open frame collar of textured motifs and open work gold-tone lace finished by lustrous pearls. Or a collar of lovely blue lozenges combined with pearls and aurora beads, a truly delectable jewel to wear with crepe matelasse, or the brocade theatre suit.

Jet is used to magnificent advantage by jewelers. A graduated bib collar combines jet, crystal and pearls with a jet bead inlaid with gold to add a touch of elegance. For the high-fashion round, ed, thin, textured golden batons interspersed with tiny jet beads form a double decker collar terminating in largish jet beads. The "upper deck" sits high on the

Smart Look Tops Little Girl Styles

Camel and gray, closely followed by brown, lead the color parade in little girls' fall fashions. These tones, together with such shades as muted green and demure as well as bright plaids, herald a more sophisticated look which is borne out by the styles, showing many adult fashion trends.

This doesn't mean, however, that little girls will be wearing scaled-down versions of Mom's clothes. Fashions for the grade school set have a look that's all their own, appealingly young, easy and action-free, and very smart indeed.

Matchbox Silhouette
The matchbox silhouette sparks a light for girls' coats and dresses. The squared-off, welt-seamed shape has been adapted to both casual and dress-up styles, where it spells freedom and comfort. Variations on the Norell look, a swirl of sweetness, feature little waists, pussy-cat bows and full skirts.

Boy Coats Come Back
For sportswear, little girls go Western. There are hip-slung pants, sheriff's vests, wrap-around skirts, cowboy scarves and frontier skirts. Suspenders, saddle stitching, brassy brads, metal and leather buckles are trimmings. Denims, calicos, patchwork prints and rugged fabrics of all types star in the Western picture. Chesterfield and boy coats keep coming back in more colors and fabrics than ever. And there's a new emphasis on the military look and the navy pea coat. Touches of fur and velvet adorn many cloth coats, while fur fakes and dyed rabbit and other real with a gaily striped sheet of val-furs in complete coats give the girls still more pretty luxury. Plaids highlight the hopsotch time comes to launder the rugged look—plaids of all types, including authentic or authentic-looking tartans. When is a sheet not a sheet? When it's a tablecloth for a children's party. Next time you have the children in, decorate the table with a gaily striped sheet of val-furs in complete coats give the dyed colors. Not only will it add to the festive look, but when the sheet-turned-tablecloth, you can toss it into the machine with all your other washables.

Collar Necklace New Note in Fall Jewelry

Dramatic new jeweled collars are seasonal, but with bolder use turn the fall fashion focus on neck of color and combinations of lines, adding the necessary accent stones.

Bracelets, too, are wider and bolder in design than in recent seasons, and earrings usually dangle to be visible with the popular bouffant hairdos.

Color is important in the fall jewelry line-up. Attention is given to all tones of brown, from sunny topaz to deep, rich brown accented with gold or black. Real jewel colors are present in full array, to be used as color accents coordinated with the costume. Deep ruby red is a headliner, but also present and accounted for are emerald, sapphire, turquoise, jade, lapis, garnet, jet and gold.

Gold jewelry is everywhere, bold or discreet, tailored or delicately filigreed, always effective and always in good taste. Multiple gold chains make some of the most popular collar necklaces.

Gold chains come in all sizes and all prices, in karat, gold filled or gold finish, bright and shiny or with smooth satin sheen, in necklaces and bracelets. The range of textures, designs and effects is almost limitless in the gold jewelry category, ranging from necklaces of tiny gold beads to wide, flat collars of nested gold chains, bold or delicate. Gold accents also add richness to jeweled necklaces, pins and bracelets, and gold filigree work lends an oriental touch to many of the new designs.

Pearls Still Popular

Pearls, beloved and basic of jewels are always with us but with new variety and imagination. The look of cultured pearls, real or simulated, is the favorite look of the moment, most popular in multiple strand collars and drop earrings.

For evening wear the sky's the limit in jewelry elegance this fall, with a dazzling array of brilliant and elaborate formal jewelry such as has not been seen for many years.

White House reinstatement of full formality has brought back full length evening gowns and with them jeweled hair ornaments, fabulous necklaces and bracelets, important earrings and pendants.

Beauty Aid

If your favorite beauty ritual calls for the use of a mild astringent or skin freshener, try witch hazel. Witch hazel is a pure herbal extract, soothing and quick drying on the face. After cleansing the face use lotion to close the pores and condition the skin. Makeup goes on smoother.

Colors for Coats

Coats cover a wide range of paces, bright primary colors and deepened shades. Bright reds, blues, greens and yellows contrast with olive greens, chocolate browns, rusts, winter navy, grey and black.

Where to Buy

Many of these fashions shown in this issue are available in Fox Cities Stores. If you wish specific information, please call the Post-Crescent switchboard.

Fur Flies Throughout Fall Styles

The fur is flying in this fall's fashions. Outside, inside, from the flat furs to the fluffy ones, it's definitely a fur year as American fur designers bring furs to an all-time fashion standard high.

Biggest news is the wide variety of styles available. There's a shape for every figure. Fitted and belted are the most advanced. Lightly shaped, both slim and full are most dominant. Seven-eighths and fingertip are top lengths are ideal for newly elegant little boy looks, or rajah coats and Oriental-flavored tunics—many bordered with contrasting fur trims, such as South-west African Persian lamb with mink or sable.

Making Suit Scene

Fichus, triangular scarfs, boas, jackets and ponchos lead styles. Fur have made the suit scene in greater number with a cast that includes most of the flat minutes to cut silhouettes out of the sponge cloth. Suggest anything from animals to rocket ships and wait to see what the young artists produce.

Shape Feminine Look

Lightly shaped, both slim and full, encompasses new era chesterfields, coachman, reefer and trenchcoats, plus basic casuals enlivened with individual detailing, especially the many front shaped free back styles, interpreted in all furs from leopard to mink. Otters, ocelots and opossums are in the fashion dressed up with sable or chin- or chilla. Collars are muffled very achieving the clean cardigan swing, too.

Cutout Contest Provides Fun

A kiddie party calls for games and prizes. For something new and different in the contest line, Then give your young guests ten minutes to cut silhouettes out of the sponge cloth. Suggest anything from animals to rocket ships and wait to see what the young artists produce.

Dolman Appears

Counterpoint to the set-in sleeve, and also spare-looking, are dolman-effect sleeves in fall fashion—slope-shouldered, with under-arm width.

Spotlighted

Spotlighted for fall are spotted furs—leopard, ocelot, jaguar, spotted cat—either real or fake.

Classic Lines Appeal To Smart Younger Set

On campus, on the job or busily engaged in homecoming, the young set has always been noted for fashion awareness and a willingness to try the new and the different in styling.

Now, with a ready acceptance of the trends to natural shaping and to the classics, young fashionables are proving that they know the worth of the tried and the true — especially when it looks as new as this season's edition of traditional favorites.

The princess line, long a young set favorite, adapts well to the tabbed jacket, the English "rid-shapelier" look of fashion. Even the easy shift, a young indispensable, now becomes more curve-conscious in design.

"Shape" meets "spare" in many young fashions. This usually calls for a narrower shoulder line, with longer and slimmer set-in sleeves. Bodices are gently fitted, waists defined or suggested, while skirts may vary from slim to flared to full.

"Matchbox" skirt styling, panel fronts, trouser pleats are other ways of interpreting the spare but shapely silhouette.

"Classic" too, means many neat patterns in stripes, checks and geometrics; more plaids, with black watch coming back strong; more men's wear fabrics; more tailored jackets; more walking-look, featuring hipster skirts or pleat skirts; more "separate" separates, that mix more than they shirts and dresses, suspender skirts and many scarf-necklined.

Noteworthy among fall classics styles. A fashionable departure from things for fall — among them, classics is the "muffled look" neat patterns in stripes, checks coat with big fur collar or de-geometrics; more plaids, with black watch coming back strong; Right up among the leaders is more men's wear fabrics; more tailored jackets; more walking-look, featuring hipster skirts or pleat skirts; more "separate" separates, that mix more than they shirts and dresses, suspender skirts and many scarf-necklined.

Suit Up Ladies in the Smartest fashions of the season. Apt choices are these two. At right, the two pocket cardigan jacket over a matching skirt provides the understated approach to fashion. Contrast railroad stitching adds an interesting accent. The suit can be worn with one of many shirt styles, beads or scarf. Below, the smooth elegance of this cutaway jacket that breaks gently over the hipline invites a test of variation from the wearer. Jet iridescent buttons and jewel collar welcome the use of pearls, scarf or scatter pins.

Handsome Houndstooth Sparks the season's brightest fashion trends: the "gun-slinger" pants and Ike-type jacket. When buttoned, the jacket rests easy on the hips, just over the low-slung waistband.

Color Gains Importance As Decorating Device

To the average family on an average budget, color has become a single most important decorating tool. The decorator knows that your response to certain colors depends on the type of person you are.

Color affects all our lives. Its influence is felt everywhere — in the arts, in advertising, in our work and, especially today, in our homes. In fact, in many modern homes where expensive furnishings are beyond reach, color is a way of life.

People who live in drab houses like cool, neutralized, harmonious colors. With the wider use of color in decorating have come the three primary colors — red, yellow, and blue — illustrate fabrics, and materials whose main element is color. At one time, universal effects on human behavior couldn't afford colorful furnishings, colorful appliances, colorful accessories.

Color Instead of Money Now that's changed. In fact, it's often possible these days to use color in your house instead of money. How? It's simple. Color makes old things look bright and new. Color on inexpensive materials builds them up — makes them look richer. Color in unexpected places calls attention to your decorating skill and accents an otherwise modest room. Color is interesting, and so are those people who use it that way.

Before you vivify your home, you should determine your reaction to colors. People respond differently to different colors. Some families prefer bright, warm tones, like red and orange. Others prefer cooler, muted colors, like blue and green.

The psychological effects of color are well known. They help sell merchandise, increase work efficiency, halt traffic. The persuasive powers of color are great in these "helper" roles. Use for Direct Impact More important to the artist and the interior decorator is pure color — the large-scale, creative use of it for direct impact, rather than as part of a sales campaign or traffic sign.

The decorator knows that your response to certain colors depends on the type of person you are. Warm-color people tend to be receptive, outgoing, and active. Cool-color people are emotionally reserved, and younger families take pleasure in strong, contrasting colors, but quiet or older persons shouldn't. With the wider use of color in decorating have come the three primary colors — red, yellow, and blue — illustrate fabrics, and materials whose main element is color. At one time, universal effects on human behavior couldn't afford colorful furnishings, colorful appliances, colorful accessories.

Red is the warmest, most stimulating color. Red activates, vitalizes us. Seeing it increases muscular tension, respiration and blood pressure. Yellow is stimulating, gay, it makes us cheerful. The slightest change in yellow, however, will render it cool or warm, soothing or irritating.

Blue is tranquilizing, depressing. It acts as a sedative. Blue detaches, creases muscle tension, lowers blood pressure, respiration, pulse rate. Blue is the coldest of colors, is associated with melancholy. Colors once were more important symbolically than functionally. Each color had many meanings. Red stood for martyrdom, patriotism, and sacrifice, at different times. A widely used symbol, it is found in five out of six flags. Yellow has had the negative connotation of cowardice. Blue stood for truth — which should be clear and transparent like the blue sky. Symbolic use of color began its decline during the Renaissance. More important to the artist and the interior decorator is pure color — the large-scale, creative use of it for direct impact, rather than as part of a sales campaign or traffic sign.

Another Styling Innovation for Fall—the button fly front—adds a tailored touch to this easy flare skirt of worsted wool with a black leather belt. Shown above, it is worn with a convertible collared, long sleeve shirt of oxford cloth. The gentle flare of the skirt slims the hips and offers comfort for classroom or office.

green one the same distance away has led to important strides in decorating.

The range of good taste in color is broader than you may think.

Help Child Ready Self For School

Summer days are usually leisurely and off schedule but the ring of the school bell demands initial so he can quickly find his being on time. As a part of getting ready for school, your youngster may need to work the time for some practice.

Don't wait until the last day to get started, especially for the first few days of school. If your child can tell his full name and address, knows and follows the rules for crossing streets, can take care of his bathroom needs, uses a hanky easily and get your child up in time to dress himself, he's probably ready to meet the demands of his fast before the time he will be leaving for school. A few days of shoes he'll probably soon learn.

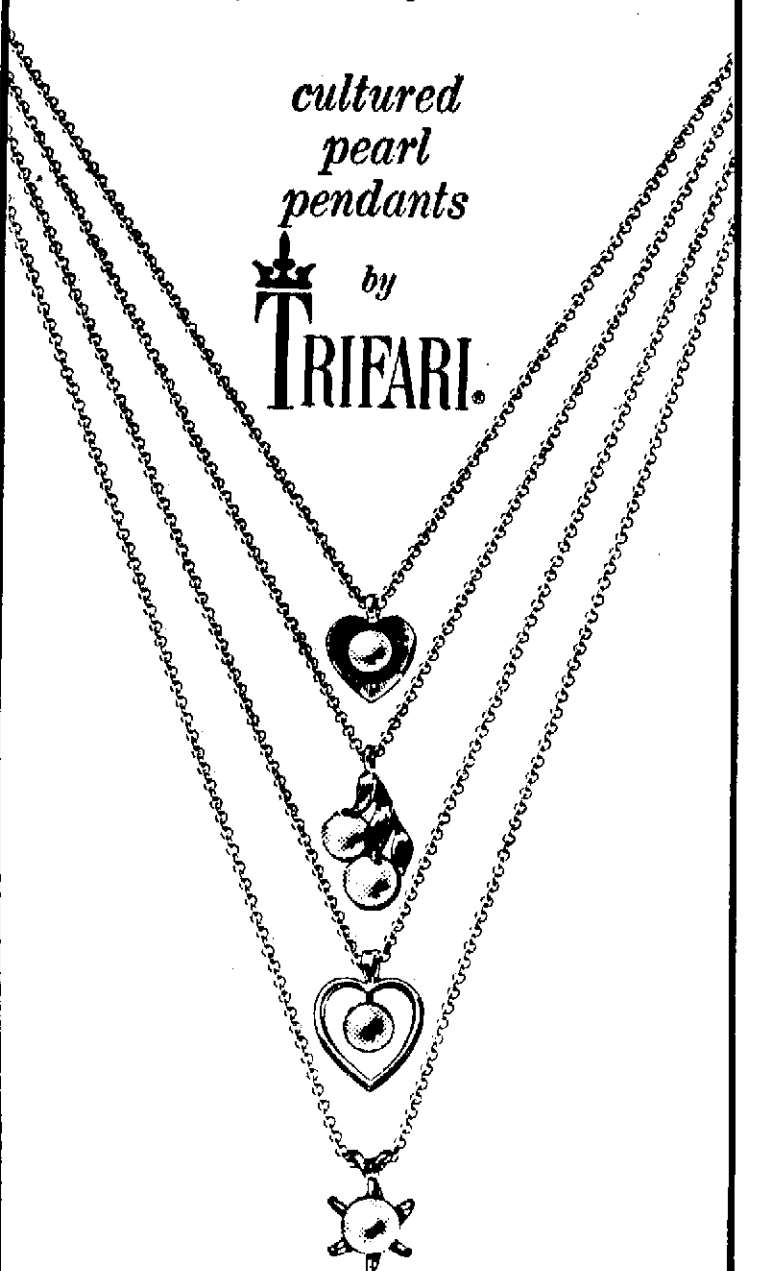

Of course, you'll want to help your child avoid a frantic last minute rush each day. Of course, you'll want to help your child avoid a frantic last minute rush each day. Of course, you'll want to help your child avoid a frantic last minute rush each day.

Casualness Key to Styles

Elegant but casual—assured but understated: These completely opposite looks have been melded into this year's exciting collection of styles.

Colors are restrained so that milady can indulge herself in a brilliant hat, dramatic jewelry. Beiges, from sauternes through bamboo to cognac appear in crepes, knits, flannels. Beige with grey has great chic in a handsome plaid, an exciting patterned knit. Bottle green, chocolate and black contribute to the look of restraint.

Knits appear in new guises or the spotlight. Cowl drapes, a double knit in foggy grey forming stitching, a drape of self-spaghetti a scarf-tied overblouse and skirt forming a flat collar.

Elegant Brocades with bands of coral and creme inset at the hip. Or a camel and black houndstooth check costume with a black overblouse. Or an after-five frock at the height of one of the matelasse dresses, pleated-skirt casualness—except with their slim, easy skirts and that the fabric is wool knitted subtle top interest are those all-most impossible to come by beauties: the little black dress. new!

Smoothness of Line, Ease of wearability and beautiful new fabrics have removed all restrictions on dress designs this year. Clothes are meant to be worn in comfort. Above, a cowl-topped bias bodice tops a here-and-now pleated skirt. Cut of pin tweed wool, this dress will move easily from afternoon to evening date with ease and comfort to the wearer. At top right, a striking theatre suit in elegant brocade offers the conservative touch to glamour. The narrow lapel opens to a single button on the jacket. The popular just below-the-elbow sleeves can be worn with shortie or elbow length gloves. The slim skirt is topped by a white overblouse. A basic must in every woman's wardrobe is this soft flannel afternoon dress, below right. A set-in jewel neckline tops the bloused bodice. Unpressed pleats, stitched down to the hip offer freedom of movement. The self belt has a spaghetti-tie at the front.

Blouses Deserve Star Billing

This is the year of the blouse with the individuality and chic that make your newest suits and separates so very special. For smart young fashionables who need fast changes to keep pace with the demands of their busy autumn plans... here is a diversified collection of inviting new top attractions woven with contemporary fibers and designed for minimum care and instant good-grooming.

Styled by the favored names of the avant-garde, these taste-makers have a magnum of daring ideas and more dash than the four minute mile. Start with one wonderful, swirling skirt, skinny slacks or crisp new fall suits... add a duet of creamy smooth and wondrously crisp shirts, sparked with intricate contrast embroidery or a frivolous bow blouse, boldly striped; a beautifully detailed sissy overblouse with all the feminine wiles... the looks are limitless. For sportswear partners, don't neglect the impact of the leopard look, complete with its nile-beguiling zippered hood or the brilliant paisley bordered, V-necked jersey aglow with autumn leaf colors. The newest way to soften a suit is via Mode de Paris' flattering and feminine textured crepe overblouses whose fluid, subtle lines are the perfect addition to your most sophisticated or casual styles.

All of these beautifully crafted topping ideas are further enhanced with built-in practical virtues and luxurious fabrics to delight the hand and eye! Modern fibers offer wrinkle defiance, lissome lightness, and easy machine washability with superior shrinkage and color stability. And of course, easy ironing will produce the finest results.

Corsetry in Fine Control

Observing fashion's dictate of feminine shapeliness for fall, corsetry concentrates on molding a smooth midriff and a small waistline. Mid-figure control is present in high-rising girdles and pantie girdles, long line brasieres, corselets; and is even more positive in waist-nipping garter belts and cinch-bra combinations.

The basic idea, throughout the under-fashion collections, is one of no-nonsense control coupled with the prettiest fabrics and colors yet seen.

New bandeaux are, most often, soft styles with two-section cups to shape a high, youthful bust line. The fabrics are lace, satin and finish tricot, blendings of cotton and miracle fibers.

Evening décolletages have received special attention from bra designers this season: there's no neckline that can't be properly underlined by one of the new styles with widest straps, three-quarter cups, front-plunging or back plunging neckline. High-rising pull-ons are prevalent among the new pantie girdles and girdles, the majority of them offering sheer though sheer control through reinforced panels and fagoted seaming. In length, pantie girdles range from the briefest brief to foundations as long as the stretch pants underneath which they're intended to be worn.

Pantie styling in corselets continues important, and the range of leg lengths in this category, too, is impressive. Shaped panels have been introduced for derriere control in some pantie corselets; in most of the new all-in-one styles, there's likely to be some form of inner control through the waist area.

The Overblouse most likely to become a star is the classic beauty above. It is lovely to look at and heavenly to wear. Fragile looking, the ingenue machine washes, snubs wrinkles and irons quickly and easily. The collar has distinctive scalloping, and the femine bib sports a sissy front. On or off the stage, the striped surah printed blouse at left wins applause. One of the easy care fabrics, it adds suit interest and stays fresh. The duet at right will bow again and again when their wearers discover their flair for staying neat all day long. The intricate embroidery comes in beige or gray.

Your Problems

Man Thinks Spanking Wife Way to Reinstate Authority

BY ANN LANDERS

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Did you know that in some states it is legal for a man to spank his wife?

Well, it is. And I say it's about time the prerogatives of the male are recognized by law. Of course there must be no cruelty involved—just a well-earned, old-fashioned spanking — the Ann Landers kind Pappy used to give.

Ever since World War I the females of America have been elbowing their way into all sorts of places where they don't belong. One third of the labor force in the United States is now female. Women want to be doctors, lawyers, company presidents, senators, cab drivers and bartenders.

Naturally, with a hefty pay check in her hand, a woman can tell her old man to go fly a kite. No wonder the divorce rate in this country is at an all-time high.

When I read the other day where a judge said it was all right for a husband to turn his wife over his knee, if she needed it, I was mighty pleased. This could mean the return of a proper balance of power in this country.

All Man: Dear Man: A husband who would turn his wife over his knee places her in the category of a child. A wife who would put up with such indignity admits she is a child.

Legislation which permits wife-spanking could open the floodgates for all sorts of cruelty and sadism. Where does spanking end and beating begin? And who is to decide "if she needs it?" A husband who must prove his superiority by striking a woman is a bully.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I work in an office where the ratio of men to women is about 12 to 1. Most single girls would love odds like this but these fellows are making my life miserable.

The word has gotten out that I blush easily. Now I'm the target for every office joke — some of them not so nice. It has turned into sort of a game. Someone will tell a shady story and the whole gang hangs around my desk to watch my face turn red.

I'd give anything if I could control my blushing. I tried blocking out the embarrassing thought and substituting something else — a high school psychology teacher suggested this — but it doesn't work for me. Whenever I blush I feel like a country humpkin fresh off the farm. Please help me if you can.—Scarlett O'Toole

Dear Scarlett: Blushing is an involuntary act and nothing can be done to control it. But why in heaven's name would you want to? In this age of souped-up sophistication blushers are becoming extinct, like the whooping crane.

A blush is charming. Consider it an asset instead of a curse. And how nice to know there are still girls who can.

Ann Landers will be glad to help you with your problem. Send them to her in care of this newspaper enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

The Latest Message From the leaders in the fashionable world of foundationwear and lingerie is 'mix and switch'. The words make way for the exciting use of individual imagination and taste, and give each item greater versatility and range of effectiveness. Choose the formula that suits you, using tone on tone, or one of the delicate new prints. Merge soft pastels, or be daring with combinations of darks and brights. Either way, it's a new challenge for the woman of fashion.

Prints, Solids, New Colors Added to Foundations

Mix and match is a must in the slips come in identical print and intimate apparel picture for fall, colors.

The theory — old to the world goes. The print bra and girdle of outerwear—is making new sense can team with solid slips in a full range of colors or the paisley foundationwear and lingerie.

To play the game, one simply builds an underfashion wardrobe in colored prints and solids that match, contrast, blend or build a tone-on-tone theme from the skin out.

Combinations in bras, girdles and slips are endless and run the gamut from the soft merger of various pastels to the bold mating of darks and brights.

If you have the urge to mix and match, a good start can be made with a delicate new print.

Bras, girdles and pantie girdles come in a toffee print over soft pink, blue, yellow, beige or white. Co-ordinated slips and half

With these as a base, anything can team with solid slips in a full range of colors or the paisley print slips may happily accent solid color foundationwear.

If your flair for fashion tends toward rich, deep colors, one might consider roses-in-lace bra and girdle in red, green, or navy with a slip in bold, jungle-like print of royal blue and vivid vermillion or flashing green and bitter orange.

Achieve More Versatility A third dimension to this kind of co-ordination can mean a tone-on-tone plan which could start with an autumn brown dress over a soft brown print slip over beige or ecru foundationwear. The idea works with any major fall color in outerwear and lends new excitement to the business of dressing better beautifully. It also has the practical aspect of giving each item in your underfashion wardrobe greater versatility and range of effectiveness.

Lutheran Women Schedule Meeting

CHILTON — The Ladies Aid Society of St. Martin Lutheran Church will end its late summer recess Thursday with a 2 p.m. meeting at the church. Mrs. Elfred Hedrich, president, said. Plans for October luncheons will be discussed.

wonderful

What a year! The threshold of the new century! Hopes were high. Manners were high and elegant—and low and inelegant. Most men chewed tobacco—and the incessant spitting didn't fit in with the general air of refined gentility. Little boys wore Lord Fauntleroy outfits. Little girls wore long overcoats and silk bonnets. All women yearned for floor length tresses a la the Seven Sutherland Sisters. "She can sit on her hair" was the highest compliment. Cars were coming in. In Central Park in New York a car had to carry a gong and keep under 9 miles an hour. And even in Sheboygan a sputtering box on wheels would occasionally chug up and scatter the squawking chickens that were dusting in the dirt road and terrify the bejabbers out of horses hitched to the posts near Prange's 30x90 foot dry goods store on the corner of 8th and Wisconsin. The Prange business, barely 10 years old, was booming. Especially in yard stuff—lawns and sateens and albatross and nun's veiling. And feather boas at 25c. Corset steels for 5c. Monkey capes with seal collars for $15. And cycling hats and coaching parasols. Fine muslin drawers. Go-carts. Henry C. Prange studied the wants and needs of Sheboygan. Then he promptly stocked the items and priced them so as to give the very best bargains. From the first our founder was the personification of thrift. And, speaking of thrift, Jack Benny celebrated his 3rd birthday in Waukegan, Illinois, in this wonderful, wonderful year. We can't offer you that wood burning cookstove pictured above with the water reservoir in its bustle, but we can offer you America's finest brands in gas and electric ranges at prices as low or lower than elsewhere in our areas.

Prange's Barbershop Quartet will sing out with the popular songs of 1897 on Friday evenings and Saturday afternoons. Mosey over and lend a nostalgic ear to songs like these: "Beautiful Isle of Somewhere", "The Stars and Stripes Forever", "There'll Be a Hot Time in the Old Town Tonight", "When You Were Sweet Sixteen", "Hello Ma Baby", "My Wild Irish Rose", "On the Banks of the Wabash Far Away", "Sweet Rosie O'Grady" and many many more.

of them. The second place gets $15,000, the third place $10,000 at the end of the 36 holes.

Birdies First 3
Palmer, showing a lot of early foot, birdied the first three holes but could gain only a stroke on Nicklaus, who birdied the first and third. Palmer chipped in from 30 feet on the first hole, after his strong approach had hit a galleryite on the edge of the green—a break which prevented his ball from bounding down a grass-bare hill into a water hazard. Nicklaus capped it with a 15-footer to stay even.

Palmer was trapped on the second, blasted to three feet for his second straight birdie, and on the third he ran down a 20-footer after Nicklaus had birdied from 22 feet away.

The most fantastic hole for Palmer was the fourth. He hooked his drive into a grove of trees to the edge of a deep gully. The ball was waist high as he used a three-wood with a base-ball-type swing, only to sky the ball into more deep rough behind a row of trees. But he lifted the ball over the obstacle, landed 12 feet from the pin and got down in par 4. That matched Nicklaus and Player, who played it the regular way, on in two and two putts.

Drives Into Rough
Nicklaus, in manufacturing his sterling 66 with 33-33, had five birdies and one bogey. He capped putts of 15, 22, 30, 12 and 6 feet for his sub-par holes. On the eighth his drive was in the rough, behind trees, his second in a trap, causing him to lose a stroke.

Player, the compact South African, had 15 pars and two birdies coming to the final hole, but he three-putted from 90 feet on that acre-sized green for a bogey to finish with 35-34-69.

Foxes Defeat Clinton in Season Finale
The Fox Cities Foxes erased a 7-0 deficit to score a 10-9 win over Clinton in the final game of the 1962 Midwest League baseball season here Saturday night.

The game was called after eight innings because of rain. Clinton had tied the count in its half of the ninth, but because the Foxes didn't get their turn, the score reverted to the eighth inning.

Steve Cosgrove, who relieved Al Riffle and Ed Watt, got the win. The loser was Dennis Dunford.

Rex Peters socked a double and two singles as the Foxes collected 13 hits. Dan Marloweski, John Price and Dan Engbers got two singles each for the Foxes.

Giants Beat Cubs To Continue Surge In NL Flag Race

Pierce Pitches 7 Innings, Gains 14th Win of Year

SAN FRANCISCO (AP)—Veteran southpaw Billy Pierce hurled a 7-2 win over the Chicago Cubs Saturday for his 14th triumph and the fourth straight win for the surging National League Giants.

San Francisco went into this contest just one-half game behind the pace-setting Los Angeles Dodgers, who had a night game scheduled against Pittsburgh.

Pierce gave up 10 hits and both runs in the seven innings he worked before giving way to a pinch hitter and reliever Bob Bolin.

The 35-year-old Pierce found himself in frequent trouble during the first four innings, but pitched his way out of it to make his record 14-5.

A crowd of 17,643 saw a pitchers' battle during those opening frames.

Score 4 Runs
Right-hander Don Cardwell throttled the Giants until two were out in the fifth. Then San Francisco rallied to score four runs on three hits, three walks and a costly error by shortstop Andre Rodgers, a former Giant.

Harvey Kuenn walked to start the first uprising. Chuck Hiller doubled him home and scored on Felipe Alou's single. Willie McCovey singled Alou to third and Willie Mays walked to fill the bases. Matty Alou grounded to Rodgers, who fumbled the ball allowing a run to score and keeping the bases jammed. Ed Bailey walked in a run and Fred Burdette, the second of four Cub pitchers replaced San Francisco to a 7-2 win over Cardwell, who left with his 15th defeat against seven victories. Jose Pagan forced Bailey for the third out.

The Cubs scored once in the sixth on singles by Rodgers, Moe Thacker and pinch hitter Billy Ott and again in the seventh on a walk to Ken Hubbs and a single by Ernie Banks that sent Hubbs to third. He scored on a double play.

The winners added three more runs in the eighth, again on three hits and helped by the Cubs fourth error.

3 Scoring Aerials Enable Green Bay to Register 19th Straight Exhibition Success

BY ART DALEY

Post-Crescent News Service

COLUMBUS, Ga.—The Packers used the forward pass enough to whip the Redskins, 20 to 14, for their 19th straight pre-season victory in Memorial Stadium Saturday night.

Not running much and without any particular success, the Packers scored their three touchdowns in the air.

Bart Starr hurled two 6-pointers, hitting Ron Kramer for 15 yards and a 7-0 lead in the first quarter and Max McGee for a 3-yard score in the fourth period.

Thiem Captures Road America 20-Lap Feature

Pabst's Car Hurries 30 Feet, Lands Upright

ELKHART LAKE (AP)—Doug Thiem of Elm Grove, Wis., scored his first national triumph in two years of sports car racing Saturday when he drove his Ferrari to a three second victory in the 20 lap feature race at Road America.

The 22-year-old Marquette university student averaged 83.044 miles an hour in his close victory over Bob Johnson of Columbus, Ohio.

Another Wisconsin driver, Lynn Blanchard of Thiensville won the first race for smaller sports cars. He drove an Alfa Giulietta.

Veteran driver Augie Pabst of Milwaukee provided the biggest thrill of the day in the formula junior race. Pabst' car ran into one driven by Suzy Dietrich of Sandusky, Ohio and went about 30 feet in the air but landed upright.

The formula junior race was won by Walt Hansen of Westfield, N.J., in a Cooper. Hansen and Pabst will team today in the 500 mile race scheduled to start at 10:30 a.m.

Other winners Saturday were Martin Tanner of Saginaw, Mich., in a Martin T. (SAAB powered) and Robert Tullius of Alexandria, Va., in a Triumph TR-4.

Move to Within 3½ Games Of Slumping Milwaukee

MILWAUKEE, Sept. 8 (AP)—official elimination in the National League pennant race.

The Philadelphia Phils frittered away a three-run lead on Roy Sievers' 20th homer in the first inning and then bounced back Saturday for a 6-4 victory over the slumping Milwaukee Braves.

A three-run rally in the sixth pulled the Phils from behind and was enough to hand the Braves their ninth defeat in the last 10 games. The loss left sixth place Milwaukee one game away from Joe Adcock's glove at first. Sievers followed with a line single to left and Don Demeter doubled to right for the tying run. Bob Wine was called out on strikes but Sievers scored on a wild pitch.

Billy Klaus Walks
Cal Dalrymple walked and Ruben Amaro singled to right center for a third run in the inning. Don Nottebart replaced Hendley on the mound, walked pinchhitter Billy Klaus to load the bases and then got out of the jam on an infield forceout.

Jack Hamilton fired two-hit ball over the last four innings in preserving Cal McLish's 10th victory against five losses. McLish took over from starter Art Mahaffey in the fifth and received credit for the triumph although lifted for a pinchhitter in the Philadelphia sixth.

Sievers unloaded his homer after Tony Taylor opened the game with a walk and Johnny Callison beat out a slow tap near the mound.

Joe Torre got one run back for Milwaukee in the second with his third homer. Then the Braves erupted for three runs after two were out in the fourth.

Eddie Mathews launched the rally with his third straight walk off Mahaffey, who was hit hard in a bid for his 19th victory. Hank Aaron singled and Adcock doubled to left center. Lee Mays followed with a two-run single through the hole to right.

70 to Lead State Publinx Tourney

Appleton Golfer 3 Strokes Ahead of Milwaukee Duo

BY LEN WAGNER
Post-Crescent News Service
GREEN BAY — The baby of Appleton's golfing Bayer family, 23-year-old Chuck took advantage of Saturday's mid-day warmth to blister Brown County's golf course for a 2-under-par 70 and take a 3-stroke lead into today's final round in the state public links tournament.

Bayer, teeing off on No. 10 for his outgoing nine, fired a healthy 37 and then turned on the heat to race over the first nine in a brilliant 33.

It was the only sub-par round turned in by the field of 147 challengers from throughout the state as the slick and fast greens and later afternoon chilly weather kept the scores down.

Slips to 39
Closest threats to the long-hitting Bayer are southpaw Dave Wernicke, and Hal Kubasik of Milwaukee with 73s. Wernicke, one of Wisconsin's four representatives in the national publinx tourney earlier this summer, carded a 34 on the front nine and then slipped to a 39 on the back round. Kubasik, rated one of the top contenders for the crown from the Milwaukee area, had a steady 36-37.

Archie Dadian, generally recognized as the state's top publinx player and the favorite to succeed Doug Weiss as champion, took a 74, finished in the near darkness of 7 p.m. Dadian, a semi-finalist in the state amateur tourney, took a 38-36 card. Weiss is not defending because of a baseball injury suffered this summer.

Tied with Dadian is Janesville's Lyle Gifford, who lost to Weiss in a playoff last year. Gifford shot 39-35 while Milwaukee's Bob Mueller stroked a 35-39 and Jack Kindig, another Milwaukeean, had a 35-39.

Different Story
Bayer took just one bird on his first nine but a double bogey 6 on No. 12 kept him a stroke over par. The second nine, actually the front nine on the course, was a different story though, as he socked birds on 2, 6 and 7 to go with pars on the other six.

A couple of other Fox Cities swingers, Tom McKenny and Rich O'Brien, provided one of the surprises of the tournament as they stole the show in the senior division. McKenny busted a handsome 76 and O'Brien a 77 for the only scores in the 70s. Vertenik of Milwaukee shot a 77 in the A flight to take a stroke lead over an Oshkosh pair, Sam Hartman and Emil Weitz. Janesville's Bob Albrecht coped the B flight lead with an 83, just a step ahead of Madison's Ron Alexander. Kewanee's Ross Hamachek and Appleton's Orv Strutz, all of whom had 84.

70—Chuck Bayer, Appleton; Hal Kubasik, Milwaukee; 71—Lyle Gifford, Janesville; Archie Dadian, Milwaukee; Bob Mueller, Milwaukee; Jack Kindig, Milwaukee; 72—Wayne Schroeder, Milwaukee; Dennis Babbs, Appleton; Leroy May, Racine; Bill Dorce, Racine; Clay Maloney, Green Bay; 73—Tom Diving, Beloit; Henry Falker, Oshkosh; Gene Haas, Milwaukee; 74—Bob McDonald, Neenah; Larry Kray, Milwaukee; Dean Standiford, Janesville; 75—Darrell Campbell, Madison; Charley Heise, Janesville; Bob Dickman, Delavan; Dave Graska, Oshkosh; Jack Wagner, Oconto; John Basten, Green Bay; 76—Other Fox Cities area championship flight scorers: 81—Syl Bayer, 83—John Devers, 84—Sergeant, 85—Gary Knick, 86—Bob Duszak, 87—Bill Tordor, 88—Tom Diving, 89—John Devers, 90—Sergeant, 91—Gary Knick, 92—Bob Duszak, 93—Bill Tordor, 94—Tom Diving, 95—John Devers, 96—Sergeant, 97—Gary Knick, 98—Bob Duszak, 99—Bill Tordor, 100—Tom Diving.

Jackson fanned Roglio Alvarez and threw out Eddie Kasko but Don Blasingame followed with a scoring single to deep right. Ferrarese took over and after a moment of control trouble that put Blasingame on second via a wild pitch, fanned dangerous Vada Pinkson to seal the decision. Gene Oliver's 11th homer headed a Cardinals attack that stopped a Reds' winning streak at five games.

Jackson scored what proved the deciding marker himself in the seventh after leading off with a double. Julian Javier sacrificed and after Stan Musial drew a walk, Jackson darted home on Curt Flood's sacrifice fly.

Stahl, Mapes Score Victories in Kaukauna

KAUKAUNA — The State Class C Service stock outboard racing champ, Ralph Stahl, Jr., Menasha, and the State Class B Stock Hydro racing champ, Charles Mapes, Oshkosh, scoring 800 and 700 points, respectively, each took first place in his event on the first day of the Wisconsin Stock Outboard Racing Association's regatta at Egan's Yacht Club Saturday.

The National Class B Stock Hydro champion, Vern Kargus, Menasha, was thrown from his boat in the first heat and spun out in the second heat.

Inboard boats will be running in three classes between the outboard races starting at 1 p.m. today in the second day's racing.

Other Fox Cities area competitors who won places Saturday were: Terry Broas, Neenah, fifth, J-utility; Mapes, second, B-utility; Bob Grunski, Neenah, fifth, B-utility; Arden Drager, Oshkosh, second, D-utility; Charles Bert, Oshkosh, third, D-utility; Gary Flack, Oshkosh, second, C-Yankees in the tight American ailing shoulder since July 29th, stock hydro; Mapes, third, C-League pennant race. The when the Tigers put him on the stock hydro; Ken Ender, Menasha, routed Boston 6-1. Allison clouted a two-run homer last year, limited the Cartwright, Oshkosh, third, A in the first and a solo homer in Twins to two singles in the 4-1-3 stock hydro, and Bruce Hanson, the third off Don Mossi, who innings he pitched.

First place winners scoring 800 runs. The slugging right fielder the Twins' 12-hit assault, banging out three singles and driving in wauke, J utility; Russell Ech-doubles and two triples in Minnesota. Theresa, A utility; Gary's last 10 games. (Oshkosh, Milwaukee, C utility;)

McKinley Beats Richardson, Faces Roy Emerson Today

Laver, Osuna Meet in Other Semi-Final at Forest Hills

BY WILL GRIMSLEY
FOREST HILLS, N.Y. (AP)—and a 5-1 lead when Richardson, Bounding Chuck McKinley stifled in semi-retirement from tennis since he became a stock salesman Saturday and advanced to man in Dallas, rallied brilliantly. McKinley finally fought off the men's semifinals in the National Tennis Championships with two hot-shot Australians and a 6-2, 6-8, 6-4.

The lone remaining American in the men's division, McKinley faces today defending champion Roy Emerson of Australia, who toyed with Andy Lloyd of Shreveport, La., 6-1, 6-1, 6-3. In the other bracket, top-seeded Rod Laver of Australia, seeking to match Don Budge's grand slam of 1938, faces Rafael Osuna, the panther-quick Mexican who attends the University of Southern California.

Pack of Trouble
Laver had a pack of trouble with Frank Froehling's smoking service but beat the gangling collegian from Coral Gables, Fla., 6-3, 6-3. Osuna knocked out surprising Gordon Forbes of South Africa 6-4, 6-4, 7-5.

The U.S. picture in the women's division is much brighter with an American assured for the final. Defending champion Darlene Hard of Long Beach, Calif., apparently at the peak of her game, plays the youthful giant-killer, Vicky Palmer of Phoenix, Ariz., Gremminger tipped the ball slightly in one bracket while top-seeded Margaret Smith of Australia opposes Brazil's Maria Bueno in the it and ran the remaining distance.

The play covered 73 yards. Bob Khayat kicked the point at 4:30 and this was a close game at 20-14. The Redskins got one last shot with two minutes left. And they might have scored. Izo's long pass on first down to Anderson, who was in the clear, was too far. He then over-shot Mitchell but on his third try Symank made a leaping interception on the 50 and returned to the Redskins 20.

Oldtime Sharpness
Miss Smith, the top-seeded women's favorite, scored over Mrs. Sandra Reynolds Price, the slim South African with the booming forehead, 6-3, 6-3. Miss Bueno, 1959 winner and queen of women's tennis before she was stricken with hepatitis two years ago, showed her oldtime sharpness in off reliever Bob Humphreys in the eighth.

Chico Fernandez' second of three singles drove in the Tigers' first run in the third. Dick Brown accounted for the second run with a homer in the fifth.

Belinsky Gains Decision

Angels Collect Only 3 Hits but Score 2-1 Win

BALTIMORE (AP)—The tenacious Los Angeles Angels capitalized on the wildness of Baltimore's Chuck Estrada to edge the Orioles 2-1 Saturday night and remain 4½ games behind the league leading New York Yankees.

Controversial Bo Belinsky was credited with the victory for the third-place Angels although he lasted only five innings. He was removed after apparently tiring in the fifth, when he allowed Baltimore's only run on a bases-loaded walk.

Don Lee hurled the final four innings and preserved Belinsky's first victory since Aug. 11 and only his second in more than 11 weeks.

Belinsky, making his first start since appearing before Baseball Commissioner Ford Frick to negotiate personally a purported trade which would have sent him to Kansas City at the end of the season, now has a 9-9 record. He was 7-2 on June 21.

Only 3 Hits
Los Angeles made only three hits, compared to Baltimore's 11, but Estrada's wildness gave the Angels scoring opportunities in the first and fifth innings.

The Angels scored without a hit in the opening frame. Little Albie Pearson was walked on four straight pitches, and moved around on a stolen base, a wild pitch and a sacrifice fly by Lee Thomas.

In the fifth Estrada walked Billy Moran and gave up a two-out double to Leon Wagner which sent Moran across the plate to make the score 2-0.

The only other hits off Estrada, who is now 7-15, were singles in the third by Bob Rodgers and in the sixth by Pearson.

DETROIT (AP)—Detroit Lion quarterback Earl Morrall lost part of a big toe on his left foot as a result of an accident Saturday with a power lawn mower.

The accident was at Morrall's home in suburban Dearborn Township. Doctors at St. Mary's Hospital amputated about half of the toe. Morrall was kept overnight at the hospital, but doctors said they hope he will at least be able to dress for the National Football League team's opener here Sept. 16.

Georgetown Gridders Dies After Practice

GEORGETOWN, Ky. (AP)—Earl Hundley, a Georgetown College football player, collapsed and died after practice Saturday. Deputy Coroner Roy Pollett said the 6-foot-1, 220-pound junior tackle died from a "coronary insufficiency." He said this "means the heart just wasn't able to take care of the strain incurred" in practice.

Hundley was the second player to die this college football season. The first was Mike Kelsey, a center from Southern Methodist who died last Sunday after collapsing the day earlier of apparent heat prostration.

Pollett said Hundley, a graduate of Lexington Lafayette High School, suffered no severe contact during today's practice.

Pollett said head coach Lester Craft told him the boy returned to the practice field to get a piece of equipment as the rest of the team was heading for the showers and collapsed.

NOTES and NOTIONS

Not the least of the reasons for Vince Lombardi's coaching success is his ability to spot ways of making a strong operation still stronger. He has no qualms about changing the status quo, no matter how well a particular combination or device worked in the past. Two personnel shifts this exhibition season are cases in point. He moved Herb Adderley into the regular defensive secondary to replace John Symank. This gives the Packers two extra inches of height for pass defense and also more speed. The other move was replacing Lew Carpenter with Elijah Pitts as Willie Wood's punt returning buddy. If any team gives these twin tornadoes an inch, they'll take 50-100 yards, as New York found out Labor Day. Pitts' spectacular run-back was a perfect application of a technique worked out in practice. On the day I watched the Bays practice, Lombardi set up a new punt-return drill. All through it, Vince had his safetymen execute a wide "dip" or arc before starting upfield with the ball. On Pitts' run Monday night, he did the big dip, enabling his blockers to get good angles on the onrushing Giants. . . and a-w-a-y he went. Wood also showed how to use his blockers to greatest advantage.

Joe Francis, who made many friends in Packerland, is part of a 2-quarterback innovation in Canadian football. Francis and Sandy Stephens both line up under center for the Montreal Alouettes — as a means of keeping the defense guessing. At times, one of them steps back during the signal count to become, in effect, a fullback. Of late, Francis has been doing most of the passing with Stephens doing the running. Francis, who had been drafted by the Cleveland Browns, has disappointed with his passing in early Canadian league games.

Tobin Rote, one of the few Packer bright lights in a dim era, has gotten off to a shaky start in Canadian ball this year. The Toronto fans who cheered him when he led the Argonauts to a title in 1960, have booed him this year. He completed 30 of his first 65 league passes, threw for one touchdown and had six interceptions. Rote's understudy and possible successor is Pete Hall, former Marquette University quarterback, who spent two campaigns with the New York Giants before being cut this year. Rote, who hopes to regain his old form, says, "If this is my last year here (in Toronto), I want to walk out having had a good one." Tobin is playing out his option this season, and if he doesn't retire, the rumor is he may try to catch on with one of the two Texas pro teams.

Lynn Lundeen, a sophomore back, is the first Ripon griddier to play at Lawrence College in the 25-year tenure of Coach Bernie Heselton. To prove that there were no hard feelings about Lundeen's "defecting" to Ripon's arch-enemy, Redmen Coach John Storz employed Lynn during the summer.

Bill Winter, the Giants' rookie defensive surprise who played at Green Bay last Monday, bids fair to become the Midwest Conference's first National Football League player in quite some time. Winter, an all-conference choice for St. Olaf on both offense and defense last season, played against Lawrence at Whiting Field in 1960 when the Vikes upset the MC champs. Among the few MC grads who have earned a spot in the NFL are Lawrence's Eddie Kotal and Al Zupeck, who played for the Packers in 1929-30 and 1946, respectively. Ripon College's Dave Smith was cut by the Packers before making it big in the American Football League in 1960.

More and more, the Los Angeles Angels' Dean Chance is gaining recognition as one of the best young pitchers in baseball. Fox Cities Manager Cal Ripken, who caught Chance in the Foxes' pennant-winning season of 1960, says Dean has an exceptionally good arm and that he learned a lot in his year with the Foxes. Meanwhile, back in Baltimore, the Orioles are wondering what prompted them to expose Chance to the Angels' draft nearly two years ago while "protecting" Arne Thorsland, another young prospect. Thorsland's career has come to a virtual standstill because of arm trouble.

Tom Fisher, Minnesota Twins scout, has a reason other than his natural loyalty for feeling his club will beat the Yankees to the wire in the 1962 pennant race. Fisher, who spent considerable time at Goodland Field when the Foxes were associated with the old Washington Senators (now Twins) says "6" is his magic number. The Phillies won the NL pennant in his sixth year with that club (1950) . . . and this is his sixth year with the Senators-Twins. Fisher admits the Twins aren't yet a great team but feels that fate has been smiling on them in close games and that they could continue in that vein to win the title, much as the '59 White Sox did.

Doug Davidson, new Wrightstown football coach, played for Clintonville in the Mid-Eastern Conference. His collegiate alma mater is Whitewater State.

Jake Wood, a victim of a Detroit line-up shuffle, may be switched back to the outfield next season. Wood, a rookie standout at second base for the Tigers last year, has been supplanted at second base by Dick McAuliffe. Wood started in baseball as an outfielder before the Fox Cities Foxes converted him to a second baseman in 1959.

Jim Taylor and Willie Davis were chosen as the outstanding players (offensive and defensive, respectively) in the Packers' 20-17 win over the Giants. Tom Moore and Bill Forester won last year's awards in the Bishop's Charities game.

Ernie Munsche 551 and Jerry Ellenbecker 550.

Gloria Zimmer rattled a 223 single and a 550 trio in the Twin City Women's League at Mid-Town.

Honors in the first section of the Fox Valley Women's League at Mid-Town went to Marian Schutte with 218, 551. Mary Swietochowski rolled a 207 and Jan Frohn had a 199. Rose Mig-

Pat Richter, One of the Best Pass catchers in college football, is expected to take over the punting duties for the University of Wisconsin this year. Richter led the big 10 Conference in pass receptions last season. (AP Wirephoto)

Tennis Writers Honor Gonzales, Norman Brookes

NEW YORK (AP)—Sir Norman Brookes, one of Australia's great players before and after World War I, and Pancho Gonzales, the professional tennis champion were honored Saturday night by the Tennis Writers Association of America.

Sir Norman, a left-hander who played on five winning Davis Cup teams between 1907 and 1919, received the first immortal tennis award for his lasting impact on the sport.

Gonzales was given a Presidential citation by the People's People Sports Committee as the "tennis ambassador of the United States." More than 100 overseas players and tennis executives from England, Russia and Mexico were among the guests at a midtown hotel.

Giants Whack Eagles, 27-10, In Exhibition

Title Moves Team to Scores In First 3 Tries

PRINCETON, N.J. (AP)—Quarterback Y. A. Tittle moved the New York Giants to scores the first three times they had the ball Saturday and the National Football League's defending Eastern Conference champions rolled over the Philadelphia Eagles 27-10 in the final exhibition game for both teams.

Before a near sellout crowd of 44,966 in Princeton University's Palmer Stadium, New York's Bobby Gaiters scooted 67 yards for a touchdown on the game's third play.

Passes to Walston

After a 22-yard field goal by Don Chandler the next time New York had the ball Tittle passed 45 yards to end Joe Walton for another touchdown. He hit Walton again with a 7-yard toss just before the half ended. Chandler added a 46-yard field goal in the third quarter.

Bobby Walston's 34-yard field goal got the Eagles' only points in the first half. Quarterback Sonny Jurgensen, who was constantly troubled by the Giants' defensive line, hit Tommy McDonald with a 18-yard pass for a touchdown late in the final period.

Tittle, who directed the Giants for only the first half, completed 12 of 18 passes for 173 yards.

Yankees Score 6-1 Win Over Red Sox

Ford Goes 5 Innings Before Being Forced Out With Injury

NEW YORK (AP) — Whitey Ford, with the help of Jim Coates, pitched his 15th triumph of the season as the New York Yankees vanquished the Boston Red Sox 6-1 Saturday to protect their lead over the Minnesota Twins.

Ford, who spaced six hits in five innings before he was forced to retire because of an injury, also received fine batting support from Bobby Richardson, Bill Skowron and Cletis Boyer. The trio collected seven of the Yankees' 10 hits off loser Don Schwall and three successors.

Richardson had a single, double, triple and sacrifice for a perfect day at the plate, driving in a run and scoring another. Skowron had a single, double and walk while Boyer drove home a pair of runs with a single and double.

Forced to Quit

Ford was hit with a pitch in the left thigh in the third inning and was forced to quit three innings later when the injured area began to stiffen. The injury was not considered serious and the veteran left-hander is expected to take his regular turn on the mound next Wednesday.

Coates pitched scoreless ball through the last four innings. He Eddie Bressoud has three of the Red Sox' nine hits and scored their only run. That came in the third inning when the shortstop singled, advanced to third on another single by Carl Yastrzemski, and scored when Richardson fumbled Lu Clinton's grounder.

The Yankees got that run back in their half of the third when Ford was hit by a pitch, Tony Kubek beat out a bunt, Richardson bunted for a sacrifice and Tommy Tresh flied deep to Clinton.

Boyer's single following Skowron's two-bagger put the Yankees in front 2-1 in the fourth. New York made it 3-1 in the fifth on Richardson's double and Roger Maris' run-scoring single.

The Yankees iced the game against Mike Fornieles in the sixth, scoring three runs before southpaw Arnold Earley could end the uprising.

Ohio State . . . Purdue . . . Michigan State . . . Mississippi . . . Louisiana State. From this brigade of bruisers, Alabama may expect the most serious challenges as the Crimson Tide opens defense of its national collegiate football title.

The proof of the practices comes with the campaign kickoff Saturday. 'Bama gets off the mark by playing host to improved Georgia Sept. 22.

Over the years, the Big Ten and Southeastern Conferences have supplied half of the national champions. That's why "the most likely" candidate list is headed by members of these rugged circuits where a field goal, a conversion and a couple of goal line stands mean the difference between a once-beaten and a so-so record.

Talent-rich Ohio State, ranked No. 2 in 1961, is the heavy favorite in The Associated Press preseason poll to wear the crown come December. All-America Dave Behrman and his Michigan State "iron" mates are ready to contest the issue while Purdue may be the surprise entry in the derby.

Top SEC Clubs
Alabama, LSU, Mississippi and Georgia Tech—the top four SEC clubs of '61 — figure that way again although not necessarily in the same order.

Elsewhere, the regional breakdown looks like this:

Southwest—Texas is big favorite and definite national contender. Texas Christian, Arkansas make it interesting.

Big Five—Washington, if Huskies avoid pitfall of Stanford's surprising darkhorse.

Big Eight—Missouri is the popular choice. Rebuilt Kansas, stronger Nebraska bear watching. Atlantic Coast — Duke, pressed by Maryland and Clemson.

Southern—Furman has a shot at early favorite West Virginia now that latter has lost top quarterback, Fred Colvard, who left school.

Missouri Valley — Wichita. Ivy League — Princeton and Dartmouth, hotly pursued by Harvard.

Independents — Navy, Penn State, Miami, Oregon, Syracuse, Notre Dame and Pitt show promise but, oh, those schedules.

Most surprising teams of the year — Purdue, Stanford, Nebraska, Florida.

Since the SEC has turned out the nation's No. 1 club three of the last five years, attention naturally is drawn to Dixie. Bear Bryant has another hell-for-leather gang at Alabama but the loss of versatile quarterback Pat Trammel by graduation and top area ground gainer Mike Fracchia by injury may be just enough of a handicap to prevent a repeat crown.

LSU and Ole Miss, No. 4 and 5 teams a year ago, come back strong again with more than an intense rivalry riding on their meeting.

Succeeds Dietzel
Defensive genius Charlie McClendon succeeds Paul Dietzel who moved to Army and is expected to maintain the high level of performance he has helped create at Baton Rouge. The Bayou Bengals offense, demonstrated in the 21-20 spring game thriller, promises more from all-around halfback Jerry Stovall, more passing and more versatility from a fine sophomore contingent.

Mississippi has an edge in the schedule but must play its two biggest on the road including LSU which the Rebs haven't beaten during the regular season since 1957. Conquering of the Tiger "jinx," bolstering at guard and quick development of sophomore tailback Dave Jennings are Mississippi musts. Quarterback Glynn Griffin, giant tackles Jim Dunaway and Jim Roberts and end Wes Sullivan should show the way.

Even Georgia Tech Coach Bobby Dodd admits his Engineers should be as good as last year when they put together a 7-3 mark and went to the Gator Bowl. Tennessee is stronger and deeper led by SEC-MVP Mollon Faircloth at tailback. Florida has 20 of its first 22 players back from a year ago, 27 lettermen plus the return of ace back Dick Skelly after a year's absence.

Added Aerials
The word from Ohio State is that Woody Hayes may spruce up his "four yards and a cloud of dust" attack with some added aerials and break up his quarterback-fullback offense enough to let an occasional halfback touch the ball. Paul Warfield, NCAA No. 2 low hurdler, is a great one. Tackles Bob Vogel and Daryl Sanders, center Bill Armstrong, quarterback John Mummery and end Dick Van Raaphorst are the principals in a cast of characters which could make it two straight unbeaten seasons in Columbus.

Michigan State "can't afford" the luxury of platooning according to Duffy Daugherty yet the Spartans have a lineup second to none and might have the endurance by economical spot substitutions.

Behrman, 253, moves from guard to center with backs George Saimes, Sherman Lewis and Dewey Lincoln, tackle Jim Bobbitt and guard Ed Budde co-starring. Missing an unbeaten season by a mere seven points last fall, Purdue can surprise with 28 lettermen, a polished backfield and some line strength in a few spots from reserves. Boilermaker hopes hinge on the Michigan State game, an opponent against whom they've enjoyed unusual success. Quarterback Ron DiGravio, end Forrest Farmer, tackle Don Brumm and center Don Pallani bear watching.

Minnesota's recent powerhouse has suffered heavy graduation losses. Iowa has terrific speed intensified by the return of Larry Ferguson, injured in '61, but may not have the lasting power. Northwestern can be dangerous.

Texas turns loose its flip-flop offense and a horde of polished performers again despite the loss of All America Jimmy Saxton. Longhorn aces include backs Ray Poage, Jerry Cook and Tommy Ford, guards Johnny Treadwell and Marv Kubin, tackle Scott Appletton and linebacker Pat Culpepper.

TCU, erratic over the past few years, will go precisely as goes giant quarterback Sonny Gibbs (6-7, 230). Arkansas has lost some fine players but the Porkers who have won at least a share of three straight Southwest crowns can't be counted out. Texas A&M might mature faster than estimated under new coach Hank Goldberg.

Since Coach Jim Owens' statement he's no worse off at quarterback than any other position, the word from Seattle is beware the Huskies.

Colts Nip Mets, In Ninth, 4-3

Stengel Gambles on Intentional Walk; Norm Larker Scores

HOUSTON (AP)—Casey Stengel ordered the winning run placed on base in a ninth inning gamble Saturday and the Houston Colts capitalized for two runs and a 4-3 victory over New York in the opener of a day-night double-header.

Liston Actually 'Mad' At Floyd Patterson

'Never Had Such Feeling Before' Says Challenger

AURORA, Ill. (AP)—Challenger Sonny Liston has revealed that heavyweight champion Floyd Patterson "will be the first fight I have ever met that I actually have been mad at."

Liston, seemingly completely relaxed after a rugged 1½-hour workout in which he boxed four rounds with a pair of sparring partners, told newsmen of the feeling of dislike he holds against Patterson.

"Never before have I had such a feeling against any fighter I have ever met," Liston said in all seriousness. "It is because of the small 12½ per cent of the proceeds from this fight that I was forced to take. All of the other fighters that Patterson has taken on

Youth Returns to School, With Bullet Lodged in Brain

SPRINGFIELD, Ohio, (AP)—Donal Fligor Jr., 14-year-old lad with a bullet buried four inches in his brain, can return to school Monday—but he's got to lead a quiet life from now on, the doctor says.

Some five weeks after being accidentally struck by a .22 caliber pistol bullet, Donal's recovery was pronounced Friday as nearly complete as could possibly be expected. He'll be in the seventh grade at Roosevelt Junior High School.

Dr. John Meagher, a neurosurgeon credited with saving Donal's life, gave his patient a check-up at Children's Hospital in Columbus. Donal was in the hospital 16 days—10 of them while unconscious—following the Aug. 3 incident.

Donal will not be permitted to engage in any sports activities, and a special medicine probably will be required for the rest of his

Weight of Moose, Like Bucks, Is Usually Over - Estimated

Canada Bulls Rarely Top 1,500 Pounds, Most Officials Declare

BY JAY REED
Post-Crescent Outdoor Editor

How big is a moose? It's a fair question and an interesting one. Toward the end of this month and through October a lot of hunters from throughout the Fox River Valley will be heading to Canada for a crack at the big, black animals among the largest of all North American big game species.

And, when they return, they'll be talking, as all men must, about how big their trophies were. And there'll be a lot of talk about 1,800 to 2,000-pound moose. What about that? Two thousand pounds is a lot of meat.

The Ontario Department of Lands and Forests says this: "Ontario moose may be considered to be a medium size and weight attaining a maximum of 1,200 to 1,400 pounds. These big ones are rare."

They point out that it's difficult to bring a moose and scales together on the spot to determine its weight but explain that the hunter can compute approximate weight from the animal's live weight from partial weights.

"We should distinguish," they point out, "between the hog-dressed weight — the entire carcass with only the entrails removed — and the butcher's weight when hide, feet, head and antlers also are removed."

In general, you may approach closely the live weight if you allow 20 to 30 per cent for the viscera plus 9 to 12 per cent for the feet, head and antlers plus 7 to 9 per cent for the hide. In other words, a hog-dressed moose represents roughly 80 per cent of the total live weight whereas the butcher's weight represents about 60 per cent."

Ellwood Epps, Clinton, Ontario, sporting equipment dealer, provides an interesting sidelight into the business of estimating the weight of a moose in a recent story in the Northern Sportsman magazine.

He tells how he and his wife have killed a total of 26 moose in the Matachewan region. "Any time we can bring out whole we weigh so we have weighed dressed approximately 18 or 19 moose. The largest up to last fall was 1,820 pounds, dressed out, at 820 pounds."

"The one last fall was bigger. We had it hung up in front of our place at Matachewan and it was large enough that all the operators were talking about it. It had a big frame and a fairly small rack with a 50-inch spread which is nothing remarkable. We offered a prize to anyone guessing the correct weight of the moose. We had 149 people who put in guesses. The lowest estimate was 284 pounds but the highest one, and here is where the fellows get their big moose I guess, was 3,827 pounds."

"After a week of this we had pondered, from the San Francisco moose weighed on the scales and the exact weight turned out

OSU Rated Top College Team

AP Ranks Texas Second in Pre-Season Poll

BY MURRAY ROSE
Associated Press Sports Writer

Ohio State, edged by Alabama in the vote for the No. 1 college team of 1961, was an overwhelming choice Saturday in The Associated Press' pre-season poll to take it all in 1962.

The deep and mighty Buckeyes were picked to top the nation by 41 of the 50 sports writers and sportscasters from across the country who participated in the poll. Texas was tabbed for second and Alabama for third.

Michigan State was selected for the fourth position followed by Louisiana State, Mississippi, Purdue, Duke, Penn State, Washington State and Texas A&M.

Alabama was picked to finish first by three members of the national panel, Michigan State and Mississippi by two each and Texas and Purdue by one each.

On the basis of 10 points for the first, nine for second, eight for third, etc., Ohio State rolled up 558 points in the balloting to 372 for Texas and 325 for Alabama.

Of the 10 teams picked to rank with the elite this season, six were in the top 10 last year. They are Alabama (1), Ohio State (2), Texas (3), Louisiana State (4), Mississippi (5), and Michigan State (6).

1961 Hunting, Fishing License Sales Increased Over 1960

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Interior department announced recently that 19,394,177 fishermen and 11,798,890 hunters purchased state licenses to pursue their sport in 1961. The 1960 totals were 18,480,604 and 11,785,753 respectively.

Four states — Colorado, Michigan, Minnesota and Wisconsin — about 15 million hunters in the United States. It also estimates that the federal and should sport fishermen 12 years of age be apportioned on the basis of the number of hunters. Unlicensed fishermen total number of hunting licenses sold, regardless of the fact that salt water along the coasts and two or more may have been sold others exempt because of age, to a single individual.

The department said that in all 50 states 18,301,531 hunting licenses were sold last year for $64,092,147.57. Pennsylvania had the most licenses sold — 2,967,000, more than in 1961, most licensed hunters — 996,067.

Nelson Cites Potential of Northern Area

'Superior Region Virtually Unspoiled By Private Interests'

MADISON (AP) — A study for development of the Lake Superior region shows great economic potential for creation, Gov. Gaylord Nelson declared last week.

"The Lake Superior region, including Northern Douglas, Ashland, Bayfield and Iron counties, is the last major area in Wisconsin which remains virtually unspoiled by private interests," Nelson added.

The governor made his observations in nothing that the State Department of Resource Development conducted a study of the region. It was done under the $50 million outdoor resource program, which also earmarks $2.9 million for development of the area once the planning study is completed.

"The region represents our last chance to coordinate the development of every natural asset for maximum public use and economic benefit," Nelson said, adding that the area can develop into one of the greatest recreational centers in the United States.

He said the study indicated that with funds from the resource program, the state will be able to act before the region is developed haphazardly.

Among the most significant vacation-recreation areas in the Lake Superior region listed by the governor were the Apostle Islands, Brule River State Forest, Chequamegon National Forest, Copper Falls State Park, the Lake Superior shoreline and the large number of marshes.

Glacier action also created large numbers of lakes and streams that when added to the more than 150 miles of lake shoreline produce a recreation area of unprecedented values, Nelson said.

Most of the people who present vacation in the area come from midwestern states which have a total population of about 46 million, not including visitors from the adjacent Canadian provinces, Nelson noted.

He said these people, who enjoy outdoor recreation and do not want to travel long distances, can only go to the Ozarks, the Smokies or the Northwood.

"Wisconsin and its sister northwestern states of Michigan and Minnesota have a decided summer climate advantage over the other two outdoor recreation areas," Nelson said.

"With this large number of people to draw from, the tourist industry in the Lake Superior region could become the greatest economic asset for Northern Wisconsin since the timber industry of 50 years ago."

"Developing a tourist industry in this region offers a real hope to the economic betterment in the years ahead."

Maximum Use

The region represents our last chance to coordinate the development of every natural asset for maximum public use and economic benefit," Nelson said, adding that the area can develop into one of the greatest recreational centers in the United States.

He said the study indicated that with funds from the resource program, the state will be able to act before the region is developed haphazardly.

Among the most significant vacation-recreation areas in the Lake Superior region listed by the governor were the Apostle Islands, Brule River State Forest, Chequamegon National Forest, Copper Falls State Park, the Lake Superior shoreline and the large number of marshes.

Barnett Sold To Lakers for Record Price

SYRACUSE, N.Y. (AP) — Dick Barnett, who jumped his Syracuse Nats basketball contract last year to play with the Cleveland Pipers, returned to Syracuse and promptly was sold Friday to the Los Angeles Lakers for what was called "the largest sale price in the history of the National Basketball Association."

Dan Biasone, Nats president, made the announcement here, but declined to reveal the sale price.

The Syracuse Herald-Journal said the price was in excess of $300,000.

Biasone said Barnett signed a Nats contract Tuesday. Biasone then completed the transaction with the Lakers.

Biasone, who said the price was the highest ever paid for a player in the NBA, noted that the purchase would make up for the club's loss of television revenue. That amounted to more than $300,000.

The Nats and Lakers are in the NBA. The Cleveland Pipers were in the American Basketball League but are not playing this year.

He said these people, who enjoy outdoor recreation and do not want to travel long distances, can only go to the Ozarks, the Smokies or the Northwood.

Move Afoot to Use Sportsmen's Fees For Conservation

MADISON (AP) — A way to permit county governments to sponsor worthy conservation projects out of sportsmen's license funds has been proposed by the Dane County board here.

The board will ask the next legislature, according to a resolution recently adopted, to authorize counties to use the receipts from the commissions, yielded from the sale of state hunting and fishing licenses to finance county conservation projects. Such receipts are now paid into the county general fund.

Hawks, Bruins Pitch Training Camps Monday

NHL Spotlight On Rookies and Traded Veterans

BY BEN OLAN
NEW YORK (AP) — Thesix National Hockey League teams get down to the business of preparing for the 1962-63 campaign this week with the spotlight on rookies and transplanted veterans.

By Thursday, all clubs will have taken at least one turn on the ice. The Toronto Maple Leafs and Detroit Red Wings already have started training, the Leafs in Peterborough, Ont., and the Red Wings in Detroit.

The Chicago Black Hawks and Boston Bruins pitch camp Monday, the Hawks in St. Catharines, Ont., and the Bruins in Boston.

The Bruins shifted their base from Niagara Falls, Ont.

The New York Rangers and defending champion Montreal Canadiens open training Wednesday. The Rangers have moved their camp from Guelph, Ont., to Vancouver, B.C., and the Canadiens from Winnipeg, Man., to Verdun, Que., a Montreal suburb.

All-American Honors

Gordon (Red) Benson, a left winger from Regina, Sask., who gained All-American honors at Michigan last season, and defenseman Jean Gauthier, up from Hull-Ottawa, are given the best chance of winning regular jobs among the Montreal newcomers. The Canadiens will be seeking their sixth straight regular season championship.

Dickie Moore, the Canadiens' veteran left winger, is reported in sound condition following a successful operation to correct a chronic knee condition and Henri Richard, a center, has recovered from an elbow fracture that sidelined him during the Stanley Cup playoffs.

Defensemen Warren Godfrey and Irv Spencer, left winger Guy Gendron and goalies Ed Johnston and Bobby Perrault will be seeking to convince Coach Phil Watson they belong with the Bruins. Each was acquired during the off-season. Spencer is likely to be shifted to center. Johnston, obtained from Spokane of the Western League, and Perrault, from Hershey of the American League, are rookies. Godfrey was picked up from Detroit while Spencer and Gendron were obtained from New York.

The Rangers, with Doug Harvey back in the fold as a player only, have added Ron Horvath, from Chicago, and Bert Olmstead, from Toronto. Horvath, a center, scored 17 times for the Black Hawks last season. Rod Gilbert and Jean Ratelle, promoted from the Kitchener, Ont., Beavers, also are likely to gain regular positions.

Detroit's newcomers include defensemen Doug Barclay and Barclay Plager and forwards Alex Faulkner and Floyd Smith. Murray Hall and Chico Maki are the best among Chicago's first year men while Kent Douglas, up from Springfield of the American League, is likely to crack Toronto's defense corps with a good showing in training camp.

Detroit's newcomers include defensemen Doug Barclay and Barclay Plager and forwards Alex Faulkner and Floyd Smith. Murray Hall and Chico Maki are the best among Chicago's first year men while Kent Douglas, up from Springfield of the American League, is likely to crack Toronto's defense corps with a good showing in training camp.

The Chicago Black Hawks and Boston Bruins pitch camp Monday, the Hawks in St. Catharines, Ont., and the Bruins in Boston.

The Bruins shifted their base from Niagara Falls, Ont.

The New York Rangers and defending champion Montreal Canadiens open training Wednesday. The Rangers have moved their camp from Guelph, Ont., to Vancouver, B.C., and the Canadiens from Winnipeg, Man., to Verdun, Que., a Montreal suburb.

All-American Honors

Gordon (Red) Benson, a left winger from Regina, Sask., who gained All-American honors at Michigan last season, and defenseman Jean Gauthier, up from Hull-Ottawa, are given the best chance of winning regular jobs among the Montreal newcomers. The Canadiens will be seeking their sixth straight regular season championship.

Dickie Moore, the Canadiens' veteran left winger, is reported in sound condition following a successful operation to correct a chronic knee condition and Henri Richard, a center, has recovered from an elbow fracture that sidelined him during the Stanley Cup playoffs.

Defensemen Warren Godfrey and Irv Spencer, left winger Guy Gendron and goalies Ed Johnston and Bobby Perrault will be seeking to convince Coach Phil Watson they belong with the Bruins. Each was acquired during the off-season. Spencer is likely to be shifted to center. Johnston, obtained from Spokane of the Western League, and Perrault, from Hershey of the American League, are rookies. Godfrey was picked up from Detroit while Spencer and Gendron were obtained from New York.

The Rangers, with Doug Harvey back in the fold as a player only, have added Ron Horvath, from Chicago, and Bert Olmstead, from Toronto. Horvath, a center, scored 17 times for the Black Hawks last season. Rod Gilbert and Jean Ratelle, promoted from the Kitchener, Ont., Beavers, also are likely to gain regular positions.

Detroit's newcomers include defensemen Doug Barclay and Barclay Plager and forwards Alex Faulkner and Floyd Smith. Murray Hall and Chico Maki are the best among Chicago's first year men while Kent Douglas, up from Springfield of the American League, is likely to crack Toronto's defense corps with a good showing in training camp.

New Guinea Collection

'Perfect' Primitive Art In Rockefeller Exhibit

BY MILES A. SMITH
AP Arts Editor
NEW YORK, Sept. 8 (AP) — There is an art exhibit opening here next week that represents an essence and a mystery. It is from the collection of Michael C. Rockefeller.

It is a project of the Museum of Primitive Art, whose founder and president is Nelson A. Rockefeller, governor of New York.

His son Michael headed an anthropological expedition in New Guinea last year to the region known as Asmat—a native word used by approximately 20,000 Papuans of that area to mean "We, The People." The meaning is significant of the way many primitive peoples conceive themselves to be the center of the universe.

Last Nov. 19, 23-year-old Michael Rockefeller was lost off the New Guinea coast, last seen while swimming from an overturned craft.

On Display
But the art works collected in this expedition, supplemented with photographs, have been brought back for an Asmat art exhibition, in a pavilion across West 54th Street from the Museum, in the garden of the Museum of Modern Art. As the pavilion is unheated, the closing date will depend on the weather — about mid-November.

There will be some 200 objects, including drums, shields, spears, kisi (pronounced bishi) poles that are 20 to 25 feet high, and spirit canoes. The Asmats are wood-carvers.

This exhibit represents an essence because it is what experts call a "perfect" example of primitive art. We have to remember that "primitive art" is a Western concept, and a convenient label, that none of the primitive peoples would have comprehended.

In many lands and many centuries the people who have created "primitive art" didn't think of it as "art." It never would have occurred to them to hang it on the wall to be admired.

Integral Art
For all of them, it was an integral part of the spiritual and physical world they inhabited, woven together as warp and woof of their very life. (That generalization is true whether you apply it to the Asmats, to the very early Egyptians, or to the Scandinavians of the Bronze Age.) They made objects that were used in rituals, for ceremonial magic.

And while we call many of these people "primitive" because we consider ourselves more civilized, their vital "magic" objects (which we call "art" because we find esthetic values in it) were not naive, nor crude; they were sophisticated in concept.

In the case of the Asmats, they live in what still is head-hunter territory. Their art has a kinship with Melanesian art. In point of time, it also has a kinship with other primitive peoples, such as the very early Egyptians. The plan for its state convention in Appleton Oct. 26 to 28.

About 35 members of the board, and representatives of the council's ladies auxiliary are scheduled to attend the meeting.

Chairman for the state convention is Victor Wiedenaupt, 1813 N. Erb St.

hunting ceremonies. They remind Westerners of totems. Actually, they are signs urging relatives of persons killed by head-hunters to revenge.

Find Mysteries
And anthropologists find an element of mystery—perhaps in the plural, for there are a number of mysteries—in the themes used by the Asmats.

Why, for example, do the Asmats portray a recently dead warrior in realistic style, and at the same time portray the tribal ancestors in terms of "spirit elbows" and "spirit hands"? A tray in the exhibit is decorated with the likeness of a recently dead warrior, and below they are the stylized, abstract designs that stand for elbows and hands. The elbows appear as large loops and the hands as tiny displays of carving.

This collection of Asmat art rates as the best in the Western Hemisphere, comparable to those in Leyden and Amsterdam in the Netherlands, which has been the ruling nation in New Guinea for many years.

Painters Unit Board To Meet in Appleton

The board of directors of the Wisconsin Council of Painting and Decorating Contractors of America will hold its quarterly meeting at the Conway Hotel Sept. 15 to Appleton Oct. 26 to 28.

About 35 members of the board, and representatives of the council's ladies auxiliary are scheduled to attend the meeting.

Chairman for the state convention is Victor Wiedenaupt, 1813 N. Erb St.

Historians to See Paintings Of Fox Locks

19th Century Oils To be Explained at Annual Dinner

MENASHA — The Menasha Historical Society will combine art appreciation and history at its annual dinner meeting Thursday at the Hotel Menasha.

Center of the program will be the series of Stephenson and Brookes paintings of the locks of the lower Fox River done on the scene shortly after the completion of the locks in the mid 19th Century.

Explaining the background of the paintings will be Paul Vanderbilt, custodian of the State Historical Society's graphic arts collection.

Noted Artists
Stephenson and Brookes were painters of considerable reputation in their time. Brookes moved from the Midwest and settled in California where his reputation continued to grow.

In November the Brookes society of California will honor his memory with a commemorative showing of his works. Several of the paintings to be displayed Thursday will be a part of this exhibit.

It is planned that the paintings will be moved to several of the Menasha schools after their presentation Thursday.

Indian Prints
The Menasha Historical Society meets the second Thursday of each month from September to May. Its programs have been honored by the State Historical Society with several awards.

The October meeting, planned for the Elisha D. Smith Public Library, also will have an art flair when Silas S. Splengler describes his collection of 19th century Indian lithographs.

Xavier Key Club Starts Work on Fall Service Activities

The Xavier High School Key Club has embarked on several service activities, with a new moderator, Brother J. Vincent, at the helm.

The club is handling the registration of all cars which students bring to school, and will direct parking on the student parking lot.

The group will sponsor a sock hop in Xavier Common on Sept. 14, after the Xavier-Pacelli football game.

Other club activities include the selling of booster tickets to the Pacelli game, the printing and distribution of "Welcome Freshmen" cards, and selling soap to pay for the club's charitable activities.

The Key Club has a membership of 38. On Sept. 19 the club's officers will attend a luncheon with the Appleton Kiwanis Club, which is the sponsor of the Xavier club. Officers are Rudy Kundert, president; Donald Reichert, vice president; Daniel Kamys, secretary, and Daniel Kreutzberg, treasurer.

Golden Ageds Change Monday Meeting Site

KAUKAUNA — A meeting of the Golden Age Club originally scheduled for 7:30 p.m. Monday at the Youth Center has been transferred to meeting rooms in the municipal building, according to James Gertz, recreation director.

The meeting site was changed due to a conflict with high school activities being planned the same night at the Center.

Greek Artist Enthusiastic Over Shapes and Color of Midw

BY JAY JOSLYN
Post-Crescent Sunday Editor

FOND DU LAC — The color of the grass and the leaves, the shape of the trees, the design of the homes and, especially, the people of Winnebago land have moved one of Greece's foremost artists to start the process that will make him an American citizen.

Dimitrios P. "Jim" Zografos enthuses over what is commonplace to us and considers its reason enough for joy; but there is a more philosophical realization that gives depth to his expatriation.

Zografos declares, "Before the war civilization was in Europe, especially France; but, now, civilization has found refuge in the United States."

The artist, who has found a new home in Fond du Lac and who ranks the Fox Cities as one of his favorite communities, played a big part in trying to hold off the forces that drove "civilization" out of Europe.

Jim went underground as a member of the Byrants to combat, in turn, the Italian, German and Communist invaders of his homeland.

"There was no difference among them," he relates, "I spied for the English, the Americans and my own armies against all of them."

Foiled Germans

His activity was stripped of any cloak-and-dagger romance since he used no disguise. He did his spying as an artist and so well did he cover up his real work that he sold several of his paintings to German soldiers.

However, he did not escape untouched. At one time he spent eight hours in the sewers of Athens to elude close pursuit. When capture appeared imminent he returned to his home on the island of Euboea to live quietly with his mother.

The island of Euboea, his birthplace about 60 miles from Athens, played a big part in Jim's artistic life.

Byzantine Art

The island is filled with Byzantine churches and the ancient art, its design and production, was a household byword in the Zografos home since Jim's father, Pantelis Zografos, was a world authority on Byzantine art.

"Since I was one," Jim says, "I was in the middle of ancient art tools, ancient paint materials and ancient designs."

One of the artifacts that will form a good share of Zografos' reputation in the United States are pieces of ceramics decorated in a minutely correct, ancient manner.

"I have some 5,000 designs to use," he says. "Most of them go back 900 years before Christ."

When he is established in Fond du Lac with pieces of ceramics and the proper paint materials imported from Greece, he will start producing these magnificent reproductions of artifacts found in ancient tombs with the help of Dimitra Petta, who was his assistant in his studio in Athens.

Bas Relief

Another art form that Jim is bringing to Winnebago land is a kind of bas relief plaque which Jim and his brother, Prankitelis, devised in Paris where Prankitelis is a professor of Byzantine art at the Ecole des Arts de Coratiff.

Although these two forms of art could be a firm basis for a rewarding career, Zografos is making a quick, firm reputation with watercolors of Wisconsin scenes.

The Appleton Gallery of Arts show in Appleton City Park on Aug. 19 was Zografos' first Wisconsin exhibit and the discovery of respect and enthusiasm was wholehearted and mutual.

Follows Nature

Zografos is a meticulous worker, devoted to nature and extremely enthusiastic with what nature and our Midwestern culture bring to his eyes.

He is a product of the European school who studied in Paris in 1931 when abstractions of all sorts were exploding in all directions. However, Jim has little respect for so-called abstract painting.

The fault he finds in today's abstractions is the acceptance of works by artists with little training or regard for classical disciplines. He points out that Picasso, a fountainhead of modern art, was a classical master before he started experimenting.

Zografos has produced some 40 paintings in the nearly six months he has been in Wisconsin, about two paintings a week. Among them are a few abstract oils, but Zografos has little regard for them.

"I could paint 100 of them a day," he scoffs.

Trained at the famed Metaxevion in the Polytechnics of Athens and the American Legion Hall. The village Ecole des Arts de Coratiff in hall no longer is in use.

Commonplace Midwestern Scenes are objects of enthusiasm for Dimitrios P. Zografos, one of Greece's foremost artists who is planning to become an American citizen. This watercolor was put on display at the Appleton Gallery of Art show Aug. 19.

Paris, Zografos has proved to be a worthy guardian of his family's reputation. The Museum of London has a large collection of the work of Jim's great-grandfather and his grandfather had an equally successful career in the arts.

Four Prizes

The major test for artists in Greece is the quadrennial Zapon Exposition. Entries from the best artists in the country must pass 15 judges before acceptance. In such stiff competition, Zografos took four consecutive first prizes.

His first acquaintanceship with the United States came as the result of winning in another stiff competition.

In 1951, all the artists in Greece were asked to compete in the production of a painting for a Marshall Plan calendar. Zografos' work was chosen and he was awarded a stipend and a four-year visit to the United States.

From 1952 to 1956, Zografos worked in New England, doing murals in Boston and paintings for Greek Orthodox churches in Boston and Portland, Me. In 1955, he was commissioned by the Greek American Aescroption Society to make two paintings for a gift to Henry Cabot Lodge in honor of his work for peace.

Lodge presented the paintings to the United Nations and they are on display in the UN building. One painting is a design linking buildings of the modern world with the democracy of ancient Greece.

No Symphony Season for 'Windy City'

Musicians Local Veto Salary Offer for 1962-63

CHICAGO (AP)—Chicago Symphony supporters will have to seek their music elsewhere this year—the symphony management has cancelled its 1962-63 season.

Negotiations between the orchestra association and the American Federation of Musicians Local 10 broke down Friday. Dr. Eric Oldberg, association president, said only a miracle could save the season.

The final bargaining session broke up after the union rejected the association's new salary offer.

The union wants a $244 a week minimum salary and a 44 week season for the next three years. In addition, it demands a dismissal committee of its own choosing to serve as an appeals board in all dismissal and grievance issues.

The symphony offered a $200 a week minimum salary for a 32 week season this year and 32 weeks during the next two years.

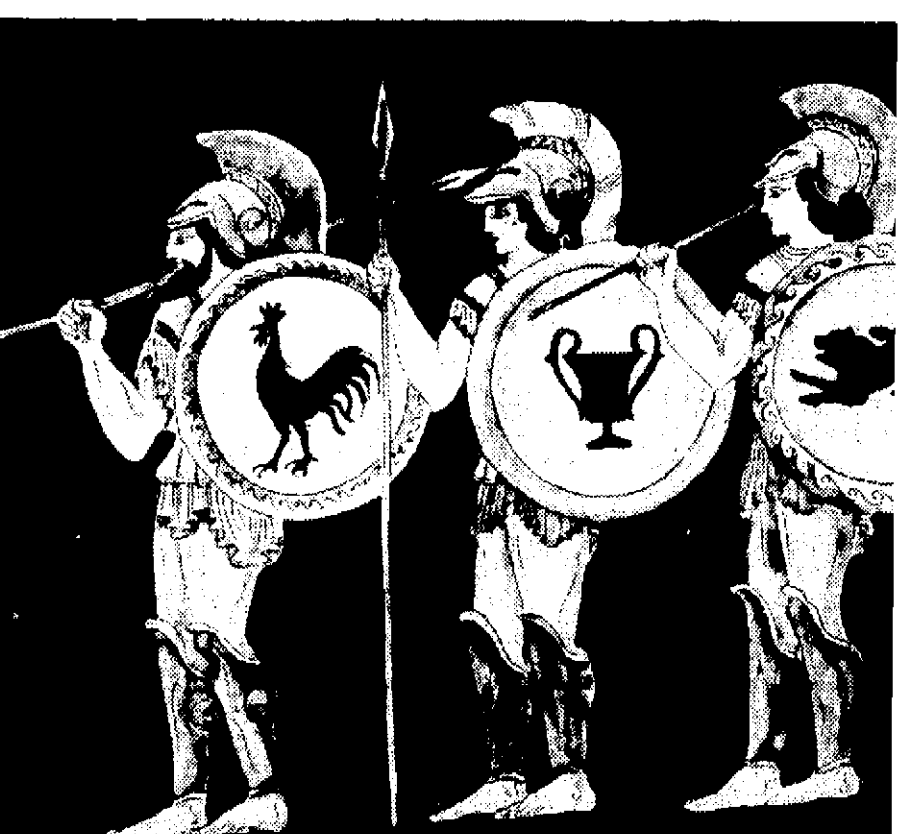

Kimberly Principal Earns Masters Degree

KIMBERLY — James Koehn, principal of Kimberly Grade School for the last three years, received his masters degree from the University of Wisconsin this summer.

Koehn, a Little Chute native and graduate of Stevens Point State College, received the degree in school administration.

Black Creek Voting

BLACK CREEK—Voting hours in the village Tuesday will be from 9 a.m. to 6 p.m. at the Polytechnics of Athens and the American Legion Hall. The village Ecole des Arts de Coratiff in hall no longer is in use.

Prankitelis and Dimitrios Zografos devised a "secret" method creating a bas relief effect with porcelain on wood. Dimitrios Zografos continues the art with both ancient Greek scenes and Midwestern views.

Greece through lines of architecture. When Zografos returned to Greece, he exhibited his American works in a one-man show and found an eager market for American scenes.

Likes Midwest

Despite his extended work in the East, Zografos was surprised by Midwestern landscapes. He explains the East is like Europe. "The ocean is there," he explains.

His aim is to produce a large collection of American scenes and pictures of historic buildings. The commissions coming to Zografos indicate that the start of his collection will be deeply rooted in Wisconsin with many of the paintings staying in the state.

Wednesday Zografos was in Appleton conferring with Charles Buchanan of 229 N. Union St. about a commission. The Buchanans purchased the painting reproduced here at the Appleton Gallery show.

Zografos claims that show was a good omen for him. "Aug. 19, National Gallery of Art in Washington was a red letter day for me," he says, and the Fox Cities seem to agree. Gallerygoers feel that the state soon will welcome Zografos with equal ardor.

It's 'Back-to-School' Time Again

Sophomore Carol Klitzke Prepares to Enter Appleton High

Teen of The Week

Carol numbers music among her many hobbies and has achieved proficiency in both piano and clarinet. She looks forward to working in the Appleton High School band. (Post-Crescent Photo)

Teen of the Week

Carol Klitzke Starts New Adventures in High School

Carol Klitzke, the 1961 mayor of James Madison Junior High School and a new sophomore at Appleton senior high, was described by a friend's mother as "her friend's idea of the all-American girl."

With her short, wavy blonde hair, her clear blue-gray eyes and her sparkling smile, Carol looks the part. And with her variety of interests and talents, her enthusiasm and her sense of responsibility, she earns it.

Carol, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert E. Klitzke, 1907 S. Carpenter St., climaxed her school career to date by being elected mayor (head of the student council) at Madison Junior High last fall, and becoming one of the school's most successful mayors.

Her election victory came after she and her friends had carried on a campaign with a professional flair. Setting up campaign headquarters in the basement of the Klitzke home, they dreamed up a slogan ("Click along with Klick") and prepared posters, campaign buttons and a campaign song.

Carol found politics "very exciting," and would like to run for student council at the senior high school. A student council should "do what the kids ask, and try to have a better school all the way," she said. "It should have fun, but constructive fun."

Carol was a cheerleader at Madison—and shared an election night victory party with a victorious basketball team. But she's no mere spectator when it comes to sports. Her list of sports-interests starts with swimming and includes baseball, tennis, golf, bowling, horseback riding, boating.

She has taken junior lifesaving, and hopes next year to work at one of the pools. So this summer, in addition to babysitting, she tried "to have as much fun as possible" while she still had free time.

Peace Corps

Like her friends, Carol is looking forward to high school with all its newness. Looking a little farther ahead, she plans to attend college—possibly the University of Wisconsin—and prepare for work in the Peace Corps or some related activity.

Carol will be adding the Terror band to her busy schedule this fall. She plays the clarinet, and also the piano, and has plans to give a piano recital soon.

Carol, 15, has two sisters — Barbara, 14, a ninth grader at Madison, and Judy, 8, a third grader at McKinley School. With two teen-agers in the family, the telephone in the Klitzke household is kept busy, and the ping pong room in the basement is a popular gathering place.

"Sometimes, when too many arrive at once, I hand them all dish towels and put them to work," Carol's mother said.

Everything is 'Gym Dandy' For Athlete

BY DICK McDANIEL
Post-Crescent Staff Writer

WAUPACA — Keeping physically fit is becoming a national trend under the President John F. Kennedy administration, but Jerry Jensen, 15-year-old son of the city hall custodian, is making an "all out" effort.

Jensen, who will be a freshman this year at Waupaca High School, built a gymnasium in a storage room in the basement of the city hall, next to the family apartment.

Jensen has ambitions of becoming a professional wrestler or a professional weight lifter. In addition to reading magazines and posters on physical development, he also built many exercising devices, which he uses at least 45 minutes per day.

Started Last Year

He started his gymnasium last year with a pair of homemade bar bells which weighed 50 pounds. He then built a multiple arm exerciser out of a couple of small chains, pulleys and weights.

He added a chin-up bar and made an abdominal board. The abdominal board works best, he found when he straps his feet into it and works from an upside-down position. A convenient sewer pipe is located about 16-inches above the floor to rest the board on.

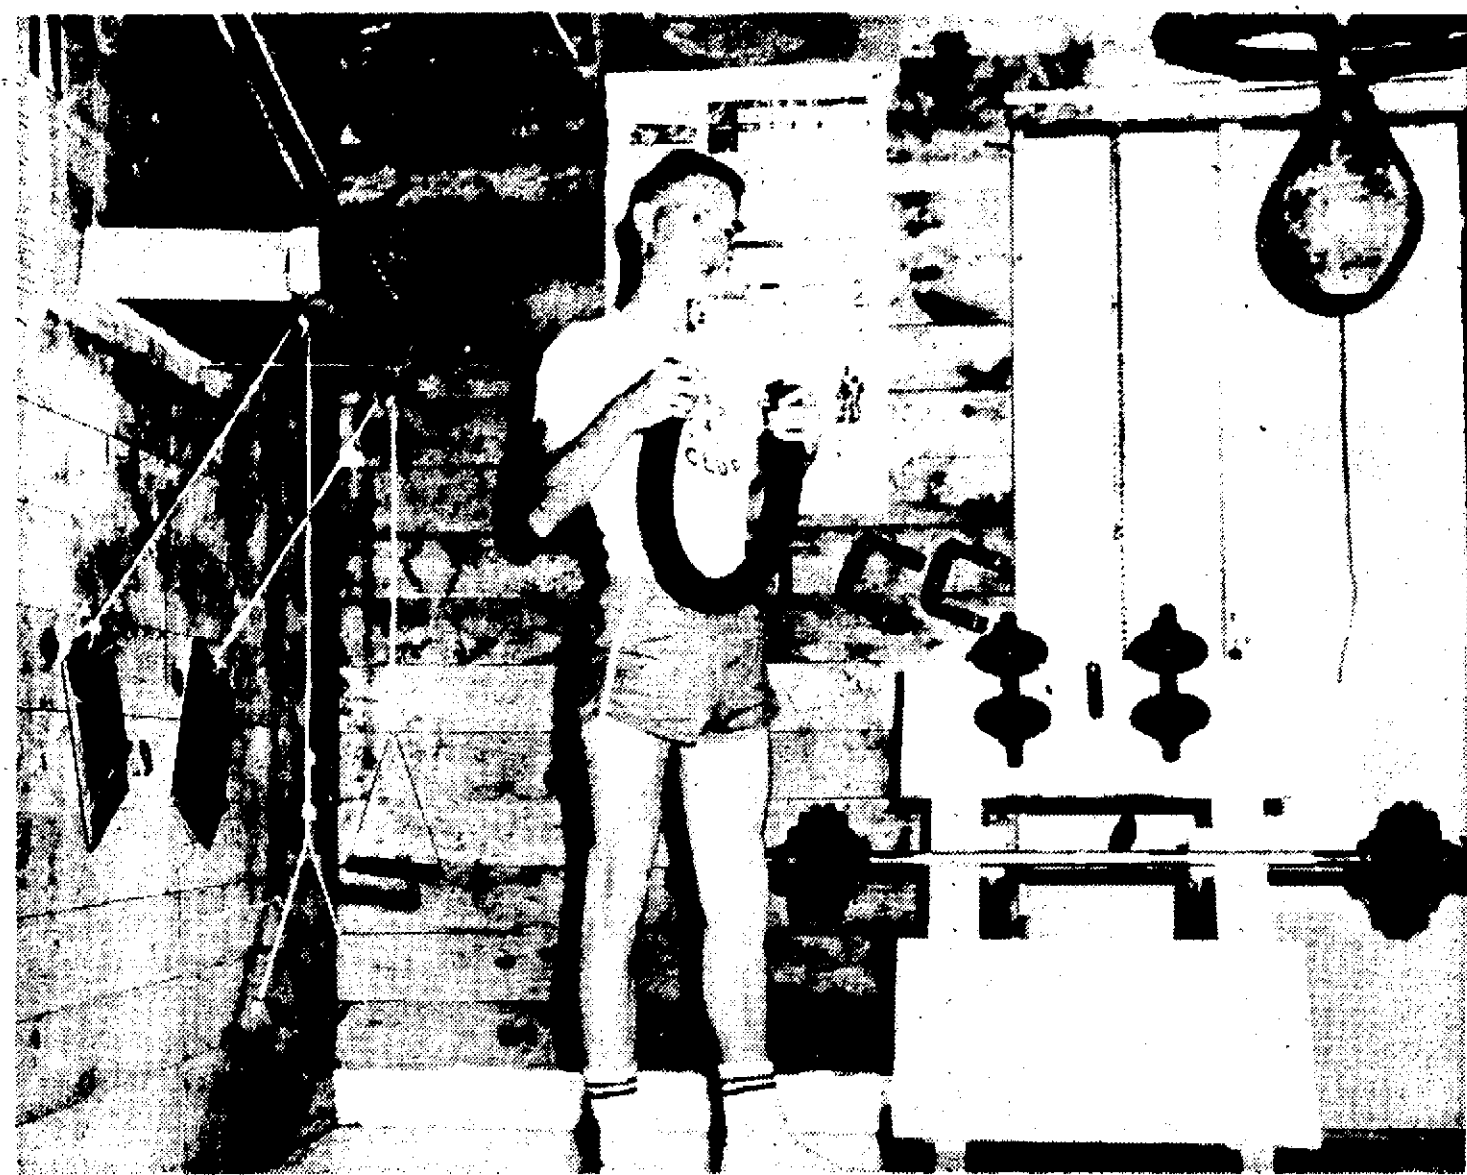

He found an over-head door spring to take the place of a Sampson twister. He also made an isometric rack out of a piece of wood, chain and bar. The isometric bar is designed to exercise without movement.

Jensen has added a jumping rope, dumb-bells, kettle-bells and bar-bells and even a homemade wrist roller.

All of his equipment is confined in a room which is about 10 by 12 feet.

His interest in physical development also is spreading to some of his friends. Greg Peterson and his brother, Steve, also exercise in the compact gym.

The youth feels that if he keeps training, watching his diet and exercises daily, he may some day join the ranks of the Olympic stars.

From Pipe Dream to Paddle-wheeler

BY FERN SMITH
Post-Crescent Staff Writer

There is a little of the Huck Finn in every man. Rooted to the bank of a river or stream, he dreams of faraway places and, as a leaf, a chiu, a log or a ship floats by, he sails away in his imagination on a ship of his own.

With manhood some of these dreams diminish or disappear. Not so with Earl Brien, Neenah, who has carried his dream and longing to be captain of his own paddle wheeler, right smack into reality. Since he stood on the Fox River as a boy and watched the "Leander Choate," the "Thistle" or the "Paul L." churn through Winnebago Lake waters, Brien has wanted to pilot a paddle wheeler.

Now he is the captain of the "Hester B" a 30 foot paddle wheeler, and in the hush of summer twilight he can be found moving along at about five miles an hour on the Cham of Lakes, Waupaca. Every captain is proud of his ship but few are its creator. Every inch of the "Hester B" was the captain's dream, and Brien built the ship from drawing board to launching.

It all began last year on the Fourth of July when a family conversation about what to do next around the summer cottage on the Cham was climaxed by Earl's standing up and saying "Let's go now and look at the pontoons." When the 30 foot navy pontoons arrived two weeks later, the project was on its way from drawing board to reality.

His First Adventure

The boat builder is a calm, deliberate man and this was his first adventure since he had tied a string to a board with willow mast and handkerchief and launched it in the Fox River. He knew how he wanted it to look. He wanted to build it for comfort, not for speed.

Brien had a number of things to work out. Since the pontoons were built to support better than four tons, he had to watch weight and balance closely. He calculated that every 500 pounds he added to the deck would submerge the pontoons one inch. With flexible cable he wanted to put all controls in the pilot house.

How deep were the paddles to bite into the water and at what ratio would the wheels have to turn to give him the cruising speed he wanted? These were but a few of the problems to be weighed and solved.

Constant companions were his dream, his wife's encouragement, the advice of friends—and his pipe. Asked if he ever changed pace or grew upset when things didn't go quite like he wanted them to, he recalled, "Some days I smoked more tobacco than other days."

From launch-like prow to paddle wheel, the "Hester B" is a trim ship which can make her way in a foot of water or on the deep. Her beam from rub rail to rub rail is eight feet, eight inches. On her plastic-coated plywood deck are a six foot pilot house, eight foot deck lounge and the motor housing.

As skipper of the "Hester B" Earl Brien, Neenah, fulfills a boyhood dream—to pilot his own paddle wheeler. His skill as a mechanic and carpenter were put to real purpose in the workshop behind his summer retreat on the Cham-O-Lakes. Ship shape is the word to describe his craft. Supervisor of buildings and grounds for the Neenah public schools since 1939 his "crew" shares the excitement of this summer's launching.

storage tanks hold 12 gallons of regular gasoline. All controls are in the pilot house, and the craft is guided by two rudders at the end of the pontoons. She is highly maneuverable and responsive to the pilot's wheel.

The 16 paddles, 42 inches long, are mounted on 50 inch wheels. Each paddle is 10 inches wide, extending three inches past the wheels. The paddle wheel turns at a 1-40 ratio, chain driven from the inboard marine engine mounted parallel to the wheel. These wheels, incidentally, were improvised from a piece of potato spraying equipment.

"The Hester B" 30 foot paddle wheeler plies full speed toward dockside on Taylor Lake, Cham-O-Lakes, Waupaca. Residents along the Cham watch for the trim craft as it moves full speed ahead at six m.p.h. Skipper Earl Brien says, "I built it for comfort, not for speed, and it was designed for a fast walk." Fishermen on the cham wish he would build more as its gentle wake does not disturb their favorite pastime. It was named for first mate Hester Brien.

On July 21 the "Hester B" was scheduled for launching. A neighbor, Hobie Edmunds, used his powerful launch to assist with the towing. Sliding on her skids down the gentle slope to Taylor Lake was the dream. As puffs of smoke churned from the dreamer's pipe, Brien watched with outward calm. Who will ever know what questions were chasing around in his mind? Would she float? Would she move? Would she list to port or starboard?

'Good, Fast Walk'

As the pontoons hit the shallows, she righted herself, the captain opened the foredeck gate, stepped into the pilot house, touched the starter button, shifted the long wooden lever to reverse position. Slowly the "Hester B" moved out into the quiet waters and made her way along Government Island on her successful shakedown cruise. Nothing will be changed. The captain likes her pace, "a good fast walk."

Some men are happy with dreams, others happiest making dreams come true. Named for Mrs. Brien, mistress of the dream, the "Hester B" may be Earl's

Tulip Bulbs to Be Late, Dutch Growers State

BY RAY PAGEL

Early birds may be temporarily disappointed in shopping for tulip bulbs this year.

Bulbs grown in Holland, exported to this country by the hundreds of millions, will be about two or three weeks late. But they will be of excellent quality, the growers declare, and there will be plenty of them.

Blame the Dutch weather for the slight delay. Holland, like all of Europe, had an unusually cold spring and a record cool summer this year. That resulted in late blooming of tulips and a prolonged bulb foliage life. Foliage must be allowed to ripen naturally to produce large, vigorous bulbs.

It won't make any difference so far as your spring garden is concerned. There will be ample time to get a root growth started this fall, if that's the way you like to plant your tulips.

It's fact, however, that fall growth isn't necessary for tulips unless you want extra early spring bloom. You can plant tulip bulbs right up to the time the ground freezes hard.

Gustave Springer, American representative of the Associated Bulb Growers of Holland, has assured American dealers that the 1962 bulb crop is one of the largest and best in history.

Uncle Jack's Garden Diary

BY UNCLE JACK

An incident in our neighborhood recently called to mind a problem of ethics—or perhaps legality—in the lives of householders who are also garden fanciers.

Two friends of mine completed a real estate transaction, involving a home and a sizeable grounds with good landscaping featuring trees, shrubs and well-laid out perennial beds with some specimens of considerable personal value.

The mother-in-law of the seller turned up after the transaction was completed to dig up some of the best perennials for transplanting to her own garden, with the consent of her son-in-law. The buyer,

What is etiquette in such situations, I wondered?

Thinking of Moving

We have been thinking in a general way of moving our home during the next few years, as a result of the fact that our circumstances have changed. The children are growing up.

In these 12 years at our present location we have spent a good deal of money, and through arduous work and patient trial and error experimentation, have developed attractive shrub borders, rose gardens, and perennial plantings.

It is unlikely that the average buyer will be as devoted to our particular enthusiasms as we are. It is also likely that the typical buyer won't object if we remove some seed stock for our new home, and especially of these perennials such as peony and iris

New Fabrics Fill Bill for Sleeping Bags

The old-fashioned blanket bed roll seems to be consigned to cowboys in Western movies and photographs of Civil War soldiers.

New man-made fibers have, in the last two decades, given a strong impetus to the sleeping bag for campers, particularly tent campers. Some tent trailer and travel trailer campers make up their bed just as at home with sheets and blankets and foam or inner-spring mattress.

Sleeping robes is probably the more correct term to use since a sleeping robe is one with a zipper on two sides that will enable the bag to be opened flat. A sleeping bag is one with a zipper down part of one side. We will call them all sleeping bags whether they are the mummy or rectangular types.

The rectangular type is used by most family campers who drive off in their car for a vacation. The mummy type finds its use among those who carry their pack on their back and travel light. It looks like an Egyptian mummy's casket.

Man-made fibers are replacing wool wastes and kapok as insulation materials in sleeping bags and provide good protection from the cold without substantially increasing the cost. Arctic area and South Pole campers seek sleeping bags filled with goose down, the best insulation material, but rather costly.

Down is about 95 per cent as efficient as new goose down, equal mixtures of goose feathers and that represent considerable searching around the countryside over the period of more than a decade.

Well, what of the etiquette in such a situation?

I have consulted a couple of realtors and their advice is succinct:

Be sure to include such conditions and understandings in the legal agreement, as in the offer to purchase papers. Otherwise you will be inviting misunderstandings and, possibly, law-suits.

Those corner fences and other physical improvements turned out during laborious weekends go with the place. You cannot remove that velvety patch of lawn that has rewarded your labors on so many spring weekpends. The unique specimens of perennial bloom you might take away, but you had better have an explicit understanding with your buyer before you try to do so.

Sunday, September 9, 1962 Appleton Post-Crescent 6 goose down is 85 per cent as efficient as goose down. Dacron and the new Fortrel are 71 per cent as efficient, kapok has 44 per cent the warmth of goose down and wool waste is about 23 per cent as efficient. Acetate fibers are between polyester fibers and kapok as to warmth.

If the temperature at night is likely to dip to 45 degrees, to get equal warmth a camper would need two pounds of virgin Dacron or Fortrel or four pounds of wool wastes or kapok.

Dacron and Fortrel are tradenames for polyester fibers while Celacel is an acetate fiber. Federal law requires sleeping bags to have the identification of all shell and lining materials by their generic terms such as cotton, rayon, nylon or whatever material is used.

A camper should also inquire as to the number of pounds of insulation filling in the bag and the temperature range. Many sleeping bags list these on the tags.

The outer covering should be a water repellent material. Avoid a waterproof material since the sleeping bag must be able to "breathe." Body moisture must pass through the bag or the bag will lose its warmth.

Rubberized or plastic bottom sleeping bags have several drawbacks. They cannot sufficiently let the body moisture through and thus "hold the cold" within the bag. This will lead to its losing its insulating value. Secondly, they cannot be laundered or dry cleaned, a must for sleeping bags.

Besides requiring twice as much weight as the polyester fibers, to give the same protection, kapok has a tendency to bunch and break down, leaving spots with little insulation.

'Big Mac' Fears Not Winds . . . But Fire

Tanker Collision Main Concern of Bridge Engineers

The grinding, crushing ice of the Straits of Mackinac is not a problem. Neither is the bitter, winter cold of northern Michigan. Nor the winds, clocked at times at more than 70 miles per hour.

The greatest fear of the men who built and operate the "Mighty Mac," the bridge which joins Upper and Lower Michigan is, strangely enough, fire.

This may seem odd to the layman. The bridge is mainly steel and concrete, so what possibly could burn? But it isn't that kind of a fire which worries C. E. Holtenthoff, general manager of the giant bridge.

"What we are concerned about," says the articulate engineer, "is the possibility of a gasoline tanker truck becoming involved in an accident on the bridge. It wouldn't be the flames themselves which would do the damage. It would be the intense heat of the burning gasoline."

Chances Remote

The basis for the fear is very real, although the chances of such a conflagration are remote, for the thousands of degrees of heat could crack concrete and stretch or melt the steel cables and members of the supporting framework.

There are only three points on the five-mile-long structure at which a fire could be a catastrophe—the anchor blocks to which the huge steel supporting cables are attached, and near the center of the span where the cables again dip down to the roadway. But even if all the conditions for a disastrous fire were met, the bridge would not cease to exist.

"We would be back in business in a year—two years at the most," says Holtenthoff. "We are completely insured. Even our revenues would continue while we were out of operation."

The general manager's office, and all others of the Mackinac Bridge Authority, are located on the St. Ignace, or northern, approach to the bridge. It is at this end, too, that all tolls are collected, for both north and southbound traffic.

"We started out charging the same toll as the ferries charged before the bridge came into operation, $3.25. Since then we were forced to raise it to $3.75," Holtenthoff notes. "Actually, it still is a fair price, for it applies to a car regardless of the number of occupants. On the boats additional tolls were charged for the passengers."

That figure of $3.75 is the rate for passenger cars. The rate goes up to $15.50 for truck-trailer combinations of more than five axles. That may sound steep, but one realistically must face the fact that the Bridge Authority must pay out $11,000 per day for interest on the $100 million bonds required to finance the bridge undertaking.

The "world's greatest bridge" is regarded as a masterpiece of design, incorporating principles in its construction which were unknown in the field only a few years before. It is built to give with the wind, to expand or shrink as the temperature goes up or down. If you cross it in the dead of winter the center may be seven feet higher than on a hot summer day.

Keeping an eye on traffic across the Mackinac Bridge can be done without leaving the administrative offices on the St. Ignace side. Here one of the bridge staff monitors two television screens on which he can see the vehicles rolling across the structure.

Accidents have not been a major problem on the four-lane roadway. Most frequently involved are light camping trailers which can be flipped over by a capricious breeze. But the ingenious bridge staff has found a solution to that problem. Motorists pulling trailers on windy days are flagged down and held at the bridge approach until a big truck comes along. Then the two go across side by side, the truck protecting its smaller companion from the force of the blow.

The biggest day financially for the bridge, which does nearly half its business in July and August, was last Aug. 4 when the take was $51,714.25. The heaviest day for traffic was in 1958, the first full year of operation, when 15,419 vehicles rolled across.

Coolidge 'Kept Cool,' Stopped Police Strike

BY W. R. DOBERSTEIN

The city of Boston can claim a number of firsts in American history, but there was one "first" on this date in 1919 when setting a precedent displeased a lot of citizens—and most of all the Governor of the state of Massachusetts.

The Boston police had organized a union and when the Police Commissioner refused to recognize it, they picked Sept. 9 to go on strike—and left the city practically without police protection (more than two-thirds of the force walked off). The strike ended three days later but it was too late. Governor Calvin Coolidge cut loose in an unexpected manner. Ruling that the strikers would not be permitted to return to their jobs, Coolidge summarized his wrath in a terse telegram to Samuel Gompe, President of the American Federation of Labor: "There is no right to strike against the public safety by anybody, anywhere, any time. This from a mild-mannered man who has often been considered our most "quiet" President. Which only goes to prove it's dangerous to underestimate any person of authority.

We're in accord with J.C. Ads should clarify — not mystify. His complaint?

"Why are terms used that no one understands? For example an ad on jackets (not yours) played up 'foam laminated' as though it's one of the seven wonders of the world. Perhaps it is, but what does it actually mean?"

Foam-laminated refers to a process whereby a sponge-like layer of foam is permanently bonded to the fabric. This has created jacket "news" as it actually adds warmth with little additional weight or bulk.

To G.R. — Sorry, but semi-brogue shoes with a tuxedo won't work too well. But why not kill two birds with one stone? Get a plain toe in a smooth black leather and you can use them for general wear as well.

BRAUER'S

Bill H. is getting some resistance to the "patched look." He writes:

"I've noticed many sport-coats with suede elbow patches, so decided I would do the same with a sweater I like that's gone through the elbows. What's your opinion? My wife thinks patches look out of place on a sweater."

Why are more so than on a sport jacket? Try it. We think she'll agree that it's both a practical and a smart way to prolong the life of a favorite sweater.

It certainly does. A purchase as important as a diamond should not be made on the basis of price or "cut-rate" inducement, but on the firm foundation of quality and value received. At this store we proudly display the emblem of Registered Jeweler, American Gem Society — your assurance that we know and guarantee the quality and value of every diamond we offer for sale.

Getting Ready for High School Days

BY JACQUELINE FIX
Post-Crescent Staff Writer

The move from junior to senior high school is more than just a change of buildings. It's a milestone on the road to adulthood.

"We're looking forward to everything, because it's new," said Carol Klitzke, a new sophomore at Appleton High School.

The old, familiar things of school life will be there but they won't be quite the same. Classes will start to count more, as college or work loom closer. Students will be from across the city and outside the city, instead of from one junior high school neighborhood. Clubs, sports, dances will be more important and more exciting.

"We're waiting to find out what high school is like," Carol said. "We don't know what to expect."

More Dating

But about one thing there's no wondering — "everyone is looking forward to dating," she said. Most dating so far has been as group activities. But high school will bring dances, later hours, and that special person (or persons).

To get ready for high school Carol bought books, proudly encased in the shiny AHS covers, and clothes — "mostly sweaters; sweaters and skirts will never change." She tried on a golden party dress and let herself dream a little.

The new sophs had an orientation day last spring to go through all their classes. Carol is "wondering about biology — cutting up frogs and worms and all that."

The many fields open, in classes, clubs and other activities, are a big part of the challenge of high school. Carol is starting with an interest in the tennis team and dramatics, will be in the Terror marching band, and is anxious to find out more about other activities.

Carol was 1961 mayor and a cheerleader at James Madison Junior High School. After a taste of politics, she would like to run for student council at the high school.

She'd also like to try out for cheerleader, but expects stiff competition.

Early Rising

One of the less enticing aspects of the new school year for Carol is the time the alarm goes off. She lives conveniently right across the street from Madison, but the senior high is across town — no more sleeping until 7:45.

With a touch of nostalgia, Carol said she would miss Madison School — "everyone is so friendly there." But she's looking forward to high school with enthusiasm and a lively interest, and isn't worried about the razzing the "s-s-sophomores" expect.

"High school will be a bigger challenge and a bigger responsibility," she says seriously. There's also little doubt that she expects it to be a lot of fun.

Getting ready for a new school year is made up of many things. Far left, Carol talks high school plans with two chums, Susan Brower, on the ground, and Lynn Behlin. A conference with Sherwood Russell, Carol's adviser at Madison Junior High, brought Mrs. Klitzke into Carol's high school planning. Books, lower left, were purchased with the help of Cindy Neumeier and there still was time to keep up with life saving lessons taught by Robert Rath. (Post-Crescent Photos by Edward Deschler)

The happiest job for a girl getting ready for school is buying clothes. Below, Carol and her mother, assisted by Camille Rudolph, a college board representative from Loretta Heights College, Denver, look over some "working" clothes; while, above, Mrs. Klitzke and Pat Riley fit out Carol in a party dress.

New horizons give Carol pause to ponder what high school has to offer. In the quiet of her room she can mull over her achievements so far in school and try to figure how they will fit into her new career in high school.

Wallendas Rise From Tragedy, Perform Again

The Great Wallendas, presenting what in show business is described as "the most chilling high wire act in American circus history," will headline the Al Dobritch circus when it plays at the Brown County Veterans Memorial Arena, Green Bay, from Nov. 2 through 4.

Returning to the high wire following last January's tragic accident in which two performers were killed and two seriously injured, the troupe has re-organized its "human pyramid" and is again performing its daredevil feats on the cable some 50 feet above ground without a safety net.

"The Brown County Arena was most fortunate in obtaining this spectacular and sensational act to headline the circus," said John P. Holloway, Arena Administrator. "The act, in itself, for many years was a stellar attraction in the Ringling circus and, since leaving Ringlings, has played in Shrine circuses throughout the nation."

New Members Added

Coming to Green Bay for this showing are Herman, Karl, Gunther and Mario Wallenda, all of whom were involved in the fatal collapse of the seven person "pyramid" in Detroit before an audience of more than 5,000 horrified spectators. Three new members have been added since, all of them Wallendas, by direct descent or by marriage to a Wallenda.

Actually living out the old adage "the show must go on" the Wallendas rebuilt their act immediately after the fatal crash at the Detroit Coliseum. The Wallendas entered the circus business back in 1874, with an act founded by Karl's grandfather. The Wallenda children and grandchildren grew up in and around the big tops of Europe and at the age of 16 it was Karl who conceived the idea of building the pyramid and riding the high wire on a bicycle.

It was not until 1928 that the troupe came to America to play the Ringling circus. The Wallendas made their debut in Madison Square Garden in 1928.

Circus history recalls that the mammoth audience gave them a rousing, standing ovation that stopped the show, making them famous in a single performance.

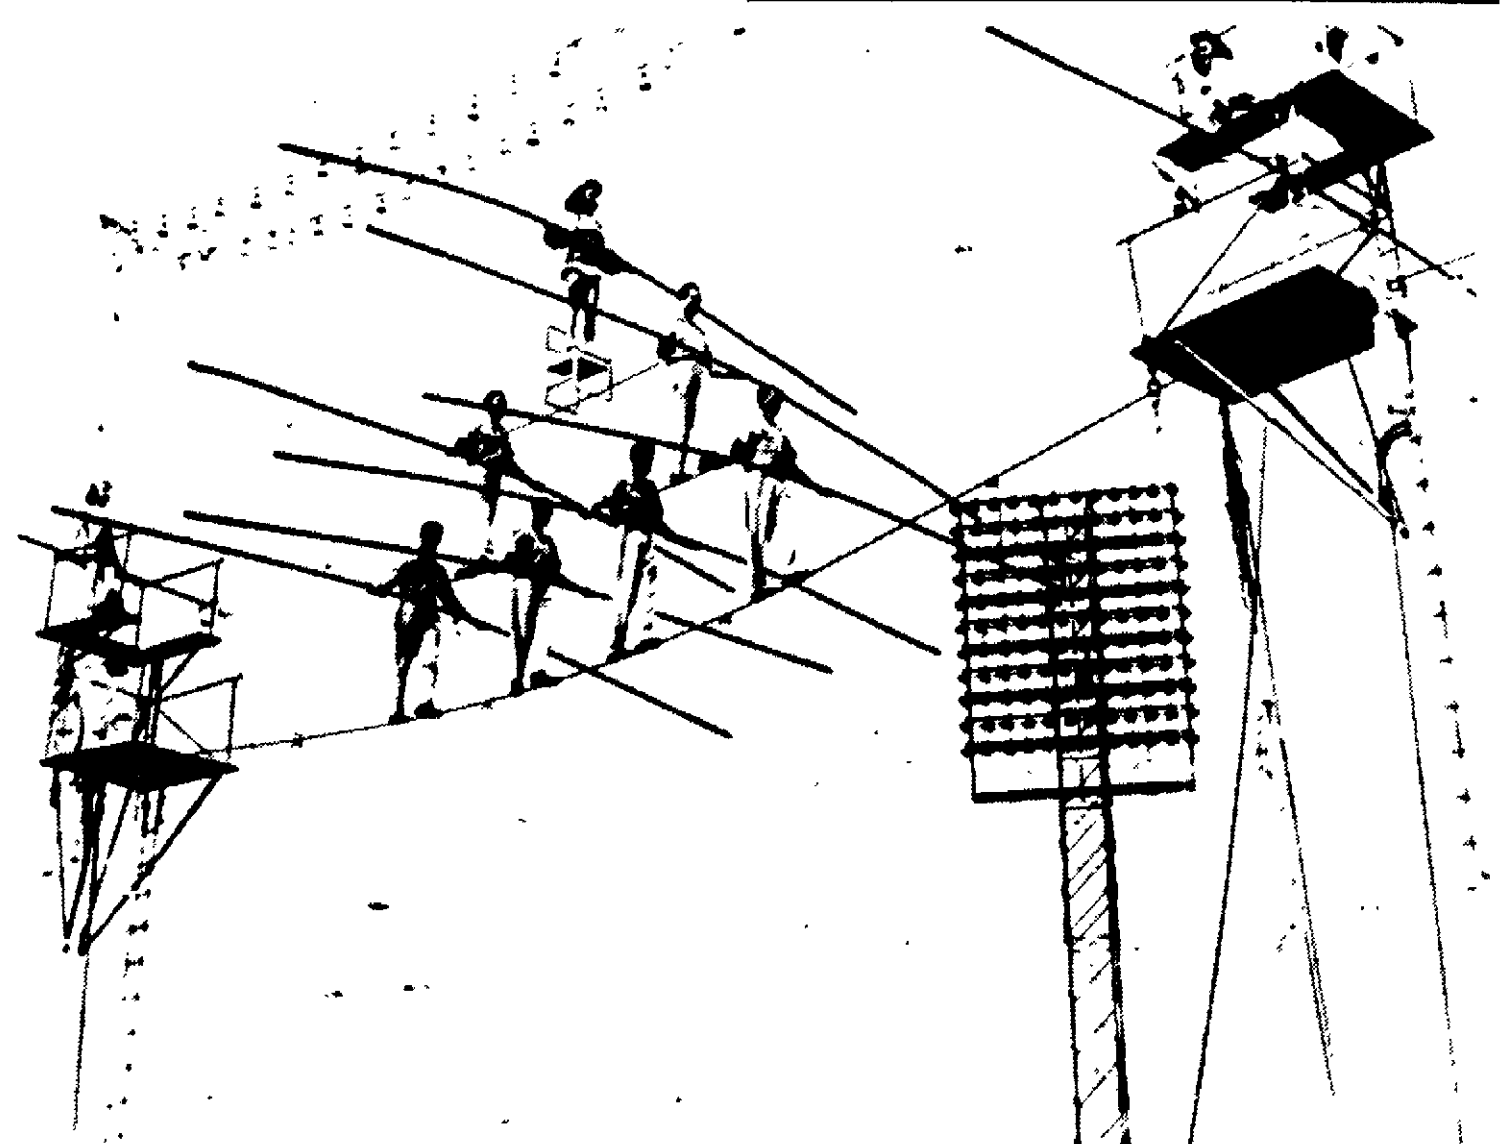

The accident in Detroit that shocked the entire entertainment world was not the first time there had been a slip on the high wire. In an early appearance wet grounds caused the anchors to shift, bringing the pyramid down. However, in this instance, all seven were able to grasp the wire or to hold onto some other member of the troupe, and except for minor injuries the show went on.

Again, while performing in Managua, Nicaragua, an earthquake struck while they were on the high wire. The tremors released the stakes holding the equipment and all of the Wallendas slid down a rope to the ground.

"The Al Dobritch show, though not to well known in this area, is one of the leading circuses in America today," Holloway said. "It has played for the Shrine Hospitals in many cities; it has played Los Angeles, St. Louis, Detroit, Cincinnati and other large cities in the United States and is most popular in Toronto and Montreal, Canada.

"In addition to the Wallendas it will bring in many well known and spectacular acts, together with the regular circus array of clowns, trained animals, wild animals and everything that makes for well rounded performance."

Present plans call for six performances in the

The Great Wallenda Troupe, returning to the high wire after a fatal accident earlier this year, will stage an exhibition at the Brown County Arena, Green Bay, Nov. 2-4.

Plans Colorful Shows

A full schedule of sports and entertainment events of major importance is on the fall and winter program at the Brown County Veterans Memorial Arena, Green Bay.

The first big event will be the closed circuit television showing of the Patterson-Liston heavyweight championship bout Sept. 25. The Royal Scott Grays come in on Oct. 16, and the Al Dobritch International Circus will play six shows in three days on Nov. 2, 3 and 4.

Following the circus, Holiday On Ice will make its fifth annual appearance, presenting five shows from Dec. 14 through Dec. 16.

Second Auto Show

The second annual Auto Show is slated for Jan. 11 through Jan. 13; the Globetrotters, Feb. 19, and the annual Home Show, March 1 through March 4. On April 4 and 5 the mammoth Boy Scout show will occupy the Arena, and the annual Sport Show is scheduled for April 17 through April 21.

In addition 18 hockey games are on the schedule, with the Bobcats playing such outstanding Central league teams as Des Moines, Ia., Rochester and St. Paul, Minn.

"Everything points to a busy and most interesting three day run. Because the circus will appear here during the Wisconsin Teachers' convention period there will be a matinee on Friday, as well as on Saturday and Sunday, with evening performances on each of the three days.

Hands Across the TV Sea

BY EDGAR PENTON

HOLLYWOOD — What happens when an American and a British family exchange teen-age daughters for a year?

A lot of laughs and plenty of heartwarming scenes of the adjustments made by both families and their offspring, according to executive producer Cy Howard. His newest television entry, "Fair Exchange," uses this plausible peg as the premise of the comedy series premiering Friday, Sept. 21 on CBS-TV.

"Fair Exchange," television's first hour-long comedy, is the brainchild of veteran laughmaker Howard, whose "My Friend Irma" was the medium's first live half-hour situation comedy.

The idea for the series occurred to Howard while in London on business. Why not a comedy show about a British family for American audiences?

"I decided to view the British domestic scene through the eyes of an American—specifically, a teen-ager," Howard says.

"From this thought emerged the concept of two soldier acquaintances during the last war, exchanging their daughters so each can further a career and broaden her horizon."

In this comedy tale of two cities—the "Fair Exchange" families live in New York and London—the adventures in a foreign land experienced by the two girls, the reactions from their new families and the myriad adjustments provide the plot structures for limitless comedic situations.

A clever interchange of scenes, alternating back and forth across the ocean, will keep audiences enjoying the causes and results in the translation, and in unexpected sequence.

Howard has tailored his cast with great skill, casting for the ear as well as the eye for an amusing amalgam of veteran players and bright newcomers.

Eight players—four to each family—comprise the regulars in "Fair Exchange."

Heading the American household as Eddie Walker is a veteran performer, actor-comedian-dancer Eddie Foy Jr. This will be the first continuing television role for Eddie who has been an infrequent video performer.

'Better Half'

Foy's better half in "Fair Exchange" is played by Audrey Christie, who has been before audiences and cameras since she was 15 and has starred on Broadway and in motion pictures.

Brown-eyed, auburn-haired Lynn Loring plays the vivacious daughter, Patty Walker, the American teen-ager in the "Fair Exchange" lend-lease program for laughs.

Comedy masters Foy and Christie have as their "Fair Exchange" son one of the most talented juveniles on the Hollywood scene in the person of Flip Mark who lives up to his name with his mastery of the flip line that hits the mark in his scenes.

Meanwhile, back at the British counterpart of the domestic scene, four performers of established reputations in England comprise the Finch family of funsters.

The foursome, chosen by producer Howard after weeks of auditioning in London, will give a ring of authenticity to their scenes.

Tommy Finch, the slightly beleaguered counterpart to Eddie Foy in the role of father, is Victor Maddern, craggy-faced British actor, who will be readily recognizable to devotees of late, late television movies.

Diana Chesney, a celebrated character actress in England, will play the mother, Sybil Finch.

Bubbling Beauty

A bubbling brown-eyed beauty who sang and danced her way into the role of the British daughter, Heather Finch, is perfectly cast Judy Carne.

In the tradition of Freddie Bartholomew, Roddy MacDowell and the young Peter Lawford, fourteen-year-old Dennis Waterman seems certain to capture the hearts of American audiences in his role of the serious son, Neville Finch.

Neville is a cricket-loving fan, a devoted son who leads fog-bound visitors to the Finch home in a London square also peopled with such diverse comedy characters as an ex-officer of His Majesty's Royal Guards in Inja, a beer-quaffing elderly Irishwoman who never forgets the Sinn-Fein revolt, and a sprightly octogenarian with a balky, explosive, vintage auto.

While one company is filming the Walker family didoes on sound stage 1-A, another crew is grinding a camera on the Finch fillips in 1B, just a sound-proof door away.

End result: two half-hours of film which are fitted to script blueprint of intertwined events in the film editing room.

Eddy Foy Jr. stars in "Fair Exchange," new comedy series on CBS-TV. In it an American and British family exchange teen-age daughters for a year. Lynn Loring, right, plays the American gal, with Judy Carne as her British counterpart.

MOZART-STRAUSS

Clarinet Concerto in A Major, K 622 (Mozart), Horn Concerto No. 1 in E-Flat Major (Strauss), Robert Marcellus, clarinet, and Myron Bloom, French horn with the Cleveland Orchestra, George Szell conducting. Epic LC LC 3841 (Stereo BC 1169).

That Bob Marcellus, principal flutist of the Peninsula Music Festival, makes a highly successful debut in his first major recording should be no surprise to festival veterans who have enjoyed his suave technique and creamy, flowing tone over the years. It suffices to say that his performance of the Mozart concerto sustains the reputation he has built at Fish Creek.

Marcellus isn't the whole show, however. Bloom contributes a flexible, bright and ringing performance of the horn concerto and the orchestra supports both with verve and polish. Sound is clean and brilliant. On all counts a most satisfactory recording.

BLOCH-PETERSON

Sinfonia Breve (Bloch), Free Variations for Orchestra (Wayne Peterson); Minneapolis Symphony, Antal Dorati conducting. Mercury MG 50288 (Stereo SR 90288).

The vigor and sweep of the late Ernest Bloch's Sinfonia belie his years (he wrote it when he was 72). Complex, powerful and replete with colorful, driving vitality, it is an exciting work, alternating sharp dissonance with singing melodic intervals. You have to watch the volume controls, though.

Wayne Peterson's Variations complement the Bloch impressively. Melodic and relaxed in the early portions, it builds to a whirlwind climax. Both pieces were apparently recorded before Dorati left Minneapolis but are only now being released. Engineering is well up to Mercury's standards, sound is fresh and alive and jacket notes, though brief, are informative.

Periodically a recording company gambles on a sleeper that pays off. From the catalogue number, Epic was in no hurry but if this one doesn't hit the jack pot there's at least one reviewer who will be even more surprised than when he first heard it. Here is a truly remarkable recording.

Miss Chenoweth has fought for years to rescue her instrument, one of the oldest known, from the obscurity of the percussion grab-bag. This record should cap her fight with success.

Her artistry is a revelation, the music is lovely and the sound, despite the handicap of hissing surfaces in the review copy, is rich and mellow. The jacket notes are just right for such a recording, models of what such essays should be.

School Lunches With 'A' Appeal

Tuck a slice or two of Banana Loaf Cake in the school lunch box to delight the scholar. It's easy to make, keeps beautifully and packs without a problem in any of the lunch box wraps. Another pleasing surprise is Honey-Banana Shake, a change from plain or chocolate milk. Fill the vacuum jug with this honey-sweetened drink and there won't be a drop left. Of course, bananas alone are ideal to send along to school any day as a dessert. A word to the wise, both the fruit and these banana recipes are just as popular for after-school snacks, too.

If Moms were graded as their student sons and daughters, these nourishing recipes for lunch box or home would bring her high marks for sure. They're builders of youthful vim, vigor and vitality. They're easy to prepare. The recipe ingredients are young fry favorites from 'way back. Mom would rate E for effort and A for results.

Banana Loaf

- 2 cups sifted flour
- 3 teaspoons baking powder
- 1/2 teaspoon salt
- 1/4 teaspoon nutmeg
- 1 cup chopped dates
- 1/2 cup butter
- 3/4 cup sugar
- 2 eggs
- 1 tablespoon lemon juice
- 1 1/2 cups mashed bananas

Sift together flour, baking powder, salt and nutmeg. Add dates and toss lightly. Cream together butter and sugar; beat in eggs and lemon juice. Add dry ingredients alternately with mashed bananas. Beat until smooth after each addition. Turn into greased loaf pan. Bake in 350-degree, preheated oven for one hour, or until cake tester inserted in center comes out clean. Cool 10 minutes before removing from pan.

Honey-Banana Shake

- 1 quart milk
- 1/2 cup honey
- 1/4 teaspoon nutmeg
- 3 bananas, mashed

Combine all ingredients, blending well. Shake well before serving.

Franks Over Rice

- 12-ounce can tomato sauce
- 1 cup water
- 1 medium onion, finely chopped
- 1/2 cup chopped celery
- 2 tablespoons brown sugar
- 2 tablespoons prepared mustard
- 1 tablespoon Worcestershire sauce
- 2 pounds franks, sliced diagonally in 1-inch pieces
- 4 cups cooked rice

Combine all ingredients except wieners and rice in a saucepan. Cover saucepan and simmer slowly until onions and celery are tender, about 20 minutes. Add franks and continue cooking 15 minutes longer. Serve over hot, fluffy rice. Recipe makes about six servings.

Franklin's are favorites with young people from kindergarten age to teens. So, for an appealing luncheon at home, prepare this quickie recipe, Franks Over Rice. Serve with hot biscuits or toast, a glass of milk or fruit shake and a simple dessert. This menu is easy to fix and easy to eat, yet fills all the requirements for a nourishing meal.

The Editor Was Scandalous

through Frank Munsey's hands and on to Mrs. White-law Reid, who merged it with the Tribune.

James Gordon Bennett Sr., who founded the Herald and left it in the hands of his playboy son, was one of the giants of early 19th Century journalism despite the fact that in his rip-roaring years as a money-making publisher he deserted the idealism of his youth.

Young Press Lord

The son became a "press lord" at 27, after less than a year's experience as a newspaper executive. As his biographer puts it, "the born editor survived through drinking bouts, amorous escapades, sporting adventures, and brainless antics in high and low society, even though he could easily have abandoned his duties and given himself up to a life of total pleasure."

One of the "brainless antics" scandalized New York society and in the end caused him to flee the country to live out the rest of his life abroad.

In Paris, where he established himself, and all around Europe he continued to live as he pleased till death struck him down four days past his 77th birthday, on May 14, 1918. Van Allen Bradley

The Scandalous Mr. Bennett, by Richard O'Connor (Doubleday, $4.95).

Although its publisher was a hard-drinking, woman-chasing millionaire who ran his affairs by imperial cable from Paris, the New York Herald was the most influential paper in the United States at the turn of the century.

However scandalous may have been his private life—and indeed it was—James Gordon Bennett Jr. looked upon the journalistic profession as one of serious responsibility. He demanded the best reporters for his staff and got the best from them—or else.

Among the staffers he hired were Richard Harding Davis, whose coverage of the Spanish-American war was outstanding, Mark Twain and Stephen Crane.

Brash Upstart

When William Randolph Hearst moved into New York from California, Bennett thought this brash upstart "hardly equipped to publish a scratch sheet for race track followers." So in 1902, when Hearst tentatively cabled him a polite inquiry, "Is the Herald for sale?" Bennett exploded in wrath.

His reply is something of a newspaper classic: "Price of Herald three cents daily. Five cents Sunday, Bennett."

A few years later, when Hearst ran for governor of New York, Bennett was the major instrument in ruining his political aspirations. Because of this, Hearst set out to get revenge. He found it when he discovered that the bulk of the highly profitable "personals" in the Herald actually constituted a reliable guide to the city's houses of prostitution.

The resulting expose, which brought about Bennett's indictment for sending obscene matter through the mails, struck the Herald "a blow from which it would never recover," in time the paper passed

The Trial of Mrs. Abraham Lincoln. By Homer Croy. Duell, Sloan and Pearce. $3.95.

It is 1875; the scene is Chicago; the widow of a President of the United States is on trial; the issue in her sanity. This is the dramatic setting of Croy's latest excursion into Americana.

It is not an unknown chapter of history, but no one else to this reviewer's knowledge has done a better job of resurrecting the story and giving it an authentic treatment.

The story is starkly told. It is not embellished by author's comment or opinion, and it rarely strays from the courtroom—and yet the conclusion is inescapable that Mrs. Lincoln was in large measure railroaded into an asylum. There is no doubt she was eccentric, but whether she was insane in the modern meaning of the term is very doubtful. At the same time it is apparent that she was incapable of managing her affairs and it is possible that Robert Lincoln, the son who instigated the action, had no other recourse. We could wish that Croy had dealt more at length with Robert's agonizing dilemma.

Official records of the trial are lacking; all that is known is that they disappeared. Croy turned to accounts in Chicago newspapers and used these contemporary reports as his chief source. He has resorted liberally to a common device: dialogue that he believes "must have been said," a device full of pitfalls which he has not wholly sidestepped.

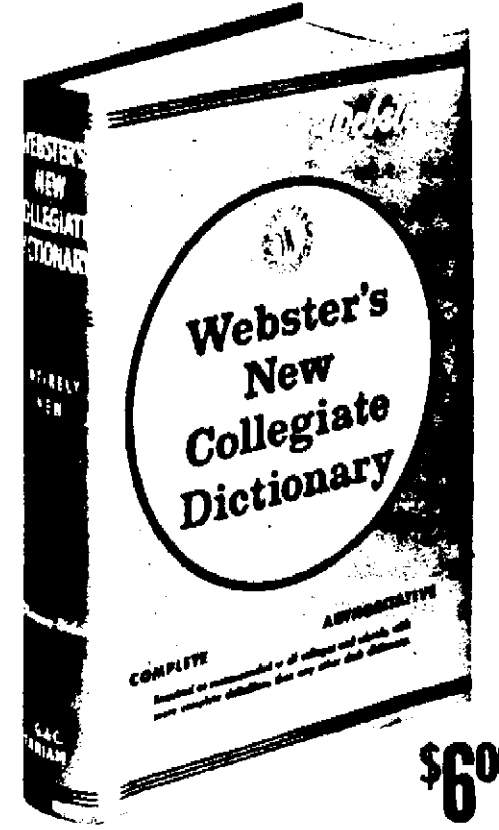

But in the main he has developed an account which has the ring of truth; an illuminating story which probably profits from the starkness of its telling.

Robert D. Price

Romans' Dogs Were Forebears Of Rottweiler

BY BUD LARIMER

No sir, this is not an over-weight Doberman. The Rottweiler came into Central Europe and Germany at the heels of the Roman Legions' herds of cattle when the Romans crossed the Alps in their surge of conquest. As Rome's might ebbed some of these early forebears remained and prospered in Southern Germany for 12 centuries, to become the Butcher's Dog of Rottweil, the modern Rottweiler.

A very robust animal, he had to be efficient as a driver and guard, or he would not eat. Courageous and of a stable temperament, he was also much in demand as a draft-dog. The lack of banks and abundance of thieves was met there locally by hanging the money bags from the collars of these early Rottweilers. He watched over the owner's home and herds with equal diligence.

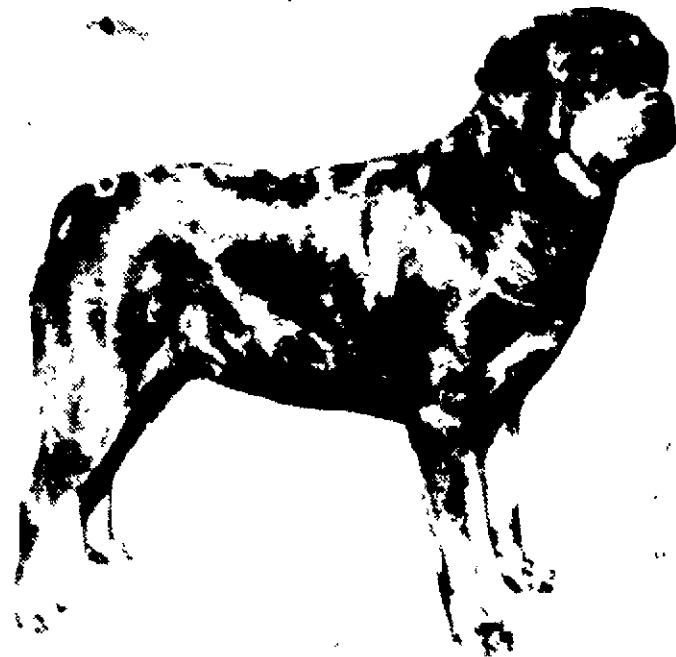

In the late 19th Century a law banning dogs as cattle drivers almost spelled the end for this sturdy fellow. Only a handful remained by 1905. Luckily, this period saw a great surge of interest in developing and improving several of the large guard and working breed. Along with German Shepherd, Doberman and a few others, the Rottweiler was saved from extinction. He soon distinguished himself in the police and military fields. The basic qualities of guard, stability and obedience make him an almost perfect guard and companion dog for anyone who desires a large breed and has suitable quarters to maintain him.

Black and Tan

Slightly resembling a stocky, uncropped Doberman, he too is black with rich tan markings and "points." The coat is short, flat, but quite a bit harsher than the Doberman. The tail is docked very short, but the ears are uncropped, and the head is quite broad with a relatively heavy muzzle. He stands from 22 to 27 inches at the shoulder and can weigh up to 100 pounds.

The breed has been officially recognized in the U.S.A. since 1935, but has never achieved wide popularity. This is a shame, for the breed offers much and deserves more attention. A group of deeply loyal supporters are working hard with the breed and deserve increasing recognition. As one more obstacle to be hurdled, we have heard recently that the old Buga-boo, Congenital Hip Displasia, has hit the breed hard. Many other breeds are also struggling to overcome it. We have long thirsted to own a Rottweiler and test the veracity of his varied claims by living with him. The shrieks of horror and protest from the four canines already living off me would be loftily ignored.

The hunting season will soon be with us, and the attendant risk of the dog lost or picked up by some pseudo-Nimrod too cheap, lazy or incompetent to buy and train a dog himself. Also ever with us is the character who will snatch an unwatched dog for the few dollars gained from resale to some resale kennel mill or laboratory. A well-organized and efficiently-executed tattooing or nose printing program will not eradicate these hazards, but it certainly should alleviate and reduce them. Think it over. We can stand the death we know of but, oh, deliver us from the agonizing imaginings of the unexplained loss, of horrors endured ad pain unending.

A dog of many talents, the Rottweiler was developed from cattle-driving dogs used by the Roman army. The dogs were left behind in the town of Rottweil, southern Germany, where they were bred and re-bred until the most desirable characteristics were developed into the high standard of today's dog.

Thoreau Has Charm Still

BY CLARA HUSSONG

Henry David Thoreau died 100 years ago last May 6. If "Walden" and his other writings are among your favorites, then you know that his words are as new and timely today as they were when they were written.

Perhaps they are even more timely now than when he was alive, as Odell Shepard says in his introduction to "The Heart of Thoreau's Journals," which he edited and which was published in 1961 by Dover Publications in a paperback edition selling for $1.45. Shepard says:

"He comes, moreover, as great men are wont to do, in a time of great need. With a fit audience, though few, he is likely to win a more thoughtful reading now that the superficial critics have had their say, now that individuals are so obviously withering among us, now that men are quite obviously enslaved by machines, now that we have floundered about as far as we can in the bogs of stupidity, greed, and cowering compliance that he warned us against long ago."

In "Walden" we can find the pithy epigrams which are quoted so much these days: "The mass of men lead lives of quiet desperation;" "It is never too late to give up our prejudices;" and "Most of the luxuries, and many of the so-called comforts of life, are not only not indispensable, but positive hindrances to the elevation of mankind."

His journals, which he kept from 1837 until his death, are more spontaneous, Shepard believes. "Walden" was, of course, a rewriting of the journal he kept from 1845 to 1847, the two years he lived in his little shack at the edge of Walden Pond near Concord, Mass.

Thoreau was both a philosopher and a naturalist, but he wasn't a scientist and never wanted to be one. When he listened to the chirp of crickets, for instance, he was not concerned with identifying them, studying their behavior, or establishing them in "their place in the wildlife community, as today's naturalists are exhorted to do.

Thoreau's concern was with the moment, "that is, with the sudden illumination which enabled him to see the fleeting instant as everlasting," as Shepard points out. In the following paragraph are some of his observations on crickets taken at random from his journal of May 22, 1854.

"First observe the creak of crickets. It suggests lateness, but only as we come to a knowledge of eternity after some acquaintance with it. So they chant, eternal, at the roots of the grass. Only in their saner moments do men hear the crickets."

He wrote often of the wood thrush in his journals, and in some of the passages Shepard has added a footnote stating that Thoreau may have meant the hermit thrush. In my book I have written an emphatic "No" to these footnotes. Those of you who remember the "Big Woods" near Kelly Lake in Oconto County (now cut down, alas), and who in its almost night shade listened to the beautiful notes of the wood thrush, will know that Thoreau named the right bird in this entry of July 5, 1852.

"The wood thrush's is no opera music, it is not so much the composition as the strain, the tone — cool bars of melody from the atmosphere of everlasting morning and evening. In the pewee's song there is some sultriness, but in the thrush's, though head at noon, there is the liquid coolness of things just drawn from the bottom of springs. Whenever a man hears it, he is young, and nature is in her spring. Wherever he hears it, it is a new world and a free country, and the gates of heaven are not shut against him."

Thoreau's writings are full of humor, as you may know. In the Shepard edition, one bit which made me laugh was his account (March 28, 1853), of refusing to read the life of Dr. Chalmers. His Aunt Maria then shouts to his deaf Aunt Jane: "Think of it! He stood half an hour today to hear the frogs croak, and he wouldn't read the life of Chalmers."

Long 'n' Short Lenses Secret Of Good Photos

BY TERRY McHALE

Post-Crescent News Service

The long and short of photography are illustrated in the two pictures at right. One was taken with a wide-angle lens, the other with a "long" lens. Neither picture would have worked out as well with the normal camera lens.

A wide-angle lens is just what the name implies. It has a wider range of "vision" than the usual lens, and will include more in the picture area. When you're working in tight quarters, the advantages of a wide-angle lens are obvious: you can move in closer than you could with a normal lens, and still include what you want in your picture.

The long lens, on the other hand, will include a smaller area in the picture. That's why it is so practical for head shots. You don't have to crowd your subject for a head-and-shoulder picture, so you won't get the distortion you would get if you moved in close enough to include the same area with a normal lens.

Extensive Equipment

More and more cameras—especially the 35mm type—are being constructed for use with lens other than just the normal one. And more and more lens are available for cameras, ranging from the extreme wide-angle to long telephoto models.

If you were to buy a camera with which other lenses can be used, what would be the best choice? There are several factors to consider.

Most of us are not in a position to go out and buy the whole works at once. In fact it may be some time, after we buy the camera itself, before we add to the equipment. If that is the case it would be best to get the camera equipped with the normal lens. With it you can do more than with only a wide-angle lens or only a telephoto lens.

If you are getting two lenses, a good choice might be a medium wide-angle and a medium telephoto. For a 35mm camera these might be a 35mm and a 90mm lens. These are the two lens I and many other camera fans use most often.

If you are a sports or nature picture fan, a longer telephoto lens might be the best bet—in the 200 or more millimeter length. Such lens should be used with tripods, as any bit of camera motion is going to be magnified in the finished picture.

Depth of Field

In addition to the bigger picture area, the wide-angle lens offers another advantage. At any lens opening it will have a greater depth of field than the normal lens.

The 90mm and 135mm objectives make excellent portrait lenses. You don't have to crowd your subject and you avoid distortion. With a shorter focal length lens you have to get quite close to fill the frame, and you may find that a nose appears much larger than it actually is—not very flattering.

The addition of extra lenses to your basic equipment opens new fields in photography. If you are a dedicated shutterbug, you'll find it worth the expense.

The Long and the Short —Two lenses, a wide-angle and a long lens, were used for these intimate portraits. The picture at left was made with a 90mm lens (using a 35mm camera) so that just the head and shoulders of the youngster could be included in the picture area, without having to crowd him. The shot above was made with a 35mm lens in order to get the whole picture in, although working at close range.

Duck, Hold-Up Bear Striking Resemblance

Bird-watchers at the bridge table have often noticed the resemblance between the duck and the hold-up. Sometimes you aim at one and find yourself executing the other. Perhaps we can earn the thanks of the Audubon Society by showing how you can tell the difference even through a thick haze of cigarette smoke.

Both plays begin the same way: you refuse to take a trick at your first opportunity. You let the opponents win an early trick or two in a suit even though you could win that trick if you wanted to.

There the resemblance ends. You hold up in order to destroy an opponent's entry to his long suit. You duck in order to preserve your entry to your own long suit.

Typical Hold-Up

You execute the typical hold-up play at a notrump contract. For example, suppose you hold A-x-x of spades, with two small spades in the dummy. The opening lead is a spade, and you refuse to take your ace.

You plan to hold up your ace of spades until one of the opponents plays his last spade. If the eight missing spades are divided 5-3, you plan to win your ace of spades on the third round of the suit.

By that time one of the opponents will be out of spades. If you have to give that opponent a trick, he will be unable to lead a spade. This simple device may shut out the long spades and thus give you time to win nine tricks.

You would not make your contract if you won the first spade trick. Whenever you gave up a trick, later on, the opponents could run the rest of the spades.

The typical duck may occur at any contract except a grand slam. For example, suppose you hold A-x-x-x of spades in the dummy, with three small spades in your own hand. You need three spade tricks for your contract, and dummy has no entries in hearts, diamonds or clubs.

If you win the ace of spades on the first round of the suit, you will never get back to dummy. Even if you can establish dummy's fourth and fifth spade you cannot win tricks with them. And much the same is true if you win the ace of spades on the second round of the suit.

The solution is to duck the first and second spade tricks. Let an opponent win those tricks.

When you lead your last spade to dummy's ace, one opponent will be out of spades and the other will be following with his last spade. Now dummy's last two spades are good, and you find yourself in dummy to cash your good tricks.

Both the hold-up and the duck are useful plays. When they come into conflict, the bird is likely to triumph.

The reason for this is very confusing. The hold-up is a defensive play; the duck, an offensive play. Offense is usually more powerful than defense at the bridge table. However, in some hands the defensive play is executed by the side that has taken the offensive, and vice versa. If you're getting dizzy, calm down and look at this hand:

South is on the offensive side since he is declarer. He must execute a hold-up; a defensive play, by refusing the first heart trick.

If South makes the mistake of winning the first heart, East will win the first diamond and lead his other heart to set up the rest of the suit. Then West will get in with the ace of diamonds to defeat the contract with the rest of the hearts.

Mind you, this defense may not be as easy as it sounds. South should lead a club to the king at the second trick in order to lead the first diamond from dummy. When dummy leads a low diamond East must step right up with the king of diamonds.

South can avoid defeat by refusing the first heart trick — provided that West continues hearts. If so, South wins the second heart with the king and leads a diamond. Now East cannot lead a heart and the threat evaporates.

Must Switch

As it happens, West is not blind. When South refuses the first heart trick West sees what is going on and realizes that his hearts will never come in.

West must switch to a suit that his partner may be able to develop. Spades are the best choice, so West switches to the ten of spades.

East must not win the first spade with the ace. If he takes the ace of spades and returns a spade, West will be unable to lead a spade when he wins a diamond trick. Then the spades will never come in.

Instead, East ducks the first spade, playing the nine as a signal of encouragement. This duck is an offensive play, but it is executed by a defender in this case.

Declarer must go after the diamonds upon being allowed to win a spade trick. West wins the first round of diamonds and leads his other spade.

Now East takes the ace of spades and gives up a spade, setting up his long suit. East gets in with the king of diamonds to defeat the contract with the rest of the spades.

MISS MIZZOU IS SINGING AT A NIGHT CLUB IN YOUR COUNTRY...

SHE KNEW YOU WERE LEAVING FOR THE AIR FORCE SCHOOL FOR LATIN-AMERICA

SO SHE GAVE YOU A MESSAGE FOR ME BECAUSE HER MAIL IS INTERCEPTED BY SOMEONE...

SHE WANTED ME TO RETURN TO YOUR COUNTRY AS A U.S.A.F. OFFICER ON A ROUTINE INSPECTION TOUR

SINCE WE ALREADY HAVE A MISSION WITH YOUR AIR FORCE UNDER THE MILITARY ASSISTANCE TREATY...

BUT WHY DID YOU BECOME INVOLVED IN ALL THIS?

AH, MI CORONEL, YOU KNOW SENORITA MIZZOU—AND YOU SHOULD REQUIRE TO ASK?

WELL YOU'RE IN LOVE WITH MISS MIZZOU...

BUT WHAT ABOUT ME? AREN'T YOU RISKING BRINGING A RIVAL BACK WITH YOU? ONE OF HER OLD FRIENDS?

...I HAVE THOUGHT OF THIS... BUT IF YOU HAVE NOT MARRIED TO HER BEFORE THEN YOU MISS EL BARCO-NO?

YOU'RE RIGHT! — BUT THEN HER REASON FOR CONTACTING ME MUST HAVE BEEN MILITARY RATHER THAN PERSONAL

ALAS, SIR, SENORITA MIZZOU TOLD ME NOTHING OF WHY SHE MAKE IT THE SUMMONS

HA! IT IS HER MUSIC! WE ARE BUT BARELY IN TIME TO HEAR SENORITA MIZZOU TO SING!

I DOWN IN OLD MISSOURI!

WHERE I HEARD THIS MELO-DEE

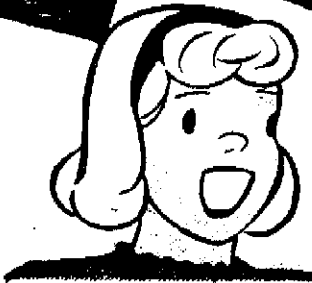

WOW! THERE'S BEEN A MISSOURI COMPROMISE!

MOM, WHY DO THEY KEEP ON CHANGING THE LENGTH OF SKIRTS?

ONE DAY THE HEM LINES ARE DOWN. THE NEXT DAY THEY'RE UP!

I GUESS IT'S CALLED MERCHANDISING.

TO BE FASHIONABLE, JILL... YOU HAVE TO GO ALONG WITH THE UPS AND DOWNS!

IF THE TREND IS UP...

YOU HAVE TO SHORTEN, OR BUY NEW DRESSES!

IF THE STYLE CALLS FOR A LOWER HEM LINE...

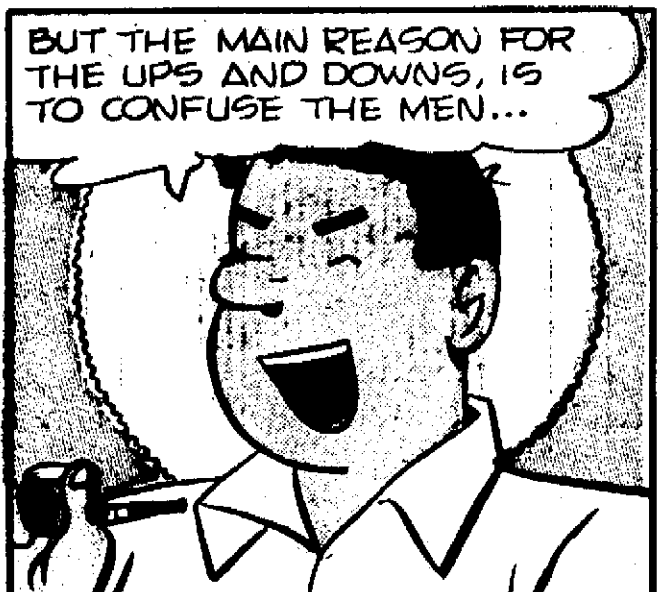

AND YOU DON'T HAVE ENOUGH MATERIAL TO LET OUT, YOU BUY A NEW OUTFIT!

WHEN IT'S DOWN, SOME WOMEN SHOW A LOT OF STYLE!

WHEN IT'S UP, SOME STYLES SHOW A LOT OF WOMAN!

BUT THE MAIN REASON FOR THE UPS AND DOWNS, IS TO CONFUSE THE MEN...

THEY DON'T KNOW WHERE TO START LOOKING!

THE SEÑOR WISHES TO SEE A DINNER MENU?

RIGHT... AND DO YOU MIND TELLING ME WHY A RESTAURANT CALLED "CAP'S CONCH SHELL" HAS SPANISH WAITERS?

MANY OF US WHO FLED FROM SAN CARLO WHEN THE DICTATOR TOOK OVER MUST WORK AT SUCH JOBS!.. I MYSELF WAS ONCE A CIVIL ENGINEER!

THOSE OF MY PEOPLE WHO CAN AFFORD TO DO SO, OFTEN EAT HERE! HENCE THE NATIVE DISHES ON THE MENU!

"PESCADO EN SALSA VERDE"... WHAT WOULD I GET IF I ORDERED THAT?

DELICIOUS BAKED FISH, SEÑOR.. IN PARSLEY SAUCE!

"SALSA VERDE" MEANS GREEN SAUCE!

THAT REMINDS ME- DID YOU EVER HEAR OF A PLACE CALLED.. "LA VENTANA VERDE".. "THE GREEN WINDOW?"

Let's EXPLORE Your Mind

TALKING TO YOURSELF IS DANGEROUS! TRUE ☐ FALSE ☐

False, say some psychologists. It is even necessary. All thinking, they claim, is really a form of talking to ourselves. In thinking, we say to ourselves: "Here are some things that might be true. Here are some reasons why this is more likely to be true and something else likely to be false. Therefore, we will accept this particular conclusion." Talking to yourself is merely thinking out loud.

SHOULD WE BE CONCERNED ABOUT THE IMPRESSION WE MAKE ON OTHERS? YES ☐ NO ☐

Yes, but not too much. One boy was so concerned with making a good impression upon a new girl that he tripped over himself and went sprawling. Speakers who try too hard to make a good impression may flop. Just do the best job you can -- and let the impressions take care of themselves.

PEOPLE ARE ALL ALIKE! RIGHT ☐ WRONG ☐

In some respects, they are. In other respects, they are like the others in their particular group. In still other respects, they are like no one else. Consequently, we can know a good deal about people, just because they are human beings. If we know the groups to which they belong, we can know even more. But many other things we must find out by carefully studying the individual himself.

Chicago Sto Heavy Run

CORNING, Iowa (AP)—The National Farmers Organization program of holding livestock from markets to force prices met mixed success on west markets today.

The Chicago Stockyards recorded the heaviest run of cattle in four months. Hog receipts were the largest in two months, the department of Agriculture said.

Kansas City also reported more cattle than last Tuesday the first full marketing day. The NFO announced its action.

Wirtz Meets With Strike Adversaries

Quick Settlement For North Western Walkout Unlikely

WASHINGTON (AP)—Representatives of the Chicago & North Western Railroad and its stock telegraphers met with Secretary of Labor W. W. Wirtz today in an attempt to settle a 12-day walkout.

It will be Wirtz's first step into direct negotiations since he was named by President Kennedy Aug. 30 to succeed Arthur Goldberg as head of the Labor Department.

In announcing the meeting today a Labor Department spokesman said it would be going far to presume a quick settlement is in the offing. He indicated there has been progress in the negotiations.

Both Sides Invited

Wirtz asked Ben Heinemann, board chairman of the railroad, and G. E. Leighty, president of the Order of Railroad Telegraphers, AFL-CIO, to attend the meeting.

Federal mediator Francis O'Neill Jr., who has been working with both Heinemann and Leighty, also will attend.

After talks with both sides yesterday O'Neill said in Chicago: "There is no imminent chance of a breakthrough, but things are moving a little bit."

The strike, which began Aug. 30 after efforts by Goldberg, Wirtz failed to head it off, sharply affected a nine-state western area served by C&NW, the nation's third largest railroad.

Grain and other foodstuffs have been piling up at rail sidings.

Balloons Will Hoist Telescope For TV Picture

NORWALK, Conn. (AP)—Scientists will float a telescope 100 feet above the earth early next year, and, by television, view the universe.

Twin balloons will hoist the scope next February or March when Mars is comparatively close to the earth.

The scope's 36-inch quartz lens will have sharper vision of Mars than the giant 200-inch scope atop Mt. Palomar, Calif.

At a distance of 1,000 miles will be able to view an object about six inches wide. At the same distance, it will be able to distinguish two spots of light 30 inches apart.

The entire apparatus, weighing more than six tons and dubbed Stratoscope II, will be launched from the new scientific balloon flight station at Palestine, Texas.

Milwaukee Boy Killed In Michigan Crash

IRONWOOD, Mich. (AP)—Schwei, 18, Milwaukee, was killed Sunday in a one-car accident about 15 miles north of here.

Authorities said a car in which Miss Schwei was riding went off a highway and struck a tree. Seriously injured were Dennis Younger, 21, Kimball, Wis., and Marvin Johnson, 20, Ironwood.
